Roosevelt Asks Kelly To Cut D. C. Traffic Toll

Says Problem Must Be Solved; Police Head to Get Advice From N. Y. Chief

Looking Ahead

FOUR RECOMMENDATIONS are made by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to counteract traffic problem expected when War Department's 20,000-employe building is occupied next year. Story on Page 17.

THE DISTRICT'S sixty-first traffic death of the year occurs on the heels of President Roosevelt's request. Horace Johnson, 59, of 2144 L Street Northwest, was fatally hurt when a car struck him as he crossed a street. Story on Page 17.

Trouble Unique

While admitting the Capital presents unique traffic problems, President Roosevelt yesterday made it known he wants something done to solve them.

Just before leaving for Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt conferred for nearly 20 minutes with Acting Police Chief Edward J. Kelly on ways and means to relieve the problem.

His talk with Kelly was followed last night by a statement from the District Commissioners, urging "every man, woman and child" to recognize the seriousness of the District's "ever increasing accident toll."

Kelly to Seek Advice

President Roosevelt said Kelly was very anxious to improve Washington's traffic situation and that the problem of moving the city's mass of vehicles in safety was the only matter discussed during their conversation.

The President said he was glad to learn that Kelly was a friend of Lewis J. Valentine, New York's police commissioner, and that Kelly was going to talk to Valentine and other police chiefs about District traffic-control problems.

There is no other city in the country which has the traffic troubles of Washington, the President said, adding that they are partly due to the heavy rush hours caused by the great number of Government employes and partly to the necessity of improving standards of driving.

Kelly last night said he intended to "follow through" on suggestions presented by the President, but would announce no definite plans until he had talked with the Commissioners.

Fatalities Up This Year

The Commissioners, in their statement following the Presidential conference with Kelly, pointed to the city's 60 traffic fatalities this year as against 50 for the same time last year and said safety efforts should continue not only for the immediate good of the community but in the interest of serving na-

8 Airmen Killed, 4 in Maneuvers

Eight Army fliers were killed yesterday, in a series of crashes. Flying Cadet Donald S. Bierer, who graduated last June from the University of Maryland, was among those killed.

Four of the victims were participating in the Army maneuvers in Louisiana.

The maneuvers were temporarily halted yesterday after Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear's Second Army had suffered a rout in its efforts to invade territory held by the Third Army.

'Greatest Necessity'

Baruch Calls for 'Czar' to Put Ceilings on All Prices, Wages

AN ASSURING HAND is given to Leon Henderson (right) by Bernard M. Baruch at yesterday's price-control hearing

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Bernard M. Baruch, mobilizer of American industry in the first World War, yesterday told the House Banking and Currency Committee that price control legislation is "the greatest single necessity of our present crisis."

He criticized the Administration's pending price-control bill as a "piecemeal" measure and urged prompt passage of a bill giving a single Federal official power to put a ceiling on all prices, including farm products up to parity levels, on rents and on wages.

Without such legislation, he said, the country faces "a terrific rise in prices" and "terrible dislocation."

In four hours of testimony, closely documented with illustrations from America's experience in the last war, the 71-year-old financier pictured price control as essential for "the winning of the war and the winning of the peace."

Baruch insisted that the price-regulating power should be given to one man, rather than a board, in order to avoid "interminable delays."

He told the committee he con-

Hospitals Congested

Receive Mr. Stork at Home, Ruhland Urges D. C. Women

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, yesterday suggested that women "whenever possible" —bear their babies at home to relieve maternity ward congestion in Washington hospitals.

Certain hospitals, said Dr. Ruhland, are now "booked" for more maternity cases than they can accommodate. He added that hospitals, due to the rapid growth of the city, are "all pretty well filled up in all departments. Congestion of maternity cases, it was pointed out, has been aggravated by the closing of the maternity ward and nursery at Sibley Hospital.

A a check of Washington hospitals receiving maternity cases last night showed there was virtually not a single bed available. Columbia Hospital reported that it normally has 75 beds in its maternity department but all were occupied; Garfield Hospital's 93 beds were full, as were the following: Gallinger, with 54; George Washington, 24; Providence, 50; Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, 30; Doctors, with 50 beds, "running to capacity;" Freedmen's, 38 of 48 beds occupied.

Public attention was called to the situation last Monday, when Mrs. Horace Brown gave birth to a baby girl in her home, 488 K Street Northwest, after she and her husband had made an unsuccessful tour of the city's hospitals. The infant had a faint mark resembling the letter "V" on her forehead, so Mrs. Brown named her Victoria. Dr. Ruhland's suggestion followed a checkup on the conditions.

Gallinger Hospital, Dr. Ruhland said, has been caring for a daily average patient load of 1130. While the hospital has a "paper" capacity of 1400 beds, its actual capacity is "several hundred" less because of the number of beds set aside for acute cases of communicable diseases.

"Private hospitals," Dr. Ruhland added, customarily maintain a bed reserve of about 20 per cent of capacity to care for emergency cases. Therefore, he explained, a private hospital is considered to be crowded if occupancy runs beyond 80 per cent. Gallinger, because it is a municipal institution, is unable to operate with as high a bed reserve.

VICTORIA

Dr. Ruhland's suggestion that women, if possible, have their babies at home, as did their mothers, "is not new or revolutionary," the health officer said.

"We have long recommended this procedure wherever possible in public welfare cases," he observed.

Dr. Ruhland emphasized that the plan was "merely a suggestion," and that his department was not attempting to set a policy for

House Funds Chief Promises Study of Blue Plains Needs

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

During its consideration of multi-billion-dollar lend-lease aid to Britain, the House Deficiency Appropriations Subcommittee can take time to consider a request from the District Commissioners for funds to construct a new home for the Aged and Infirm, Representative Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, Appropriations Committee chairman, declared last night.

The District Commissioners yesterday climaxed two days of official protest over the "horrors" of the Blue Plains institution by announcing they would ask Congress for a deficiency appropriation to make money "available immediately" for a new home.

The subcommittee will start hearings on the lend-lease program Tuesday, but, said Cannon, will remain in session for two weeks to consider an accumulation of Federal deficiency estimates, during which time it will be possible to give attention to Blue Plains.

"If this (Blue Plains estimate) should be received in time, it will be considered along with other matters," stated Cannon who has taken charge of the subcommittee.

"I believe we all agree that we should have adequate facilities at Blue Plains," he added, "and if conditions warrant, the action should be prompt."

Concluding, after inspection of the institution Wednesday, that Blue Plains is "beyond rehabilitation," the Commissioners decided to ask Congress for a new home.

12 British Warships In U. S. Yards

Navy Eases Curb On News of Repairs; Battleship and Four Cruisers Included

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Knox yesterday disclosed that more than 12 British warships were in American ports for repairs, refitting or other purposes.

One battleship, two aircraft carriers, four cruisers, a merchant cruiser, a submarine, a mine-sweeper and two corvettes were listed as being in various United States shipyards and harbors.

It was indicated that other British men-o'-war are undergoing repairs here but that their type and whereabouts were withheld for "security" reasons.

British Approved Publicity

The announcement partially lifted the veil of secrecy which has surrounded the repair of English warcraft in American yards—one of the most important phases of the aid-the-democracies program.

Knox said that as a result of an agreement reached with British authorities it was now permissible for American newspapers to publish limited information as to British vessels in American shipyards and harbors. Heretofore, under a voluntary censorship arrangement, most United States newspapers have not published such information.

Later, it was indicated, the Navy will announce a list of warships repaired in American yards which have already returned to the British service. From time to time, the presence of other such craft in American waters will be announced, whenever such information can be disclosed without revealing important information to Germany.

Up To Officers Now

Photographs of the ships in dry-dock, and further publicity about each craft, will be permitted within the discretion of its commanding officer, it was said.

The Navy identified the British craft in American ports as follows:

The battleship Warspite, at Bremerton, Wash.

Cruisers Delhi and Dido, at Brooklyn.

Cruisers Orion and Liverpool, at Mare Island, Calif.

Converted merchant cruiser Asturias, at Newport News, Va.

Submarine Pandora, at Portsmouth, N. H.

Minesweeper Menestheus, at Baltimore.

Corvettes Nasturtium and Primrose, at Charleston, S. C.

Secretary Knox said that it had been agreed with the British that the "demands of security" can be met and a "reasonable degree of information released to the public" if each ship sent here be considered separately and all releases be subject to the following specific restrictions:

"(a) That mention of a ship's presence in any port will be withheld until that information is released by the Navy Department.

District to Join In Big Air Raid 'Dress Rehearsal'

A "dress rehearsal" of precautions against air raids on Washington has been ordered for early October, the Commissioners announced yesterday.

The Capital will join cities along the Eastern seaboard from North Carolina to New York in defending itself against a pretended attack by enemy planes.

The District's participation will be limited. There will be no blackout or siren warnings of approaching aircraft, the Commissioners said, although this type of test is planned for smaller communities.

Commissioner John Russell Young said the city heads would appoint a corp of "air wardens," after complete details of the program are announced.

Convoy Claimed Shattered Makes Port

London, Sept. 19 (1:35).—Emerging from a sea battle which raged "for many days and nights over hundreds of miles of ocean," ships of a huge British convoy which the Germans said was shattered, now are streaming into port, an official statement said tonight.

German claims that at least 22 ships out of the big convoy were sunk last week were termed "vastly exaggerated," and the British said that most of the convoy was rescued from a "pack of submarines" by a big British surface and air attack.

Arctic Success

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), Sept. 20. The Red army today was reported fighting desperately to stem a German tide sweeping through the Ukraine and Russia admitted the troops were hard pressed at the ancient Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

The bitter fighting extending from the Arctic to the Black Sea was "particularly fierce at Kiev," was all the Soviet communique told of the titantic struggle.

Report Arctic Success

In the Far North, near the Arctic port of Murmansk, the communique said "heavy losses" were inflicted "on three German SS battalions (Hitler's elite guard) and two Alpine chasseurs regiments."

The 136th and 137th Alpine regiments suffered 3000 casualties, including 1000 dead, the communique said and identified the SS battalions as the "Fuehrer," "German," and "Death."

Recapitulated German air losses for Tuesday and Wednesday were put at 187, with 32 Red aircraft destroyed.

Russian dispatches pictured the conflict for Leningrad still raging indecisively, with the Red army position improving somewhat at besieged Odessa.

Situation Grave at Kiev

Moscow itself reported an air-raid alarm in force from 11:40 p. m. Friday night until 2:20 o'clock this morning. It was the first since September 9.

But it was at Kiev that the position of the Russian forces was gravest. A communique admitted that German shock troops had penetrated to one gate of that historic capital of the Ukraine, but said the fighting was roaring unchecked.

As the Germans pressed farther eastward, and nearer to the vast territories inhabited by Mohammedans, the chief of the Moslem religion in the Soviet Union called upon all Islam to rise up against "the devastation of fascism."

There are about 235 million Mohammedans in the world, unnumbered millions of them living in the Soviet districts of the Crimea, the Urals, the Caucasus, and in Asiatic Russia.

The Russian communique said the Germans had lost 15,000 men in a vain attempt to seize Oesel Island, off the Estonian coast.

S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar for foreign affairs, told a press conference that heavy Rumanian losses had eased the pressure on Odessa, but said the Germans apparently had sent in reinforcements.

Builders Protest Price Ceiling On Priorities

Almost unanimous protest came yesterday from Washington builders to limitations in Priorities Director Donald Nelson's plan for granting priority on materials for privately financed housing units.

Nelson placed a $8000 ceiling on the cost of residences built for sale under the plan, which becomes effective Monday.

Real estate men and builders declared the limitation would work a hardship in Washington, where land costs more than elsewhere.

In addition, they said, many defense workers here are in high salary brackets and can afford higher priced homes.

Dangerous Quest

By Pat McGrady
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 19.—Middle-aged Edmund C. Heine's quest for American aviation information was translated by the Government late today into an alleged scheme to transmit to Germany important technical intelligence on prized developments in the aircraft industry.

Heine, a former $30,000-a-year plant manager for the Ford Motor Co., raised no objection to testimony of a dozen witnesses regarding his travels and his correspondence asking information on aviation subjects. His counsel, George Gordon Battle, developed these aspects of the case with a few friendly questions in each cross-examination.

But when two lengthy technical articles were offered, signed "Heinrich"—which the indictment cites as one of Heine's several aliases—Battle was on his feet protesting vigorously.

He contended that the Government had not shown the connection between Heine's curiosity and the

Neutrality Act Move Near, Connally Says

Expects an Effort To Change Law as Next 'Logical Step'

By Turner Catledge

With the new $6,985,000,000 lease-lend appropriation in the legislative mill and due for early consideration by Congress, Administration leaders began increasing their attention yesterday on another important step to implement President Roosevelt's foreign policy—repeal or substantial modification of the remnants of the neutrality law.

That a drive for repealing what is left of the act, and returning American ships to trade in full pursuance of the doctrine of freedom of the seas, is gaining rapid headway was revealed by Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He expressed the belief that the question would come up for a test in the near future.

"The matter of repeal or modification of the Neutrality Act will be given consideration in the light of events in the very near future," Senator Connally said.

Legion's Action Gratifying

"I am much gratified at the resolutions adopted by the national convention of the American Legion. They expressed full agreement with the foreign policy of the Administration and Congress. In fact, they are a little in advance of the Administration and Congress as they advocate repeal of the Neutrality Act."

The Foreign Relations chairman indicated that he personally would assume charge of the neutrality repeal drive in the Senate when he returns to Washington again after a few days.

Other Congressional sources said they expected the Administration to

Firing Squads In Paris Kill 8 Communists

6 Tried, Condemned And Executed All Within a Few Hours

By Ralph Heinzen

Vichy, Sept. 19.—Eight Communists accused of terrorism and anti-German "manifestations" were executed in Paris today amid a new outbreak of sabotage in which ten men wrecked several German army cars in a Paris garage and escaped.

Six of the alleged Communists, charged with terrorism, were sentenced to death in Paris this afternoon and immediately executed.

Earlier, German military authorities in Paris had announced the execution of two other Communists for participating in anti-German "manifestations."

The latest executions raised to 23 the number of Communists shot by the Germans in the past month in a determined drive to stamp out terrorism and sabotage in occupied France.

Grain Stores Destroyed

Meantime, sabotage was reported to have spread into rural areas with the destruction of five barns filled with grain.

The announcement that two men had been executed for anti-German "manifestations" indicated they were shot as participants in anti-Nazi demonstrations rather than as hostages for terrorist attacks on German soldiers or sabotage.

(In the past month, the Germans have announced the execution of 15 hostages, all alleged Communists.)

A German watchman surprised ten men in the act of sabotaging German army automobiles in a garage, requisitioned by the Germans, on Boulevard Gouvion-Saint Cyr near the Porte Champerret in Paris.

Industry and Labor Restrict Production, Arnold Charges

By the Associated Press

Yosemite, Calif., Sept. 19.—Organized basic industries have been restricting defense production in order to avoid prospective overproduction after the war, Thurman Arnold, Federal anti-trust enforcement officer, told the California Bar Association today.

For the past 10 months, Arnold asserted, defense work has been hampered by powerful private groups, including "a few strategically located labor unions," working for their own selfish motives.

The industrial groups fear the expansion of production, he said, "because it may destroy their domination of industry after the war. * * * They have concealed shortages by over optimistic predictions of supplies."

"The labor union restrictions, which have nothing to do with wages or conditions of labor, are today costing the American consumer over one billion dollars a year," Arnold declared. "The cost is increasing.

"I am not talking about wages. I am talking about holdups and bottlenecks in housing and in food, and in fuel and in transportation. They are created by powerful labor unions which claim the legal right to institute strikes and boycotts for the following illegitimate objectives:

"To enforce price fixing agreements and free channels of distribution; to restrict the use of labor saving devices; to keep more efficient materials off the market which might interfere with static jobs; to

Germans Report Troops 80 Miles From Kharkov, Key To Vital Donets Basin

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 19.—The German grand offensive, smashing with terrific momentum through broken Russian resistance in the Ukraine, has occupied the provincial capital, Kiev; reached and overrun Poltava, 200 miles to the east, and is striking toward Kharkov, 80 miles beyond in the heart of the industrial Donets Basin, the high command announced in a triumphant chain of bulletins today and tonight.

This series of spectacular successes, which by German accounts appeared to lay the greatest surviving Soviet war plants in the south open to imminent peril, was reported from Adolf Hitler's eastern headquarters, which also put total German casualties to the end of August at 402,865, against Russian losses of more than 3,600,000 to date.

[In a later dispatch the United Press reported that early this morning a jubilant German spokesman predicted the quick collapse of the entire central Russian defense front, and International News Service said it was understood in the German capital that 200,000 of some 400,000 troops believed caught in a vise east of Kiev had been eliminated from the battle.]

Kiev, a city of 846,293, the third largest in the Soviet Union and next in importance to Moscow and Leningrad of the three top German objectives, fell during the morning, it was stated, after its last strong fortifications on the west bank of the Dnieper River had been smashed by violent Nazi charges.

Four Armies Encircled

All this was accompanied, Hitler's headquarters declared, by the encirclement of four Red armies about 125 miles to the east of Kiev—armies of unstated size (but presumably numbering as many as 500,000 men) which were being steadily cut to pieces.

Poltava, a railway city of 88,000, where Peter the Great defeated Charles XII of Sweden more than two centuries ago, was the furthermost point specifically reported reached in an advance which the Germans said was rolling uninterruptedly over every desperate effort to hold the dissolving Red lines. It fell to the army of Field Marshal Gerd von Runstedt, which was declared to have crossed the lower Dnieper on a 75-mile wide front in the vicinity of Kremenchug for a subsequent junction east of Kiev with the forces of General Field Marshal Fedor von Bock. The latter turned to the south after forcing the Desna River far above Kiev.

Don Valley Ahead

Kharkov, the next apparent major objective, is the greatest city in the basin of the Donets River beyond which—with little or no natural obstacle interposing—lies the rich valley of the Don.

Mexico City, Sept. 19 (AP).—German and Italian nationals are being advised officially to quit Mexico, authorized circles said tonight.

This was learned after an announcement that President Avila Camacho had asked congress to adopt immediately a bill providing severe new penalties for fifth column activities in Mexico.

Several hundred Germans and Italians, along with other Europeans, were said to have been advised that their tourist permits had expired, or that, when they did expire they would not be renewed.

Baruch for 1-Man Control of Prices

siders Leon Henderson, present price administrator, "the best qualified person for the job," adding that the position requires "a man of courage and vision."

When a committee pointed out that Britain's price control machinery is directed by a board, the witness said he did not "think much of the English conduct of the war" in the economic field. He did not amplify the statement beyond a comment that the British have had "a lot of trouble" in price regulation.

Baruch, calling for "stabilization of the entire price structure," recommended that ceilings for prices, rents and wages be set at the level reached on some given day before the heavy volume of defense spending had begun to force up prices.

Asked to suggest a date, he said, "Take one as far back as you think you can get away with." He later advised a date "early in 1941."

The Administration - sponsored bill now before the Banking and Currency Committee provides for imposing of ceilings only on such commodity prices as the President declares to be approaching a dangerous level. It does not provide for ceilings on wages.

Baruch attacked this type of regulation as "piecemeal price fixing."

"As a matter of basic principle," he declared, "a price-control law should make no exception. All citizens should be treated alike as part of one nation joined in a great emergency and every segment of our economy, agriculture, labor and business, should be treated as parts of a single, living, sensitive organism."

One Level for All

He said "prices, rents, wages, commission fees, interest rates—in short the price of every item of commerce or service" should not be permitted to rise above the level of the selected "normal" date but could fluctuate below that figure.

"A competent tribunal would then adjust any of these maximum prices, upward or downward, whether to cure incidental injustice or undue hardship or to increase production," he added.

Asked whether wage stabilization would require suppression of strikes, Baruch said he believed any prohibition of strikes in industries working for profit would violate the Constitutional ban on "involuntary servitude."

Stabilization of living costs, he added, would remove one of the chief causes of strikes.

Emphasizes Coordination

The witness emphasized the importance of coordinating price control with the entire defense effort, stating that "it must be intimately tied up and move in step with all other war controls, wage and rent control, priorities, conservation, commandeering, war trade, war finance and so forth."

He referred to a magazine article written by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, under the title, "Price Control Is Not Enough." Baruch called the title "misleading" and told the committee:

"If there were no ladies present, I would say who in hell ever said it was enough."

Baruch said the price regulation bill before the committee would not stop inflation and, at best, could only "lessen the degree of inflation that we will have."

He insisted that price-control legislation should not permit the price of farm products to rise above "parity," the formula based on the purchasing power derived from sale of agricultural products in 1909-14.

The pending bill would permit farm prices to rise to 110 per cent of parity.

Inviting a Binge

Legislators supporting this provision, Baruch said, "are inviting the farmer to go on another binge which will leave him with the same terrible hangover he suffered after the last war."

In apparent reply to criticism of Henderson in some Congressional circles, Baruch went out of his way to praise the New Deal economist.

"I know I wouldn't want Brother Henderson's job," he observed. "If I had it, I would go jump off a dock with a couple of anchors."

Baruch, in responding to questions from committee members, repeatedly pointed out that he did not "like" price regulation and that any legislation in that field carried certain dangers.

"We're going to have to pay a terrible price for all this, any way you look at it," he said.

When Representative Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, objected to the lack of specified price-fixing "standards" in the bill before the committee, asserting that the legislation would confront businessmen with "a great breach of uncertainty that you could drive a truck through," Baruch replied:

"There are a great many uncertainties in war."

Calls for Full Mobilization

Discussing the defense effort as a whole, Baruch called for a "full mobilization" which would transform American industry "from a highly competitive economy to a practically single unitary system under which all producers will cooperate, sharing trade secrets, pooling patents, resources and facilities."

He urged "regional organization to discover untapped sources of supply and plants which can be converted to defense needs," with special attention to subcontracts for small firms. Simplification of patterns in civilian consumption commodities and extensive use of substitute materials is also essential, he stated.

"Under conditions of war production there is no such thing as a competitive price," he declared. "There is more business than all the producers in the Nation can possibly handle."

"Some persons have said they fear price control might mean the end of our free economy," Baruch continued. "The demands of total defense already have suspended our competitive economy. The question to be answered is: Will our industrial mobilization prove effective? If it is not, we may lose the chance ever to return to a free economic society."

The witness reminded the committee that the country for years has "preached" about taking the profit out of war and said that price control is one of the most effective instruments for "making good that promise."

"Profits must be controlled at their source, which is rising, runaway prices," he asserted.

Price control is essential "if Government salaries and appropriations are to have any meaning," he said, pointing to the hundreds of thousands of Federal, State and local employes, the war veterans and other recipients of fixed incomes. If prices "run wild," these persons must either suffer hardship or demand increased payments which will increase governmental expense.

Rising prices of materials going into arms production means a constantly diminishing return for defense appropriations, he pointed out. He estimated that price stabilization could bring about a 20 per cent saving on appropriations now outstanding.

For Post-War Controls

Baruch stressed the importance of price controls in the period immediately after the war comes to an end. If America has a high price structure, it would be undersold in the world market by nations "which have learned to do without," he said. With a low price level, he said, "America can hold her own and demand as a price for economic collaboration just terms of peace."

"If England falls and we be left to carry on against German domination," he added, "in the inescapable trade war that would follow, the higher our price structure, the weaker we would be."

Concentration of great power in the hands of the Executive is inevitable in time of war or national emergency, he said, urging that the President be given control of "all our economic forces."

Baruch summed up his arguments for price legislation in these words:

"The control of prices is essential for the sucessful conduct of our national defense, for avoiding social and economic aftermaths of war, for taking the profits out of war, for the maintenance of morale, the stoppage of inflation and the placing of America in the dominant place at the peace table. With such great stakes we cannot afford an ineffective program of price control."

The committee will resume hearings at 10:30 a. m. Monday. Henderson will be the witness.

any type of maternity cases.

Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee, announced yesterday that his investigation of conditions in the maternity ward and nursery at Sibley Hospital would include all hospitals. In making the announcement following an hour-long closed conference with hospital authorities, Randolph emphasized that he had no intention of singling out one institution for inquiry.

The conference was the result of Randolph's request for information relating to a recent outbreak of infant dysentery at Sibley. Attending it were Paul B. Cromelin, general counsel and chairman of the board of trustees, and Dr. John M. Orem, hospital superintendent.

Randolph said Cromelin and Dr. Orem promised full cooperation in the inquiry and would furnish complete data.

Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, the Health Department's director of maternal and infant welfare, meanwhile started an investigation of cases of infant dysentery that have been called to the attention of the District Committee since Randolph launched his inquiry last Monday. Dr. Oppenheimer went over the cases with committee attaches who, in several instances, have made affidavits of statements of complainants.

but have yet to arrive at an accurate estimate of the cost. A figure of approximately $800,000 was mentioned earlier in the week, but yesterday the city heads said this phase of the problem would have to be given further study.

The Commissioners' announcement quickly followed the recommendation of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, District Committee chairman, that Congress be asked for funds for a new home at once. Pending construction of a new home, McCarran, in a letter to the Commissioners yesterday, cited nine steps which he urged be taken to make Blue Plains habitable.

Some Accepted

Some of the Senator's recommendations will be carried out immediately, the Commissioners said. John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, declared that 50 WPA workers will be made available without delay and will be put to work cleaning up the home "from top to bottom."

At the same time, Young said, the Police Department has been directed to make "immediately available" its accumulation of unused clothing, including overcoats, that might be suitable for the institution's 580 inmates. In looking over police property, Young said, he had found a "great pile" of clothing.

Although convinced that the old home, refuge for the indigent aged since 1903, cannot possibly be converted into decent living quarters, the Commissioners directed Nathan C. Wyeth, the municipal architect, to see what might be done structurally to improve the institution in case Congress should fail to vote funds for a new building.

McCarran's letter to the commissioners was written after Renah F. Camalier, District Committee counsel, had followed up their tour of the home with an inspection of his own. From Camalier's observations, McCarran stated he "was convinced that remedial steps should be taken without delay."

Foresees Dire Results

Suggestions for improvements, he added, "are made in the spirit of a desire to be helpful to the Commissioners in facing and solving this problem, in the spirit of a desire to serve the people of the District of Columbia in ridding the city of such an abominable situation . . ."

"In my opinion," McCarran continued, "there is not a member of the Senate or of the House of Representatives who would not look with favor upon a request for necessary funds to correct the appalling situation at Blue Plains, and to prevent possible dire results which might occur should these conditions continue."

prevent self-employment; to make arbitrary classifications of jobs which retard the efficient use of labor; to tie up huge industries in the struggle to determine which of two unions will dominate the field."

Arnold said these corporations and organizations were not unpatriotic, but had "trained themselves to resist the development of new enterprise."

"They are obsessed with the idea that overproduction will interfere with their future domination," he said. "While they are willing to expand their own war production, they do not want others to expand, and they reserve the right to dictate to civilian consumers what they can buy and the prices which they can pay. . . . England, because of this set of ideas, wasted all the precious months before the fall of France."

The antitrust official charged that during the past year "the leaders of our basic industries have been demanding that priorities be used, not to expand production, but as an excuse not to expand it."

Arnold contended that the awarding of huge defense contracts to a relatively few large industrial organizations was threatening to cause the disbandment of thousands of small businesses.

"Whether they ever can come to life again is doubtful," he added. "The loss to national defense is irreparable."

Arnold said the imposition of price control would not work effectively if costs were raised by artificial restrictions. He declared that the building industry was enmeshed by these, and that monopoly and private pools were taking advantage of a "golden opportunity" to raise prices of food in large cities.

The battleship Warspite is a 35,000-ton veteran of World War I, which was extensively rebuilt in the '20s and again in 1934. A sister ship of the Malaya, Valiant and Queen Elizabeth, it carries eight 15-inch guns, eight 6-inch guns, eight 4-inch antiaircraft guns and four planes. Its normal complement is 1100 men and it has a speed of 24 knots.

Both the Illustrious and Formidable were completed in 1940. Sister ships of 23,000 tons, they are 753 feet long and carry 16 4.5-inch guns. Each has a crew of 1600 men and a speed of "over 30 knots." The number of planes on the carriers has not been disclosed, but is probably about 75 each.

The cruiser Orion, completed in 1934, is a sister ship of the Ajax and Achilles, which helped whip the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee nearly two years ago. Displacing 7250 tons, it is 554 feet long, carries 2 planes and is armed with 8 6-inch guns, 8 4-inch antiaircraft guns and torpedo tubes. Its speed is 32½ knots.

The Liverpool, completed in 1938, displaces 9100 tons and carries 12 6-inch guns, 8 4-inch antiaircraft guns, a 3.7-inch howitzer, 6 torpedo tubes and 3 planes. It makes 32 knots, is 591 feet long and has a crew of 700.

The Dido is a cruiser of 5450 tons carrying 10 5.25-inch guns, 6 torpedo tubes and an airplane. Completed last year, it has a listed speed of 33 knots and is 506 feet in length.

"Escape King" Caught

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Sept. 19 (AP).—Within the last 24 hours, the Germans claim to have broken up three separate bands of "gangsters," arresting 11 persons, including an Apache called the "escape king" because he has eluded nine condemnations to date.

French authorities in Paris sentenced the elderly valet of former President Albert Lebrun to a month in jail for "insulting remarks" about Marshal Petain, the chief of state.

For three days, beginning tonight, a curfew goes into effect in the Seine Department from 9 p. m. to 5 a. m. Between these hours all traffic is prohibited. Theaters, restaurants and other public places of amusement must close at 8 p. m. Violators of the regulations will, themselves, be arrested and held as hostages.

In the unoccupied zone the government purged Henry Chavin, secretary general of police and the army fired nine generals, one of them a would-be leader of the anti-Soviet expeditionary force, as Free Masons.

The ousted generals were Maj. Gen. Joseph Hassler, once announced but never confirmed as head of an anti-Russian volunteer corps; Brig. Gens. Constant Lamiabel, Paul Aeuser, Andre Hillairet and Francois Hupel and four generals from noncombatant services.

Dutch Get Warning

Amsterdam, Sept. 19 (AP).—The civil supreme court at The Hague imposed sentences ranging up to 12 years yesterday upon 22 Amsterdam citizens accused of instigating strikes last February and March.

The Dutch were warned that persons charged with Communist activity after last June 22—the day the Russo-German war started—would be subject to capital punishment.

Cool Weekend Forecast; After That—Warmer

A cool weekend was forecast for Washington by the Weather Bureau yesterday, when the thermometer failed to rise above 76 degrees.

The mercury is expected to remain below 60 today and tomorrow.

High temperatures will return early next week, with light showers Tuesday or Wednesday, acording to the bureau's long-range forecast.

details which the Government said were passed on to a spy ring for transmission to Germany.

Federal Judge Mortimer L. Byers, presiding at the trial of Heine and 15 others charged with espionage conspiracy, admitted the papers subject to the Government's establishing Heine's authorship.

Boyd Aldrich, a Washington aviation mechanics instructor, said that he responded to an advertisement Heine had placed in a trade magazine asking for aviation instruction.

"Heine told me he was anxious to be able to talk intelligently about aviation," testified Aldrich. "He mentioned his boy in Germany and said he himself knew so little about aviation he couldn't even talk with his boy about a model airplane.

"I showed him around the Washington airport, and took him into the cabin of an American Airlines plane there. He asked me about supercharging on stratoplanes, and about condensers and auxiliary motors.

Sought Plants' Location

"He wanted the location of all aircraft plants in the country. How many employes they had, the types of military and commercial planes produced in each and information like that."

"He paid me $20," said Aldrich, now a civilian employe at the Naval Air Station in Jacksonville, Fla.

[Boyd Aldrich is well-known in Washington aviation circles, having been employed at the Bureau of Standards as an aviation engine mechanic from 1934 until about two years ago. At nights, he served as instructor in aviation mechanics at the Washington Aviation School, 140 Q Street Northeast, where he is still on the pay roll although he left Washington last December to take a job at the Norfolk, Va., Naval Base. Later he transferred to the Naval Base at Jacksonville, Fla. Before coming to Washington, he was an aviation mechanic in the Navy.—Editor's note.]

William G. Sebold, who said he was assigned to espionage by the German Gestapo and then turned his commission over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, identified the papers as having been given him by Lily Stein—one of 17 who pleaded guilty to one or both counts of the indictment.

[Lily Stein was said to be the "female agent of a foreign government" who figured in the court effort of a United States foreign-service officer last March to prevent his dismissal by the State Department. Suing in the District Court, he said that a reason given for his dismissal was "dealings" with the woman. He insisted that their relations in Vienna and New York were "purely platonic." His injunction plea was denied.—Editor's note.]

Gestapo Was Queried

Sebold said that in June, 1940, he had queried the Hamburg Gestapo as to how they wanted the data sent. He was in charge of a secret "spy" radio on Long Island which the FBI helped him build and operate. Court was adjourned until Monday before it was established whether the information ever reached Germany.

The papers, embracing several thousand words of condensed specifications, told of the development of diesel airplane engines by S. A. Gulberson of Dallas, Tex., and the Lawrence Engineering Co. of Linden, N. J.; the supply of Pratt and Whitney motors in East Hartford, Conn., to Grumman, Lockheed, Bellanca, Waco and other planes; a new General Motors engine, designed in Indianapolis, Ind., which developed one horsepower for each pound it weighed; the Bell Airacobra which "operates efficiently at 36,000 feet" altitude; the principles of the Boeing Stratoliner; Bendix motors; hydraulic fuel systems; propeller types used by the Army and Navy; new devices in landing gear and a vast amount of other technical data.

"The attention of all citizens of the District of Columbia—men, women and children—is called to the seriousness of the ever-increasing accident toll," the Commissioners declared.

"The campaign against accidents in the home as well as on the streets and highways should continue as an essential part of the program for national defense," the statement said.

"Every movement to promote safety," said the Commissioners, "deserves the highest commendation."

The Commissioners cited President Roosevelt's proclamation of August 21, in which he predicted that the present rate of accidents of all types would result in an excess of 100,000 deaths this year.

In 1940, the Commissioners recalled, traffic accidents in the Nation took nearly 35,000 lives.

In connection with intensified local safety efforts, Traffic Inspector Arthur Miller yesterday reported that 136 accidents and four deaths were caused during the first half of this year by motorists driving with faulty brakes. In 99 per cent of these cases, said Miller, court convictions were obtained.

War Sidelights

Axis Rushing Troops, Guns Into Africa

London, Sept. 19 (INS).—The German and Italian high commands are ferrying troops, tanks and guns to North Africa as fast as their facilities—and the dogged attacks of the Royal Air Force, Royal navy and fleet air arm on those facilities—will permit, the aviation expert of the London Times asserted tonight. He declared the Axis was preparing for a winter campaign in Egypt.

Nearly all Axis supplies are entering North Africa by way of Tripoli and Benghazi, the Times expert stated, thus the ceaseless and heavy British bombing attacks on those ports.

Acknowledging reports that great masses of German and Italian troops are being assembled in the Balkans and in the "heel" of Italy, the expert declared that these troops might possibly be intended for a winter campaign against Gibraltar or Dakar, on the west coast of Africa, but that it is more likely they will be sent to North Africa.

The Axis drive, aimed at the Suez Canal—Britain's life line—and her oil sources in the Near East, can hardly be expected until the bitter Russian winter slows action on the eastern front, the expert said.

U. S. Urged to Fight

Copyright by New York Times

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 19.—Calling for conscription in Canada and expressing the hope that in the near future Great Britain and the United States will be fighting side by side in this war, Beverly Baxter, Toronto-born British M. P., addressed the National Industrial Advertisers Association conference here today.

Addressing his remarks particularly to United States delegates, Baxter said: "If this war ends in victory for us without the United States having fought by our side, I see great difficulties in the entente which will follow the peace."

"Unless the British Empire and the United States really come together and assume definite leadership of the world, some other power which should not have that leadership, will take the power into its hands. It is for the United States itself to decide, but I hope we shall see our forces fighting side by side. I would not be honest if I did not say that."

Propaganda for Peace

Boston, Sept. 19 (AP).—Plans to "try to break the German people away from the yoke of Nazism" by means of "intensified" radio broadcasts from an American short-wave station that is designed to be the most powerful in the world, were disclosed today by Walter S. Lemmon, founder of Station WRUL, which now is the strongest short-waves unit in the Western Hemisphere. Lemmon said the Federal Communications Commission had just authorized new transmission facilities that would eventually add another 100,000 watts of power to the foundation's radio arm.

He said German programs would be in charge of Dr. Reinhold Schairer, who directed higher education in Germany for 10 years before the rise of Hitler, and who left the Reich shortly before the outbreak of war.

Admit Losing 725 Planes

Up to August 31 German plane losses were put at 725—"only a part of our monthly production."

The high command specifically denounced what it termed "enemy propaganda" that German field losses has run from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000.

(In Britain Germany's casualties were estimated on Thursday at 2,000,00, along with 3,000,000 for the Russians. The Nazi high command's figures were characterized by the British wireless as "fantastic."

(The official German estimates in many cases admitted that in two months of the Russian invasion the Nazis had lost about twice as many soldiers and airmen killed and wounded as had been lost in all previous campaigns of the war put together.)

seek the act's repeal or further modification some time within the next two months. They regarded the move as the next logical one, following the revelation of Secretary of the Navy Knox that American war vessels are now convoying merchant ships in the "defensive areas" of the ocean.

Any change now in the Neutrality Act presumably would be extensive enough to remove the prohibition against American ships calling at the ports of countries declared by the President to be at war and to dissolve the combat areas which the President, acting under its existing terms, set up in various parts of the world and into or through which no merchant vessel flying the United States flag is permitted to go.

Informal polls indicated the likelihood that repeal of the act would be voted in the Senate should the Administration throw its full force into the move. Sentiment was less certain in the House, however.

drawn was of two mighty Nazi columns moving now as a great coordinated striking force, the spearheads thrusting out far to the east and the remaining forces chewing up the main body of the encircled Russians beyond the old Kiev front.

The DNB agency reported that Soviet Soviet troops retreating eastward from Poltava were under continuous attack by German dive bombers.

Official information as to the remainder of the Eastern Front—the center and in the northwest—was far less detailed, but another and great step forward in the long effort to conquer Leningrad was reported.

The big naval guns of the Soviet naval base Kronstadt, 20 miles to the east of Leningrad, were declared to have been silenced by German artillery and dive bombers, thus knocking out one of the last surviving outer defenses of the old Russian capital.

The high command's first official announcement of casualties in the east—listing 6900 members of the Nazi air force among the aggregate of 402,835, based its estimate of total Russian casualties on the report that Red prisoneers alone numbered more than 1,800,000. "The number of their dead," it was added, "is according to experience at least equally as high but probably higher."

R. A. F. Eagle Unit Outfights Foe in Action Over France

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 19.—Two American Eagle Squadron pilots destroyed two German ME-109 fighter planes in offensive patrols over France today during which German troops and supply trains were strafed and German shipping bombed, the air ministry said.

One American pilot was said to have shot a German fighter into the Channel and severely damaged another when the Eagle Squadron tore into a formation of Messerschmitts.

Another American knocked a second German into the sea when the squadron was attacked by four Messerschmitts on the way home, the account said.

The Eagles scoring today's successes were Pilot Officer G. A. Daymond, of Great Falls, Mont., and Pilot Officer J. Flynn, Chicago.

A British bomber also scored four hits on an Axis supply ship in the Bay of Biscay, off the coast of France. Shrapnel from the ship struck a cartridge belt in the bomber's turret, exploding cartridges and wounding the gunner.

Two Americans Missing

London, Sept. 19 (INS).—Two additional members of the volunteer American Eagle Squadron of the Royal Air Force were officially reported missing tonight. One was identified as "Little Tommy" McGurdie, of Pasadena, Calif., but there was no identification for the second. There was hope both might be alive, although prisoners in the enemy's hands.

It was believed the Americans failed to return from an offensive sweep over Nazi-occupied northern France yesterday in which the squadron took part.

At least one Nazi fighter was credited to the Americans in yesterday's action, Flight Lieut. C. G. Peterson, of Santaquin, Utah, shooting down his sixth enemy plane.

James M. Maxon, Jr., Killed

London, Sept. 19 (AP).—James M. Maxon, jr., of Memphis, son of the Episcopal bishop of Tennessee, was killed yesterday in a crash on a test flight somewhere in Britain, the Royal Canadian Air Force announced.

Maxon had made at least 10 trips over Germany as bomber and rear-gunner in British air forays. Only last August 30, after his ninth bombing expedition, he was quoted as saying he was yet to get into an air fight.

Maxon enlisted in the R. C. A. F. last year, after having been a newspaper reporter, public relations officer for the Bituminous Coal Commission and publicity agent for the Democratic Party. He held the rank of sergeant.

Tokyo Eyes War

U.S.-Japanese Tension Rises Over Siberia

By Wilfrid Fleisher

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Negotiations between the United States and Japan for a settlement of Pacific problems appeared yesterday to be running into difficulties as the Japanese reported to be reluctant to furnish a pledge to refrain from an attack on eastern Siberia with Russo-Japanese relations growing more tense.

One of the basic conditions of the negotiations with Japan has been that Japan must renounce further conquest in Asia both in the Southern Pacific and in the north, where Japanese ambitions have long been focused on the maritime province of Siberia and the important Pacific port of Vladivostok.

Recent Russian reverses in the Russo-German war are believed to be turning Japan's attention again toward Siberia and to have revived the possibility that the Japanese may be tempted to attack the Russians in the east.

Embassy Depopulated

Renewed tension in Russo-Japanese relations was signalized yesterday by the withdrawal of more than 50 members of the staff of the Soviet Embassy and their families from Tokyo, including the wife of Soviet Ambassador Smetanin.

The Soviet Embassy in Tokyo has long been a barometer of the relations between the two countries. In 1936, following the conclusion of the Anti-Comintern pact between Japan and Germany with resultant tension in Russo-Japanese relations, the staff of the Soviet Embassy in Tokyo was reduced to a skeleton. Last autumn, however, when Japan was seeking a nonaggression pact with the Russians, following Japan's entry into the Axis pact, the Soviet Embassy staff was greatly increased and resumed normal proportions. The departure of 50 member, reported today, must leave the embassy virtually depleted and comes close to a diplomatic break between the two countries.

Another sign of tension was Japan's sharp protest to Moscow yesterday against the presence of floating mines in the Japan Sea, said to have been planted by the Russians. The Japanese contend that two of their fishing boats have been sunk and have demanded that the Russians eliminate the danger to peace in the waters surrounding the Japanese islands.

Blockade Is Feared

Japanese forces in Manchukuo have been greatly increased during the past three months since the Russo-German war got under way and are now estimated by military experts here to be about three times what they were before then. Russian forces, on the other hand, are said to have been depleted by the necessity of sending reinforcements to aid the Russians in the west in their resistance against the Nazi invasion.

In the event of a breakdown in American-Japanese negotiations, the fear is felt here that the Japanese may take steps to blockade the coast of eastern Siberia by the creation of a so-called safety zone around the Japanese islands which would bar approach to Vladivostok.

Any interference with the delivery of American supplies to Russia by way of the Pacific would be certain to precipitate a grave crisis in American-Japanese relations such as was envisaged when American oil tankers carried their first loads to Vladivostok last month. Unconfirmed reports are that Russian submarines escorted the American tankers into port.

8 Pilots Killed in 3 States; Second Army All But Routed

Maryland Graduate Is One of Aviators Dead in Crashes

By the Associated Press

One of eight Army fliers killed in a series of crashes yesterday was Donald Bierer, who was graduated last June from the University of Maryland, which he attended four years.

Bierer, 21, a flying cadet, and J. C. Foster, 22-year-old civilian instructor, were killed at Fort Worth, Tex., while practicing acrobatics. Witnesses said a wing came off their plane.

In his senior year at M. U. Bierer was sports editor of the yearbook, The Terrapin, and a member of the College of Agriculture livestock judging team which was sent to the National Livestock Exposition in Chicago, where the team took a prize.

He was a member of the Rossborough Club, a social organization which sponsors dances at the university and of Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity. He played baseball on the freshman team. He took a degree in agriculture.

Aerial disaster overtook seven other Army planes in three States, leaving eight men dead and one badly hurt. Three pilots escaped injury.

A three-way collision of planes participating in the Second-Third Army maneuvers in Louisiana killed Second Lieuts. R. H. Keith, of Menominee, Wis., and Leland A. Vair, of Dunlap, Kans. Lieut. W. K. Long, Glens Falls, N. Y., brough his plane down safely after it brushed the other two.

Crash of a BT-14 trainer immediately after a takeoff from the Parksley (Va.) Airport killed Second Lieuts. Carlyle C. Hoch, Newark, N. J., and Angus J. MacDonald, Los Angeles, both based at Langley Field, Va.

First Lieut. Walter H. Boyd, Long Beach, Calif., and Corpl. Artie M. Howard, Salyersville, Ky., burned to death and Lieut. Raymond H. Baldwin, Evansville, Ind., was burned badly in a crash near the Marshall, Tex., Municipal Airport. All were members of the Twelfth Observation Squadron from Fort Knox, Ky., and were based at Marshall for the Southern maneuvers. Their craft overshot the field in an attempted landing, struck a tree, crashed into a creek and caught fire.

Land After Crash

Lieuts. Verne V. Faulkner, Eugene, Ore., and Neil Lamont, New Orleans, flying instructors at Goodfellow Field, San Angelo, Tex., landed their planes safely after a minor collison in the air while flying in a three-plane formation.

The crashes in the maneuvers brought to 16 the total of deaths there since the war games started. Another pilot was killed Monday and 11 soldiers met accidential deaths during the five days of simulated fighting.

7 Fliers' Helmets Washed Up on Beach

Marblehead, Mass., Sept. 19 (INS).—Seven charred Navy-type aviation helmets were washed up on Devereaux Beach today.

Naval authorities indicated the helmets may have belonged to the seven Navy fliers whose PBY bomber vanished July 7 on a routine patrol flight off the northeastern coast. No trace had been found of the huge plane since that date. Condition of the helmets indicated the bomber may have exploded in midair.

Gen. Lear Pays Tribute to Troops Resting From Fray

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Second Army in Louisiana, Sept. 19.—Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear's heavily outnumbered and all but defeated Second Army rested tonight after five days of heavy simulated battle which started with initial successes, but ended in rout.

The respite came when Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of staff, General Headquarters, in charge of the maneuvers, called a halt to the first phase at 3:30 p. m. (C. S. T.) today after Lear's Red army had lost its commanding general's headquarters, and was almost encircled by hard-hitting forces of the Blue army under Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger.

Shortly after the cease-firing order was given, Lear issued a commendation to all personnel under his command. He said: "Hearty congratulations and sincere thanks to the personnel of the Second Army for a difficult task well performed. You are becoming well fitted to fight."

The maneuvers will be resumed next week and continue until September 30.

The battle for Natchitoches, Lear's headquarters, raged throughout the day until umpires ordered fighting stopped. The city was captured last night a few hours after Lear evacuated his headquarters for another unnamed site, but was retaken today.

Lear's heavily mechanized 150,000 troops opened the maneuvers Monday by driving a tank column deep into Third Army territory near Leesville. They planned to fan out behind Krueger's lines and destroy the vast infantry troop movements.

The tide turned when this spearhead was threatened with falling into a pocket and had to withdraw hastily. Led by a superior air force, Krueger had sent his columns far around to the north to strike from Texas across the Sabine River and attempt to cut behind the entire Second Army.

Lear met this threat with mechanized cavalry and armored troops under orders to stop the enemy at all costs. The Blues were temporarily repulsed at Natchitoches, thus preventing complete isolation of the Second Army troops east of the Red River.

Pamphlets Tell Lear's Men They Face Only Defeat

With Third Army in Louisiana, Sept. 19 (INS).—The final realistic touch was given the Nation's greatest war games today when clouds of pamphlets calling on the "Red" Second Army under Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear to surrender were dropped behind the lines by Third Army planes.

When "Red" soldiers picked up the pamphlets they read this ominous warning:

"Your commanders are withholding from you the terrible fact of your impending defeat.

"The roads back of you are destroyed, and the bridges across the Red River are gone.

"Rout, disaster, hunger, sleepless nights in the forest, and the swamps are ahead of you—unless you surrender.

"Think of your wives, children, sweethearts—surrender while there is still time."

Britain Admits Reds in Peril, Fears Invasion

By George Lait

International News Service Staff Writer

London, Sept. 19.—Britain, admitting the extremely grave plight of Russia, tonight expressed renewed fears of an attempted German invasion.

"The danger of invasion is ever present," David Margesson, Secretary for War, wrote in a special article for the Evening Star. British dread lest Russia make a separate peace with Germany was reflected in a speech by A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, who said:

"We are watching with profound admiration but deep anxiety the swaying fortunes and heroic resistance which our Russian allies are offering."

New Red Armies Formed

An official British military spokesman said the Russians have new armies totaling between four million and five million men ready to throw into the battle.

But they admittedly are not so well equipped as the original Russian armies, and, said the spokesman, "thus the Russians rapidly are reaching the position of France — fighting a mechanized army with their bare hands."

Kiev Operation Expected

Closing of the German pincers on Kiev, he added, had been expected for a week. Since the Russians were well warned in advance, the spokesman commented, the British hoped they would be able to extricate the major portion of the armies in the Kiev sector.

It was expected the Russians would leave at least a few divisions inside the German pocket to keep striking at Nazi lines of communication which, said the spokesman, "must be thin at certain points."

Regardless of the fate of Russia, the Germans even now are in position to strike directly at Britain, according to War Secretary Margesson. His Evening Star article said:

"Cap Gris Nez is only 7 minutes by air and 90 minutes by sea from England, and there are a lot of Germans still sitting around Cap Griz Nez. . . .

"The chances of an invasion at short notice are always there—and we can only neglect them at our peril.

"Hitler has more than one grand army. . . . He has enough left to strike in the west, if we were off our guard.

"But we won't hoard our forces here beyond what we consider really necessary. We shall leave the enemy to find out, as he will find out by unpleasant experience, what we shall do with the remainder."

Kelly to Take Full Charge Of Police Nov. 1

The formal retirement application of Maj. Ernest W. Brown as superintendent of Metropolitan Police was approved late yesterday by the Commissioners.

Maj. Brown's retirement becomes effective October 31—he is now on accumulated leave. Because he has served more than 45 years in the department and is beyond the 60-year retirement age, his request to step out requires no action by the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons, it was explained.

Commissioner John Russell Young said appointment of Acting Chief Edward J. Kelly as full Major and Superintendent of Police will be made November 1 following Brown's actual retirement from office.

Draft Job Office Sets 100% Record

The District Selective Service reemployment office, which opened at the National Guard Armory last Monday, is apparently headed for a 100 per cent record during its first week of operation, Selective Service headquarters reported yesterday.

Nineteen applicants have sought reemployment aid from the office to date, they said, and interviews have been arranged for all of these men where vacancies were known to be available. At least 13 of this total have been definitely employed, while reports have not yet come in on the other cases. The office praised the cooperation of local businessmen with the program, adding that they had been flooded with reports from District concerns on available jobs.

Soviet Break With Bulgaria Forecast Soon

By Ray Brock

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 19.—Imminent rupture of Soviet diplomatic relations with Bulgaria is confidently expected by leading diplomatic sources at Ankara and qualified military experts here anticipate an almost immediate German effort to drive Bulgaria into war.

One foreign military authority here said today: "The Germans are beginning to need more manpower and, it seems to me, there are indications that they are beginning to think they need the moral effect of another actual ally against the Soviet."

Russian sources here believe that only a Bulgarian declaration of war against the Soviet is needed to precipitate a revolt among dissident elements against King Boris and the present pro-Axis government. The Russians believe that there are strong pan-Slav pro-Russian elements within the Bulgarian army itself which will, through their insurgency, more than offset questionable Bulgarian strength upon the front.

Well-informed Turkish sources hinted unmistakably today that they believe that Bulgarian military preparations are now turned exclusively against the Soviet. They emphasize, however, there will be no relaxation of Turkey's attention to Bulgarian mobilization.

Military experts were not inclined to set deadlines for the expected break-off of relations and the actual beginning of hostilities. One of them, however, said conversationally: "I wouldn't be surprised if it happened before the end of next week."

Axis-inspired rumors that Bulgaria this week requested Dardanelles passage for Italian-built warships were categorically denied today by authorized Turkish, Bulgarian and foreign naval sources at Ankara. This false report, it should be reemphasized, has been circulated in Ankara and Istanbul upon several occasions, usually at times when it would tend to embarrass Anglo-Turkish relations in connection with affairs about the Dardanelles question.

German diplomatic and trade circles reported tonight that the Turkish-German trade talks will be concluded and a new commercial agreement signed between the two countries within ten days.

The British are being advised of all developments in the trade conversations, according to reliable information.

Snubs Gaullists

French Syria Chief Lauds Australians

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Sept. 19.—Reviewing for the press today the events of the Syrian campaign, Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, high commissioner of Syria, paid a tribute to the fighting qualities of the Australians. "They are excellent troops," he said. "Very athletic and though somewhat fierce sometimes in their manner of fighting, they are good soldiers, every one."

Dentz said the Hindus who fought in Syria were also fine native fighters. He made no reference whatsoever to the Gaullist forces.

As to the men under his own command, he made no special mention of the colonials, the Foreign Legion and the Sengalese, as well as troops from France who were engaged. Against superior forces they proved their bravery by a resistance of 35 days without relief, he said.

Gen. Dentz explained that the failure of reinforcements to arrive convinced him further resistance would be useless.

The French and native troops displayed perfect loyalty to France and to Marshal Petain, he declared. He gave the attitude of the Syrian population the highest praise, asserting the populace never caused any trouble even when the whole of the defending forces were occupied on the front.

Torch Singer Critically Ill

Missions Off From London For Moscow

London, Sept. 19 (AP).—The United States and British missions to Moscow were reported reliably tonight to have left for the Soviet capital.

The missions, bound for three-power conferences to coordinate the war effort against Germany, had luncheon with Prime Minister Churchill today.

W. Averell Harriman heads the American group, while the minister of supply, Lord Beaverbrook, heads the British.

Lord Beaverbrook, who has promised the Russians all the tanks that Britain builds in the week beginning next Monday, left the following message to be issued to all tank factory workers tomorrow:

"I leave you, each one of you, responsible for production results during my absence and I rely on you to see the promise I make on your behalf is fulfilled.

"So send me a message September 30 telling me what you've done. And let me tell the Russians then that in the last days of September you devoted yourselves to their needs and that you built more tanks than ever before in the history of your country."

U. S. Gets Lead Rights

La Paz, Bolivia, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Bolivian government decided today to give the United States exclusive right to purchase Bolivia's lead output.

Bombs Burst Near Argentine Nazi Embassy

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Sept. 19. A crowd of Argentine anti-Nazis set off two small bombs near the residence of the German Ambassador this morning, a few hours before the envoy, Edmund von Thermann, escorted his much-discussed guest, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, to a boat en route to a new consular post in the Far East.

Von Thermann, whose expulsion has been demanded by Argentine congressmen, laughingly described the demonstration as "a farewell to Capt. Wiedemann by our old friends the (anti-Nazi) Accion Argentina."

Wiedemann, former consul at San Francisco and expelled with other Axis consular employes from the United States, reached Buenos Aires last Sunday on his way to the Far East. It is reported he will be assigned to north China.

Nazis Assail Argentina

Berlin, Sept. 19 (AP).—The German press tonight began a strong editorial campaign against Argentina and said that anti-German agitation in that country could have "a reaction on diplomatic relations" between the countries.

The agency D. N. B. said "for some time we have been experiencing anti-German agitation in Argentina which barely falls short of that in the United States."

Chile Protest to Berlin

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Chilean government is protesting against detention of Chileans in Germany, foreign office sources indicated today.

Rites Monday For Mrs. Peckham, Clubwoman

Mrs. May Macdonald Peckham, 74, of 3113 Tennyson Street Northwest, died at Doctors Hospital yesterday after an illness of three months. Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Monday at St. Stephen's and the Incarnation Church, and interment will be at the Oak Hill Cemetery.

A native of Philadelphia, Mrs. Peckham came to Washington with her husband, the late George L. Peckham, in 1889 and had lived here ever since. She was for many years a member of the Columbia Heights Art Club, Federation of Women's Clubs, Philo-Classics Society, Chapter B of the P. E. O. Sisterhood, Columbia Union of the W. C. T. U. and the Delta Circle of the St. Stephen's and the Incarnation Church.

She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Margaret M. Forbes, of Washington; three sons, Wesley B. Peckham, of Miami, Fla., and Frank L. and James E. Peckham, of Washington; nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Kiev, Oldest of Russian Cities, Has Long History of Battles

Copyright by New York Times

Kiev, oldest and third largest of Russian cities, has been the scene of many bloody battles in its long history. Rising 300 feet from the east bank of the yellow Dnieper, its fortified hills look out on a rich agricultural, industrial and commercial district. To the east and north stretches a broad corridor to the Carpathians and to the south and west are the seemingly limitless steppes.

The city, which in 1939 had a population of 846,000, is divided into three parts. The podol, or business section, sprawls along the river bank. To the northwest is the old town of Kiev and to the southeast the petchersk—the ancient spiritual center of the Ukraine—a place of churches, shrines, monasteries and museums.

Following the collapse of the old Russian government in 1917, Kiev was occupied by the Kaiser's field gray army. The German troops marched in then at the request of Ukrainian nationalist leaders who despaired of maintaining order in the civil strife prevailing. One of the considerations for the German action was a promise that large quantities of foodstuffs would be supplied to Germany and Austria. Failure to get the promised grain and livestock contributed to the collapse of Austria and later of Germany.

Under Many Flags

During the Russian revolution many of its ancient buildings were reduced to rubble. At various times it was under control of the White Russians, the Bolsheviks, Ukrainian Nationalists, Polish and German armies during this period. The Soviets gained permanent control in 1920. The condition of the city was so bad, however, that the Ukraine capital was shifted to Kharkov, almost 300 miles to the east.

After the revolution, Kiev made a rapid recovery and in the past 20 years again became an important industrial city, a railroad center and a great distribution point. Four railroad lines converge on the town and it has a large volume of river commerce.

Although legend dates the founding of the city at 864, archeologists have reason to believe that it existed long before the Christian era. It did a thriving barter trade with Byzantium, paved the way for Slav domination of Russia and in 988 brought the Greek Orthodox Church to Russia.

Sacked by the Tartars

It was the scene of a civil war between Slav princes, was sacked by Tartars in 1240, came for a time under Lithuanian, then Polish control. For a time it enjoyed the Magdeburg right of self-government and then underwent Russification at the hands of Peter the Great.

During the nineteenth century industrialization of the city and surrounding area and the rise of a nationalist movement bent on establishing an independent state grew apace.

A nationalist revolt broke out in Kiev in 1905 and was ruthlesaly and mercilessly suppressed. Much of the large Jewish population was massacred in a pogram shortly afterward.

Another nationalist movement was under way in 1914, but was cut short by the outbreak of the First World War.

Mrs. Paregol's Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Esther Bela Paregol, 64, of 642 Kiefer Place, who died Tuesday while visiting her daughter, Mrs. Sol Neishuler, of Mill Valley, near San Francisco, Calif., will be held here tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Beth Sholom Cemetery, relatives and friends learned yesterday.

Surviving, besides her daughter, is a sister, Mrs. Samuel Einwohner, of this city.

Irish Senator Hits Eire's Neutrality

Strategic Unity Of British Isles Must Be Realized, He Declares Here

An Irish statesman who believes that the Battle of the Atlantic is Ireland's battle has been visiting Washington.

He is Senator Frank MacDermot, of the Irish Parliament, who is in the United States to see his wife, an American woman, and their 10-year-old son. A native of County Sligo, Senator MacDermot is an independent in Irish politics. He frankly admits that he is very much in the minority.

In an interview in the garden of the Cosmos Club, he talked regretfully about Ireland's neutrality, describing it as unrealistic and "ostrich-like."

What, then, would Senator MacDermot have Ireland do? His answer to that question, when it was put to him, was that while he was in America he did not want to urge a course of action on Ireland, but on the United States.

He said he would like to see the United States remove the designation of "combat zone" from the waters around Ireland, thus making it possible for American ships to go into Irish ports.

Question of Bases Would Arise

If German U-boats and bombers then tried to sink Irish and American ships in Irish waters, he said, the question of sharing Irish bases with the United States would have to be faced.

"There is no use trying to push people into war when they have no heart for it," Senator MacDermot said of his countrymen. "In any case, I am enough of a patriotic Irishman to object to anyone pushing us into war against our will.

"But what I do want is to see the Irish people are brought up against the realities, and are made to realize that the Battle of the Atlantic is their battle. Hitherto, we have not done so. Most of the supplies we have been getting from the outside have come from England. How they got to England we have regarded as none of our business. We knew that the British mercantile marine and the British navy were somehow managing it. But now our stores are running out, and we have a difficult winter ahead of us."

Senator MacDermot said there was a serious shortage of coal, gasoline and vital raw materials. As a result, he said, there had been a sharp curtailment in transportation and also a rise in unemployment. He said he himself was limited to a ration of ten gallons of gasoline a month.

Awakening to Realities

Recently, he said, Ireland has been buying freighters in the United States. The first of these, he said, has arrived in an Irish port, adding that it traveled in a British convoy.

"This ocean-going traffic," Senator MacDermot said, "is bringing us up against the realities of the Battle of the Atlantic as we haven't been before, and this winter, I believe, is going to do a great deal to make us see that we have grievances against the Germans."

Senator MacDermot, a tall, wiry man with blue eyes and graying hair, speaks with an accent that, to an American, sounds more English than Irish. He explained that he went to school in England—first at Downside Abbey, a Benedictine school near Bath, and later at Oxford. Like many thousands of other Irishmen, he served with the British army in the World War. Before that he had been active in the fight for Irish home rule. He is author of "The Life of Theobald Wolfe Tone."

Senator MacDermot believes that it would be disastrous for Ireland if Hitler were to defeat Great Britain.

"It is impossible to expect that Hitler, if he subdues Britain, will leave us alone," he said. "It is quite clear that a Nazi-controlled Europe would need the Irish coast as part of its defense system."

Ireland Feels Inadequate

Right now, he said, Ireland was like almost every other small nation in that it felt wholly inadequate in the face of a war in which it was not equipped to fight. And feeling inadequate, he said, Ireland was trying to avert its gaze from the realities.

"It is not fair to say that a policy of neutrality is cowardly," Senator MacDermot continued. "But I do think that, considering our relations with the British Commonwealth and what we were getting out of it up to the moment the war broke out, our behavior has been a little inglorious."

Senator MacDermot said that the great trouble with the Irish-British settlement was that, on the one hand, it left Ireland divided and that on the other it broke up the military unity of the British Isles. The British Isles, he insisted, could be effectively defended only as a unit.

"I believe," he concluded, "that the ultimate solution of Anglo-Irish relations must include, on the one hand, the abolition of partition, with the consent of the majority in North Ireland, and on the other hand, an arrangement regarding defense which recognizes the strategic unity of the British Isles."

House Naval Group May Go to Britain

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

A trip to Britain by members of the House Naval Affairs Committee to study effectiveness of lend-lease operations was proposed yesterday on the eve of House hearings on the President's $5,985,000,000 aid bill.

Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, ranking Republican member of the Naval Committee said he will urge the group at its next meeting to accept a British invitation recently extended to all members.

Maas, long a minority advocate of the President's foreign policies, suggested first-hand Congressional inspection of British use of supplies as Republican opposition to the second aid installment faded all along the line.

Hearings Slated

Two weeks of hearings on the bill and subsidiary estimates were tentatively scheduled by Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee, with House action slated the week of October 6. Cannon predicted little opposition.

The British bid for a Congressional inspection trip was made early this month by Brendan Bracken, British minister of information, but received a lukewarm reception in Congress at the time. Bracken said members would be welcome "to make their own inquiries on the use of lend-lease materials," and they would be "under no obligations."

Easing of tension on the House lend-lease front followed Thursday's House call by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, for unified support of the Administration's foreign and national defense policies.

Republicans generally echoed Dirksen's support of lend-lease appropriations, but party differences continued on the President's "shoot first" orders to the Navy.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, frequent critic of the President's foreign course, said he expected to vote for any "justifiable" aid sum, but withheld his views on naval patrol orders for a speech on foreign policy issues in Columbus, Ohio, Monday night.

Representative Taber, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, whose support of the original seven-billion-dollar appropriation smoothed House passage, is expected again to go along with the bill.

These Republicans take the view that the aid policy having been fixed by repeal of the arms embargo and approval of the Lend-Lease Act, Congress should implement the policy with such funds as are justified.

But evidence that Dirksen's stand for support of the President's naval orders was not generally shared by his party quickly flared in the House.

Adjournment Blocked

Answering the Dirksen speech, Representative Thill (Republican), of Wisconsin, blocked efforts to adjourn the House. Thill said there was no reason why Congress or the "military minority" should give up their functions as a result of the President's recent speech."

Representative Knutson, (Republican), of Minnesota said that if the Administration "can keep people in a continual state of fear beyond 1944, we should be able to make this country safe for a fourth term." A spectator who booed Knutson was removed from the gallery.

Representative Patrick, (Democrat), of Alabama quoted from Hitler's "Mein Kampf" and declared "it sounds just like Charles A. Lindbergh."

Until October 6, when the lend-lease bill is expected to be reported, the House will meet only as a forum. Leaders have agreed to transact no business in the interim.

Decision meanwhile was reached by Chairman Cannon of the Appropriations Committee to add about $100,000,000 in independent deficiency estimates to the $5,985,000,000 lend bill. Cannon conferred briefly with Budget Bureau officials on the program.

Norwegian Seamen Here

GIVE VICTORY SIGN—Part of the group of 30 Norwegian sailors in Washington on a visit give the two-fingered sign for victory

A group of about 30 sailors of the Free Norwegian merchant marine, fresh from the raider-ridden Atlantic sea lanes, relaxed in the Department of Commerce Auditorium yesterday afternoon to watch with an air of deserved superiority a Maritime Commission movie on the training of American merchant marines.

On a month's respite from the ocean while their ships are docked at Baltimore for loading and repairs, the men were in Washington yesterday for a day's visit. Their itinerary included a sight-seeing tour of the American Capital, a new experience for all of them, visits to the "Pook's Hill" residence of Norwegian Crown Princess Martha at Bethesda, and to the Norwegian legation's new wing last night.

The sailors were welcomed before the showing of the movie, "Men and Ships," by Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, who told them:

"I want to take my hat off to you in honor and respect for what you are doing in the battle for democracy. When, eventually, there is a peace conference, the contribution of Norway in the war will by no means be forgotten by the United States."

The group included both 19-year-old boys and veterans of the World War merchant marine, all of them engaged in British supply trade. One chief engineer, whose name, ship and home port are not for publication, had been 30 years on the sea and went through the last war on merchant ships. This war, he thought, was the tougher one because "they come from the air and from the bottom, too." But there is no trouble in recruiting crews, he added, and morale is excellent.

"We want the country free and so we have to take it. I was in Germany before the war, and I saw enough there. I don't want to live like that."

U.S. Takes Over 3 Ships For One Voyage

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19.—The Maritime Commission said today it had requisitioned for a single voyage three struck merchant ships, which ply between here and United States Caribbean defense bases, so there would be no further delay in the transportation of supplies.

A crew recruited by the commission was placed aboard the Alcoa Banner, one of the three ships owned by the Alcoa Steamship Co. Sailors also were expected to board the Alcoa Trader and Alcoa Scout, with the Banner and the Trader sailing tomorrow, and the Scout Sunday.

Capt. Granville Conway, district director of the commission, said the men would be paid the same wage scale as that of Alcoa. They are being hired irrespective of union affiliation.

The ships were seized yesterday after the Seafarer's International Union (A. F. of L.) refused to submit to arbitration their demands for increased bonuses for war-zone travel. The strike has affected 11 other ships docked here, in Boston, New Orleans and Mobile.

Capt. Granville Conway said that "for the time being" the other vessels would not be requisitioned.

Both the Alcoa Banner and the Alcoa Trader are loaded with defense supplies and ready for departure. The commission said the Acloa Scout was ready to load, "but has not been able to commence loading since September 13 because there are no men on board the ship to supply steam for winches."

The union is seeking a bonus of $60 monthly for travel in the West Indies, which they ask to be considered a war zone, as are Canadian waters, where a $1-a-day bonus is paid. These demands were backed by the Sailors Union of the Pacific (A. F. of L.), which called its members off three ships here.

Seizure of the three vessels represented the first time the Government has taken over ships because of labor trouble.

Lindbergh to Speak In Capital on Sept. 22

The America First Committee announced yesterday that Charles A. Lindbergh will speak in Washington under its auspices on September 27, at 9:15 p. m. E. S. T. His address is to be nationally broadcast, the organization said.

Ex-Policeman Sentenced

William D. Haislip, 56, former Metropolitan Police sergeant, was sentenced to 4 to 12 years in prison yesterday for seducing his daughter. Haislip was convicted by a jury before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue of the District Court on Tuesday.

Film Union Racket Probe Is Disclosed

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19.—A general investigation of alleged violations of the Federal anti-racketeering act by persons in the motion picture industry was disclosed today in Federal court.

It came to light when a special Federal grand jury demanded that George E. Browne, indicted president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (A. F. L.), produce the union's books and records dealing with the collection and disbursement of a membership assessment fund.

Brown and his personal representative, William Bioff, West Coast labor leader, are scheduled to go to trial October 6 on charges of extorting $550,000 from four major motion picture producers under threats to call a strike of key technical workers in the industry.

Assistant U. S. Attorney John Burling said the investigation of the union's financial affairs was not related to the case pending against Browne and Bioff, although they were indicted under the anti-racketeering act, but that it was part of a general investigation of alleged violations of the act by numerous persons in the motion picture industry.

Morgenthau Pays Detroit Incognito Visit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 19.—Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, spent several hours today as an incognito observer of industrial and human problems involved in turning production of huge automotive units here into armament and defense channels.

He visited a C. I. O. union meeting; he stopped to put nickels in "juke boxes" that had recordings of the Treasury's defense bond sale theme song.

When his tour ended, he expressed belief in an interview that "somebody" in the Office of Production Management should explain to workers worried over unemployment that "a very small percentage of the money which Congress has appropriated for national defense has been spent."

Secretary Morgenthau, his identity unknown except to one union officer, heard a discussion of the payroll allotment plan of defense savings at a meeting in nearby Pontiac of members of Fisher Body Local No. 596 of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.).

"Many people have urged forced savings," he said later. "I came away from the meeting convinced that it can be done on a volunteer basis, and unless we can do it this way something is wrong with the program."

Morgenthau said the workers "don't understand why provision is not made to give them other jobs when automobile production is curtailed."

"Somebody in the OPM should explain to working men and women," he added, "the money is there to pay, and it is up to the OPM. There must be and should be work for these skilled people. They did not question the necessity of the changeover or its purpose, but wanted to know what they were going to do in the meantime."

Morgenthau arrived last night in a Coast Guard plane. He arranged to depart for New York this evening after conferring with C. I. O. and A. F. L. officials, and a luncheon meeting with Detroit bankers to discuss sale of tax anticipation bonds.

Lewis, Lindbergh Linked to Dictator Group by Pepper

New York, Sept. 19.—Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, charged tonight that John L. Lewis and Charles A. Lindbergh were representative of a small group of willful men in this country who were seeking to profit from the present critical period and who were "looking forward to the day when, out of the Nation's misery they can set up their own kind of dictatorship."

Speaking at the opening session of a two-day conference sponsored by the New York Fight for Freedom Committee, Senator Pepper bitterly assailed isolationists who, he contended, were seeking to disrupt America's foreign policy in giving all-out aid to nations opposing Nazi Germany as proclaimed by President Roosevelt and his Administration.

"There comes a time when disloyalty to one's President is disloyalty to one's country," the Senator asserted. "There comes a time when men must forget differences of opinion about methods and stand together for the common cause."

Captive Mine Strike Ends; Textile Strife Looms

By the Associated Press

The strike in captive coal mines ended yesterday by an agreement for the 44,000 striking miners to return to work while negotiations continue between the operators and the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) on a contract.

A new threat of strike in a West Coast airplane factory arose, however. A. F. L. machinists at the San Diego, Calif., plant of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation announced that wage negotiations had been broken off and they were prepared to strike to enforce their demands.

Union officials said they had asked the National Defense Mediation Board to consider the case, contending that the company refused a demand for a general 10-cent-an-hour increase. The company has a backlog of more than 750 million dollars in defense orders for the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia and the Netherlands.

At Buffalo, N. Y., the aircraft, nonaffiliated union of employes at Curtiss-Wright Corporation's two Buffalo warplane plants, voted last night to strike unless the National Labor Relations Board grants an election within 10 days.

At the same time a threat of a strike in the cotton and rayon bleaching and dyeing industries was made by the C. I. O. Textile Workers of America.

George Baldanzi, executive vice president of the union, said hoarding of certain materials in hope of higher prices was threatening widespread unemployment. He asked Leon Henderson, price administrator, to investigate, and said the union would call out its members unless this was done.

The Defense Mediation Board secured an agreement for resumption of mining Monday in the "captive" coal collieries—so-called because their output is used exclusively by the major steel and power companies which, in most cases, are the owners.

Union Shop Out

It provides that operations shall be conducted under terms of the Appalachian contract, except that a provision for a union shop shall not apply.

This temporary arrangement is to continue for at least 30 days, after which either side may end it by giving three days' notice.

The Appalachian contract is that signed by the U. M. W. with Northern mines after the great coal strike of last spring. Among other things, it provides for a basic $7 a day wage and requires that all miners, after a probationary period, join the U. M. W.

The union ordered coal diggers from the captive mines last Monday to back up a demand for a union shop such as that called for in the Appalachian contract.

John L. Lewis, union president, said the miners agreed to terms "only from a desire to make a contribution to the national interest, which has been our attitude from the opening of these hearings last Wednesday.

Cites Right to Strike

"The United Mine Workers of America still dissent from the principle that strikes must be broken as a quid pro quo for a hearing before the National Defense Mediation Board or any other Government agency."

Baldanzi, textile union official, told a press conference that the union was joined by a group of employers in the dyeing, finishing, printing and bleaching industry in its protest to Henderson.

They contended that a group of weavers was hoarding materials in an attempt to get the Government to raise its price ceilings. Baldanzi said the employers were from New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia, New England and the South.

The union spokesmen contended that goods were being held and that such small quantities were going to dyers that a shortage was threatened in the factories which make women's dresses.

"There are 75,000 workers affected by this bottleneck," he said. "If it continues it means that another 100,000 in the cutting trades will be affected."

Among other developments was settlement of a strike at the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation, Watervliet, N. Y. C. I. O. workers went back to their jobs after a labor mediator ordered reinstatement of four or five dismissed workers. The strike had been called Monday to protest the dismissals.

Industry Control By Army Rejected

'Bureaucrats' Plan' Was Turned Down By New Dealers

By Lloyd Lehrbas
Associated Press Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, informed quarters reported yesterday, has rejected proposals that would have placed a greater degree of control over defense industry in military, instead of civilian hands.

Refusing recommendations designed to extend the Army's authority, Mr. Roosevelt took action to insure that the civilian-dominated governmental agencies administer measures affecting the supply of raw materials, priorities, production and export control.

The President's decision was the major development to date in what was described as a long and spirited behind-the-scenes battle for control of defense production and regulation of export trade.

Reduces Army Board

Disclosure of the conflict followed the President's executive order of September 15 in which transferred the Export Control Administration to the Economic Defense Board headed by Vice President Wallace.

By that order the President not only transferred the hitherto separate Army-controlled export administration to the Vice President's board, but reduced it to a subordinate division which will be headed by a civilian, Milo Perkins, former head of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

At the same time Brig. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, who has acted as administrator of export control since the office was organized July 2, 1940, was relieved of that assignment and ordered back to duty in the War Department.

More than 100 other Army officers—mostly from the reserves—are now on duty with the Export Control Administration but there has been no decision yet as to their future disposition.

Two Factions Labeled

In the behind-the-scenes conflict, informed sources said, members of one faction described the others as "New Dealers" and were, in turn, called "Army bureaucrats."

The so-called "New Dealers" charged that the "Army bureaucrats" had ambitious plans—even to the point of preparing proposed executive orders for the President's signatures—which would expand and extend the Export Control Administration's powers until it would be in control of the major part of defense industries.

This the non-military faction argued, would be detrimental to the best interests of American industry.

The military faction denied any ambitions to control industry, asserting the Export Control Administration's powers were clearly defined in various Presidential orders and had not been overreached.

Experiments Charged

The "New Dealers," they charged, were chiefly interested in placing their proteges in the considerable number of positions in the organization and utilize the emergency opportunity to experiment with "reforms."

Unchallenged facts in the controversy are:

After issuing a proclamation setting up the Export Control Administration the President, on July 2, 1940, issued a military order as commander in chief which stated stated that control of exports was essentially a military function, and designated Maxwell as administrator of export control.

On September 15, the President, reversing his position that export control was essentially a military function, transferred the Export Control Administration's functions to the Economic Defense Board as a branch of that organization.

As the official reason for the change, Vice President Wallace announced that "the powers of the office of export control will be more closely integrated into the broader work of the Economic Defense Board."

Bridges Asks New Hearing, Probe of FBI

By the Associated Press.

Counsel for Harry Bridges, California C. I. O. director, appealed to the Government yesterday to reopen a deportation case against Bridges and investigate allegations that F. B. I. agents used wire tapping against him.

The appeal was made to Charles B. Sears, special Justice Department examiner, who closed in June a hearing on a warrant to deport Bridges to his native Australia. Judge Sears took the plea for rehearing under advisement.

Edward J. Ennis, counsel for the Immigration Service, argued that the appeal for a reopening of the case should be denied.

Ennis declared that the move failed to allege any facts showing that wire-tapping was employed by anyone connected to the Bridges case prior to or during the deportation hearing.

Bridges' counsel did not allege specific wire tapping during or before the deportation hearing, but charged that after the case was ended, F. B. I. agents intercepted telephone messages to Bridges in a New York hotel.

Richard Gladstein argued that this was a pattern of conduct relating to a conclusion that it was reasonable to believe that evidence produced in the deportation case was obtained by wire tapping.

"It is a part of a long-standing conspiratorial effort by certain people," Gladstein said, "to get Bridges out of the country."

Maj. Lemuel B. Schofield, in charge of the Immigration Service, told newspapermen later that "as a matter of fact, there was no wire tapping of any kind in connection with the hearings and none of the evidence produced by the Government against Bridges was obtained in that manner directly or indirectly."

Presbyterians, United Brethren To Entertain Service Men

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Members of the Memorial United Brethren Church at North Capitol and R Streets wanted to do something for the service men. But they had no fellowship house, suitable for dancing. So Covenant-First Presbyterian Church came to the rescue.

Tomorrow at 8 p. m. the United Brethren service men's committee will come to the Covenant Fellowship House at 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and help the Covenant service men's committee to stage a dinner and dance for the boys.

The United Brethren's committee includes Mrs. H. Lee Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harbaugh, Mrs. E. S. Calbreath, Miss Betty Daugherty, Opal Hefner, Beryl Brannon, Irene Corbett, Leona Bixler, Helen Brandt, Bertha and Edith Lawson, Hilda Henderson and Anna Widmyer.

Other service men's programs for today and tomorrow, arranged with the cooperation of the Washington Federation of Churches, are:

Today: 6 p. m. Open house, St. John's Episcopal Church Hall, Sixteenth and H Streets Northwest.

2 p. m. Sight-seeing tour under sponsorship of Mount Vernon Place, Francis Asbury and Foundry Methodist churches, leaving Supreme Court Building. Picnic supper follows.

8 p. m. Special program, including movies, arranged by Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Tomorrow: Washington churches of all denominations welcome service men to worship.

Dr. J. C. Massee To Hold Meetings At Gospel Center

Dr. J. C. Massee, nationally known Baptist evangelist, will speak daily at 7:45 p. m. at the new Gospel Center at Fifth and H Streets Northwest from September 22 through 28.

Dr. Massee has held evangelistic campaigns in Washington and throughout the country since leaving his pastorate at the Tremont Temple Baptist Church in Boston.

Dr. Massee holds many degrees and has written many books, and is a teacher at the Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary of Philadelphia. His message has drawn young people especially throughout the country.

These services are under the direction of the Laymen's Evangelistic Association in cooperation with the Gospel Mission.

Dr. Douglass to Speak At Unitarian Church

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will speak on "Religion in Germany" at the opening session of the comparative religion class in All Souls' Unitarian Church School tomorrow at 10. At the current problem class, various members will report "vacation experiences." The graded classes of the school will resume their sessions at 9:45 o'clock. "How Much Do You See?" is the subject upon which the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will preach at the 11 o'clock service. Red Cross sewing groups will meet on Monday at 11 a. m. and on Wednesday at 8 p. m.

"RESCUE THE PERISHING"
FANNY J. CROSBY

Rescue the perishing, care for the dying.
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave;
Weep o'er the erring ones, lift up the fallen;
Tell them of Jesus the Mighty to Save

This little sermon in song was written by the blind poet Fanny J. Crosby. It is a message of hope for the lost and fallen, popular not only in church prayer meetings but in Salvation Army Camps and in missions, rallies and social settlements the world over

Red Cross Day To Be Marked Tomorrow

Red Cross Sunday will be observed here tomorrow by all faiths in a special service at the Water Gate at 3:30 p. m. as a prelude to the beginning Monday of the Silver Anniversary Roll Call of the District Red Cross.

In addition, special Red Cross messages and sermons will be read in churches of all faiths throughout the city. A special message from the Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, will be read in the Catholic churches.

In making public the program for the Water Gate services, Edgar Morris announced that three prominent religious leaders will take part in the program, which will be broadcast from 4 to 4:30 p. m. by Station WRC. They are Bishop James E. Freeman, Rabbi Newman Gerstenfeld and Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of Columbus University and prominent Catholic layman.

Preceding the broadcast, which also will feature musical numbers and an address by Courtland D. Ferguson, chairman of the publicity committee, will be an overture by the United States Navy Band, a processional massing of the colors of the military services and other organizations, invocation by Bishop Freeman and a choir which will sing from the Water Gate float used by the Symphony Orchestra.

The Capital Transit Co. has arranged special bus service to the Watergate from Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

D. C. Jews Mark Year 5702 Tomorrow at Rosh Hashanah

BLOWS THE RAM'S HORN — Mendle Gemble, resident of the Hebrew Home for the Aged, shows how he will blow the shofar (ram's horn) to usher in the Jewish New Year, 5702—Rosh Hashanah

Washington's 20,000 followers of Judaism will make a solemn trek to synagogues and temples tomorrow at sundown as Rosh Hashanah —the Jewish New Year 5702—is ushered in with Maariv services.

Observed for one day by Reformed Jews and two days by orthodox and conservative congregations, Rosh Hashanah will be climaxed by Yom Kippur—day of atonement—ten days later. Yom Kippur is a 24-hour period of fasting and repentance.

When worshipers return to houses of worship on Monday morning, they will hear readers of the congregations blow the shofar (ram's horn), symbolically summoning Judaism to repentance and reflection.

Holiday services follow:

Rabbi H. Zvi Glickman, organizer of the People's Cultural Synagogue, will conduct Rosh Hashanah services for Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital tomorrow and Monday, and Yom Kippur rites on September 30 and October 1. The Hebrew Sisters' Aid Circle will cooperate in the rites.

B'nai Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Emerson Streets Northwest, will have services tomorrow at 6 p. m., and on Monday and Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. Rabbi Henry Segal's sermon subject for Monday will be "What Shall We Do in the Meantime?" and Tuesday, "Whither Shall We Turn?" Cantor Louis Schulman, of Newark, N. J., will chant the services.

Rosh Hashanah rites at Beth Sholom Synagogue, Eighth and Shepherd Streets Northwest, will begin tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. Monday services will be at 7:30 a. m.; at 10:30 a. m., when Rabbi M. H. Levinson will preach on "Days of Woe," and 6:30 p. m. Tuesday's rites will be at 7:30 a. m.; 10:30 a. m., when the rabbi will speak on "Call of the Shofar." Adolph Vygoda will be cantor.

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, spiritual leader of Adas Israel Congregation, will preach on Monday at 10:30 a. m. on "Escape from Freedom," and on Tuesday at the same hour on "Where Is God?" Other Rosh Hashanah services will be tomorrow at 6:15 p. m., and Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 a. m.

Rosh Hashanah services of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will be tomorrow at 8 p. m., when Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld will speak on "Faith of the Founders," and on Monday at 11:30 a. m., when his theme will be "All-Out American Liberal Judaism."

Rabbi Zemach Green, of Ohev Sholom Congregation, has announced that opening Rosh Hashanah rites will be tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. Other services will be on Monday and Tuesday at 7 a. m., and on Monday at 10:30 a. m., when he will preach.

Rosh Hashanah rites at Tifereth Israel Synagogue will be tomorrow at 6:30 p. m.; Monday and Tuesday at 8:30 and 10 a. m. Rabbi Harry Silverstone's sermon themes for the 10 o'clock services, respectively will be, "Significance of the New Year," and "Facing the Future."

The Jewish community here has made special arrangements for service men from nearby camps to attend Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur services here, it was announced yesterday by Joseph Bower, Jewish Welfare Board representative.

Bible Class Holds Annual Dinner Tuesday

The Box Men's Bible Class of Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia Avenue Northwest, will stage its annual dinner on Tuesday at 6:30 p. m., in the church hall. Arthur S. Flemming, one of the Civil Service Commissioners and the Foundry Methodist lay leader, will speak.

Members of the well known Burrall Class of Calvary Baptist Church are mapping plans to fete Mrs. William S. Abernethy's twentieth year as teacher on the first Sunday in October. It is one of the largest and eldest organized women's classes in the world.

It will be District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Night on the weekly Bible Round Table over Station WWDC Monday at 7:30 o'clock. Page McK. Etchison and George E. Harris and William R. Schmucker, president, executive secretary and treasurer song leaders, respectively of the association, will lead the discussion.

Ernest W. Brown, past president, will preside at the sessions of the Harrison Class of Congress Street Methodist Church, Georgetown, tomorrow at 9:45 a. m.

Dr. Brooks to Preach At Universalist Church

"Have Faith, But How?" is the subject that Dr. Seth R. Brooks, minister of the Universalist National Memorial Church, will preach upon tomorrow at 11. The National Capital Choir, under the direction of Miss Jessie Masters, will offer the ministry of music and H. Jerome Graham will be at the organ.

There will be Red Cross and welfare sewing on Monday from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. The board of management meets Monday evening in the Romaine-van Schaick Room at 7:30.

The Women's Association will meet on Tuesday at 12:30 for its monthly luncheon. This is the first meeting of the season and reports of the Universalist General Convention held last week at Tufts College, Mass., will be given. Mrs. Frank W. Ballou, president, will conduct the business meeting and devotions will be led by Mrs. William H. McGlauflin.

Outdoor Concert Set

The senior choir of the First Baptist Church, under the direction of Harwood Hall, will be featured in the outdoor concert of old songs of the church, tomorrow at 5, at Fort Lincoln Cemetery, Bladensburg Road at the District line.

Also, on the program for this concert, will be the Fort Lincoln Male Quartet, in a group of requested hymns.

D. C. Bishop To Dedicate New Window

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, has returned from his vacation, and tomorrow at 11 a. m. will dedicate the first of the nave aisle windows of Washington Cathedral.

The window which is one of the 20 aisle windows eventually to be installed when the nave of the Cathedral is completed was given by Col. and Mrs. S. G. Talbott in memory of their daughter, Ethelyn Sarratt Talbott. Col. Talbott is stationed here in the Adjutant General's office. He and Mrs. Talbott and several of their friends will be at the Cathedral for the dedication which occurs on the date of their daughter's birth.

The window depicts events in the life of Joan of Arc and is 12 feet across and 18 feet high. Designed and executed by Wilbur Herbert Burnham, it is located in the easternmost bay of the north aisle of the nave, directly above the Kellogg Peace Window.

According to the iconography planned by the Cathedral for its stained glass, the windows in this section of the structure will have as their general theme historical representations of the labors and achievements of "The Children of Light." They will represent "men and women of vision and courage, the world's pathfinders, who dared to project themselves into a new and more promising future."

Church Group to Meet

An officers' conference of the Daughters of the King, Episcopal women's organization, will be held Thursday at 8 p. m. at Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Streets Northwest. The Rev. Reno S. Harp, Trinity pastor, will speak.

That Aurora

Just Sun Spots Before Your Eyes

By Dr. Harlan T. Stetson

Noted Astronomer and Geophysicist of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Distributed by International News Service

Needham, Mass., Sept. 19.—The exciting display of the aurora borealis, "northern lights," seen last night throughout Eastern States was a challenge to science.

The splendid fireworks of the sky call attention to tremendous upheavals in the sun, and to the way such upheavals can and do influence all that is on the earth, including human beings.

Cosmic forces last night caused violent agitations in the electrified regions of the upper atmosphere, "the radio ceilings," which are so important for normal radio operations.

If last night we had attempted to send short wave radio messages to Mars, which is now nearer to the earth than usual, these messages would not have got through the electrical scramblings of the upper atmosphere.

Huge Sun Spots

This was due to the fact that there are huge sun spots traveling on the sun, and from them come radiations of exceptional electrical and magnetic properties.

The appearance of the sun spots indicates atomic energy is bursting upward from the interior of the sun. Tremendously excited particles, that is atomic bullets and electrons, and highly penetrating forms of light emerge to the sun's surface.

These electrified particles collide with the molecules of the upper atmosphere, several hundred miles above the earth's surface. The result of such collisions is the production of new and vast numbers of "ions," broken atoms and molecules, charged with electricity.

These particles glow and produce the auroral lights.

The general theory has been that electrons are hurled out of the sun. But the electrons travel very fast, almost with the speed of light, which is about 186,000 miles per second.

Hours Too Late

Now, we observed last night that the auroral lights appeared quite a few hours after the sun spots had traversed the meridian, the central region, of the sun. In other words, the bombarding particles of the sun did not reach us immediately they were discharged.

There were some extremely fast electrical bullets that came from the sun and upset the layers of the upper atmosphere about 150 to 180 miles above the earth's surface.

Last night, however, other kinds of electrical bullets showed their effects. These were slower bullets, because they were heavier. They were heavier than the electrons.

These solar electrical bullets, traveling at the speed of about 1000 miles a second, caused the great upheavals about 60 miles from the ground.

Displeased With Profits Levy Plan, Hill Leaders Hear

By Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

Congressional leaders yesterday heard that President Roosevelt was dissatisfied with the excess profits provisions of the $3,553,000,000 history-making revenue bill and that he would issue a statement criticizing the measure when he signs it.

Mr. Roosevelt was reported having asked the Treasury for a memorandum on why Congress refused to accept the Administration's recommendation to eliminate the average earnings base of 1936-39 and restrict the computation of excess profits to invested capital alone.

Both the House and Senate refused to accept the recommendation, which would bring in additional millions in revenue from companies that make large profits on small capitalization.

Demand to Be Renewed

Informed New Dealers said the Treasury would be directed by Mr. Roosevelt to renew its demand for a single excess profits tax base in the administrative tax bill to be submitted to Congress in late October.

Mr. Roosevelt also was said to favor compulsory joint returnrs of husbands and wives on unearned income but to allow spouses to file separate returns on earned income.

These are two of the more than 150 changes the Treasury is drafting.

Among others to be proposed will be one to make husbands and wives in the eight community property States stop splitting income for tax purposes; an increase in the surtax rates on individuals earning more than $750,000 a year, and the taxation of income from State and local tax exempt securities.

With the signing of the bill today or early next week, a joint Congressional committee to investigate ways and means of cutting nondefense spending will be created.

In a radio speech last night, President Albert W. Hawkes of the United States Chamber of Commerce, warned the Nation's taxpayers that if they accept a passive roll of bill payers, they will pave the way for a change in "our form of Government."

Debt May Be Doubled

Declaring that nondefense spending could be slashed by two billion dollars, Hawkes said the taxpayers should arouse themselves and demand economy in government.

"It has been estimated that by the end of the emergency period our national debt may be double the present 50 billion dollars," Hawkes said. "In a period of normal economic activity, even such a burden might be supportable. But we know from past experience that business will not be 'as usual' following the emergency.

"Our citizens should press their repersentatives to reduce immediately all less-essential expenditures and accomplish maximum efficiency in all necessary expenditures, if we would later avoid the difficult task of trying to balance the budget throught an over-taxation plan which, in the end, will not produce the money because it 'kills the goose that lays the golden egg.'"

C. C. Weidemann's Funeral Services To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Clarence C. Weidemann, 60, of 1520 Farragut Street Northwest, who died at Doctors Hospital on Thursday, will be held at 3:30 p. m. today at the Hines funeral home. Interment will be at Prospect Hill Cemetery.

A native of Washington, Mr. Weidemann lived here all his life, and studied medicine at George Washington University until forced to give up his studies because of ill health. Except for two short periods, he had been with the Department of Commerce since 1904, first in the Secretary's office, then in charge of personnel for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and since 1929 as editor for the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. William G. Crampton; a sister, Mrs. John T. Henkel, both of Washington, and a brother, Eugene Weidemann, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Franklin Clark, Portrait Artist, Dies Here at 70

Franklin Barber Clark, 70, portrait painter and restorer of paintings, died Wednesday in a Washington hospital.

Mr. Clark was born in Brampton, near Toronto, Canada, in October, 1871, and began his art career under the direction of J. W. R. Foster. He studied for several years at the Corcoran Art Gallery, and continued his studies in Paris at the Julian School of Art under the tutlage of Bouguereau. In his early 20s, Mr. Clark exhibited in the Paris Salon, and later in London, Vienna, Paris, New York and Washington.

He became a naturalized American citizen.

He is survived by his widow and a daughter of this city.

Funeral services will be conducted from Hanlon's funeral home, 841 H Street Northeast, today at 2 p. m., with burial at Brampton.

Actress Ona Munson announced in Hollywood yesterday that she would be married soon to Stewart McDonald, deputy administrator of the Federal Loan Agency, according to an Associated Press dispatch. Miss Munson, who played Belle Watling in "Gone With the Wind," formerly was married to Eddie Buzzell, movie director. McDonald took over his present post in December after serving six years as Federal Housing Administrator

Power Company Threatened With Sabotage Action

The Federal Power Commission last night warned the Ohio Public Service Company, Cleveland, of possible prosecution under the Anti-Sabotage Act, if the utility carried through a threat to pull switches at midnight Saturday on its lines connecting with the Ohio Power Company, Newark, Ohio.

The commission declared that such a disconnection "may cause serious disruption of electrical service to essential national defense industries both in the State of Ohio and in several adjoining States."

Sole purpose of the threatened disconnection, the commission said it had been advised by the company, was an intention to bring about immediate determination of a current proceeding in which the commission accuses the company of failing to comply with accounting requirements and the uniform system of accounts.

A commission spokesman said the apparent intention of the company was to remove itself from interstate commerce and thereby from the jurisdiction of the commission. He said, however, disconnection of the switches "will neither delay nor terminate the present investigation."

Disciples of Christ Leaders To Seek Fund for Defense Aid

Missionaries and other leaders of the Disciples of Christ denomination yesterday completed plans for tomorrow's formal launching of an "emergency million" drive for the church's work in national defense.

They met at Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northeast, where Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller declared that today is the time for a great "spiritual offensive, when spiritual and moral power of the church must come to its full height." He is pastor of National City Christian Church, the national edifice at Thomas Circle.

The need of adequate spiritual leadership in Army camps and defense communities was stressed by the Rev. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of the host church, while foreign missionaries told of the rising costs of their work due to the war.

Of the million, $150,000 will be allotted for defense work; $332,000 for home and State missions; $100,000 for education; $225,000 for debts; $35,000 for evangelism; $37,500 for better support of aged ministers and missionaries, and $100,000 for other expenses. Twenty-three thousand dollars will be used in the local area to met needs of the increased population and of the men in camps.

Presiding over the sessions were C. O. Hawley, director of the denomination's Unified Promotion Department, under whose sponsorship the drive will be launched tomorrow, when the visiting speakers will fill local Disciples' pulpits.

One of the missionaries who spoke yesterday was William Edwards, who was a passenger on the steamer Zam Zam sunk by a German surface raider in the spring. He was en route to his mission station in the Belgian Congo.

Other speakers were Dr. William T. Pearcy, of the Disciples' Board of Church Extension, Indianapolis; Dr. Royal T. Dye, veteran missionary from Belgian Congo; Dr. P. D. Suknandan, missionary from India; Fred Hughes, of Paraguay; Mrs. G. L. Hagman, of China; Miss Faith McCracken, Belgian Congo, and others.

Reciprocal Trade Pact With Mexico Is Being Explored

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of State Cordell Hull revealed yesterday that he was conducting exploratory conversations with Mexico to determine whether the negotiation of a reciprocal trade agreement was feasible. If one should be concluded, he said, it would be on the pattern of other reciprocal agreements, but very much limited in scope on account of the abnormal conditions resulting from the war.

The United States not only has not entered into a reciprocal trade agreement but never has had a commercial treaty with Mexico. If a reciprocal agreement should be reached now, it would be subsequent to the over-all agreement that is in the final stages of negotiation and deals with agrarian and other claims, as well as with the Mexican expropriation of oil properties. An announcement concerning the over-all agreement is expected before long. Indications are that only technical questions remain to be adjusted.

Spanish Taught 'Painlessly' To Officials and Diplomats

The Spanish language, more popular now than the Spanish guitar, read, studied, by men and women daily here, even on public conveyances while en route to work, has the city's society and diplomatic sets in verb-swinging dithers.

The British are studying it along with Yugoslavs, Poles, government officials, the officials' secretaries and a lot of young ladies who "find it interesting and especially so because of the times."

The interest, probable necessity of knowing it in the new and enlarging neighborliness in the Western Hemisphere, has brought "a painless" method of teaching it, a method involving open fireplaces to sit before in comfortable overstuffed chairs; a background of Pan-American flags and full permission to smoke in class. There will be, frequently, bimonthly conferences touching on historical backgrounds and cultures, followed by buffet luncheons.

The school which relaxed itself into these processes of instruction is the Latin American Institute at 1605 Connecticut Avenue, and among its students are Serge Krizman, Yugoslav Legation; Mme. Poradzewska, Polish Embassy, Miss Dorothy Campbell, Frederick Fraser, and Cecile St. Pere, of the British Embassy; Warren Lee Pearson, of the Export-Import Bank of Washington, and Kenneth Beh, of the British Air Commission.

Busy with this chore is Katherine F. Roderiguez, who studied languages at the Sorbonne and in Switzerland. Between classes at the institute she teaches Spanish to 16 Navy men and 11 marines several times a week at the Chamberlain School. Dr. Manuel de J. Salmi, graduate of the University of Havana, assists her.

Navy Starts Training 1400 Reserve Middies

Copyright by New York Times

The Navy yesterday began training 1400 special reserve midshipmen, selected from among college graduates as candidates for commissions as ensigns in the Naval Reserve.

More than 500 cadets reported to the training ship Prairie State at New York City, while about 900 entered Abbott Hall, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

Gobs and Girls Mingle Gaily for 'Navy Blues'

Two Jacks—Oakie and Haley—Share Earle Screen With Ann Sheridan and Martha Raye; Harry Reso, Roxyettes' 'Red Sails' on Stage

By Richard L. Coe
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"NAVY BLUES." Warner Brothers picturizaiton of a screen play by Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay, Arthur T. Horman and Sam Perrin, with Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley, Herbert Anderson, Jack Carson, Jackie C. Gleason, Richard Lane, William T. Orr, John Ridgely, Frank Wilcox, William Justice, Ray Cook, Selmer Jackson and the "Navy Blues" Sextette: Peggy Diggins, Georgia Carroll, Loraine Gettman, Marguerite Chapman, Katharine Aldridge and Claire James. Music by Arthur Schwartz and Johnny Mercer. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

BACK TO MUSICAL COMEDY go the Brothers Warner for their new timely comedy, "Navy Blues," which opened yesterday at the Earle. If this weren't so unequivocally September 1941, you'd think it was a decade ago, what with gay doings among the gobs, pretty girls, hula jam-sessions and nights 'neath the Hawaiian moon. Ann Sheridan, Martha Raye and the "Navy Blues" Sextette are the charmers in this one; Jack Oakie, Jack Haley and a comparative newcomer, Herbert Anderson, take care of the gags—of which there are aplenty.

ANN SHERIDAN

And when the Brothers Warner set their minds to screen musical comedy, they're on ground they know well. Swaying hips, sliding guitars, romantic tunes and martial music are ingredients they blend with canny pacing. Their wise-cracks are gruff and human, their characters have none of your sophisticated blarney. The result is a film that's likable, tuneful and frequently funny despite frantic efforts to outdo Messrs. Abbott and Costello.

All These Two Jacks Want Is a Little Jack

The two Jacks—Oakie and Haley—are gob buddies constantly searching a panacea to relieve their financial vacuum. Their buddies evidently mistrust them—in fact so much so that the audience's sympathy for them is frequently strained to the breaking point—a fatal error for a comedy. However that may be, their problem is to keep in the Navy a young hog caller from Iowa who turns out to be the best darn marksman in the Pacific. If they can make him reenlist, the boys stand to collect a minute fortune on bets in the forthcoming gunning trials. Love of course can always find a way. Thanks to the presence of obliging Ann Sheridan, love's path is easy. Yokel boy expands under her influence. The U. S. S. Cleveland is saved.

The notable principals perform in their most assured manner. Miss Sheridan continues to be as pleasant a personality she has accustomed us to expect. Martha Raye is happily buffoonish as Haley's sorely tried wife, undergoing notable torture during a trip in a duffle bag. Oakie and Haley give out with gags and double-takes and a gawky fellow who had minor roles in "No Time for Comedy" and "Honeymoon for Three" one Herbert Anderson, is amusing both as yokel and singer. And that Sextette is utterly ravishing.

"Navy Blues'" tunes include "In Waikiki," "You're a Natural" and, as the phrase goes, the title song. Lloyd Bacon's direction gives swift pace to a comedy that gained spontaneous applause from yesterday's first audience.

On the stage, the Roxyettes are particularly busy despite the presence of several worthy principals. The girls' most bewitching number this week is "Red Sails," a strikingly staged routine, admirably led by Roxyette Capt. Nancy Rader. Color and motion make this an outstanding item from their repertoire. They also bring down the curtain with a Scottish Highland number.

Harry Reso, whose comedy is blessed with being "different," does things that he really doesn't! Yola Galli returns to sing in both the South American and North American ways and the tumbling Danwills have a couple of tricks you won't see any other groups doing.

Notable in the new newsreels is the British action at Spitzbergen, removing the Norwegians to England and destroying the natural resources that mustached man is after.

ADDENDA: "Cuckoos on the Hearth," formerly the National's "Two Story House," pleased Burns Mantle of the 3,000,000 circulation. He found it "good fun" and gave it his not-too-often-given three stars . . . Tommy Dorsey's Band, with Ziggy Elman, Connie Haines, Frank Sinatra and the Pied Pipers, has been signed for a dance session at Turner's Arena on Wednesday, October 1. Tommy's take will be $1700! . . . Deepest appreciation from this column to Mrs. J. L. Whiteside for a neatly appropriate story of Horace Greeley as well as a welcomely understanding note . . . Next on the Phil Hayden "Jest-Rite Jamboree," which played Fort Belvoir this week, is Aberdeen Proving Ground Thursday night. Washie Bratcher's Orchestra plays another of its All-State dances tonight at the Washington, 9:30 to 1.

The Phantom Again

Chicago, Sept. 19 (INS).—Excuse me if I catch my breath before settling down to Hollywood news again after the most exciting three days of my life. Here in Chicago a long wire reaches me that Henry Koster (director of so many of Deanna Durbin's hits) steps into a producer-director's berth at Universal and that "U" is handing him the highest-budgeted picture ever filmed on that lot, "Phantom of the Opera." For years this studio has been toying with the idea of refilming the old Lon Chaney hit—but never with such elaborate plans. It will be in Technicolor and if you can believe all you hear "Gone With the Wind" is a piker compared to the production plans for "The Phantom."

"The Corsican Brothers" is Douglas Fairbanks jr.'s last picture for a long time. Young Doug has informed his agent that he definitely will not accept any more picture assignments and that he leaves here October 10 for Washington to await a Government assignment. From so many people I have heard what a wonderful job Douglas did for Uncle Sam on his trip to South America and there was talk for a time that he would be given a diplomatic post. But just between us I think it is much more likely that as a lieutenant in our Navy service he will be appointed to a battleship—or perhaps assigned to our Navy service in London, along with Robert Montgomery.

This Prankster Gave Westerns' New Audience

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Sept. 19.—When a man in the picture business actually figures out something new to entertain the customers, he deserves some credit. Our man today is George Marshall, who has, single-handed and over the opposition of some of the movies' mightiest master minds:

1. Turned the lowly horse opera into sophisticated entertainment.
2. Opened the doors of the de luxe movie theaters to his special brand of rootin', tootin, and shootin'.
3. Given the big time, Wild West epic a new lease on life, merely by replacing scowls with smiles.

In 1909 Marshall was graduating from the University of Chicago. In 1911 he was completing two years in a north woods logging camp. In 1912 he was wallowing in the grease, assembling four-cylinder Studebakers, folding tops and acetylene lamps available at added cost. In 1913 he was hanging around the front door of the Al Christie comedy factory with such other hopefuls as Harold Lloyd and Hal Roach, waiting for movie acting jobs at $3 a day. But this is no story of the life of G. Marshall.

Bound for Taos

Tomorrow he leaves for Taos, N. Mex., with Lucille Ball, James Craig, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Antonio Moreno, Tom Tyler, and others to start shooting the fourth of his tongue-in-cheek Westerns. This one is titled "Valley of the Sun" and is about the white man as seen through the eyes of the Indian.

For 20 years, as you've doubtless discovered, the movies' horse operas all have had the same plot, with the fine-minded hero, the horrible villain, and the bee-utiful girl for the F. M. H. to kiss after vanquishing the H. V.

"This plot was standard," Marshall recalled. "I know, I directed it myself, hundreds of times. But I couldn't help thinking all along that the 1890's made up a melodramatic period, whose actual flavor the movies might try to capture. And I couldn't quite swallow the movie Westerns' regular characters No man ever was so fine as their heroes; no man so bad as their villains.

"Fact is, the real life dramatics of the Wild West most usually came about when the boys rode into town from a winter on the range, with their pockets full of money and their minds full of ideas. They came in to have some fun and things automatically began to happen. That's kind of the way my pictures work out."

"The whole thing boils down to the fact that I'm trying to entertain customers, who I presume are intelligent," Marshall said. "They're just as smart as I am. Maybe smarter. So I don't write down to them. And I don't mind saying that the results have been gratifying."

Tut, Tut, Mr. Fadiman!

New York, Sept. 19.

SWANK: When Tess Slessinger, the short-story writer, returned to New York from Hollywood, MGM arranged for her stay at a special suite at the Waldorf. There she gave a swank party for all her old friends . . . Clifton Fadiman, who was one of the guests, became aware of the elegance of the surroundings. And when a waiter accidentally spilled some water, Fadiman lifted his index finger, summoned the headwaiter, and ordered: "Boy, a new suite for Miss Slessinger."

ROMANCE: Constance Collier, one of the most talented actresses Britain ever sent to Broadway and Hollywood, once was engaged to Max Beerbohm . . . "Yes," she confessed, "I was engaged to Max for a long time" . . . "Then why didn't you marry him?" she was asked . . . "Max," explained Miss Collier, "had carpet slippers on his soul."

COMPLAINT:. Beerbohm's first book published in America had a disappointing sale. The publisher advertised it merely by listing it with the rest of the hundred-odd books on his list, and considered that his publicity campaign . . . Beerbohm received a full report, and immediately registered complaint. "I came to you," he wrote, "to be Published—not Privashed."

ENTERPRISE: Sinclair Lewis, who will direct Sam Byrd's newest production, last night declared that he never again will act in the theater . . . "Why? Didn't you like acting?" he was asked . . . "I was too old when I started," Lewis replied. "I was 52 when I played my first role—and the ideal age is 51."

DAMAGE: One of the R. A. F. stories concerns Hitler's suggestion to Goering that they fly over London and inspect the damage done by their bombs . . . They took off in a plane, before dawn, with an escort of fighters. Goering was at the controls. Hitler soon fell asleep . . . He awoke at dawn, and saw below him a devastated city, with not a single building upright. "Wonderful, wonderful," he complimented Goering—who replied: "Sh, go back to sleep. That was Hamburg."

CHATTER: For the first time in their history, the swank East Side night clubs have banded together into a mutual welfare corporation—to make joint decisions involving policy, labor, costs, etc. . . . Vincent Sheean, who returned from England last week, leaves for China in a few days . . . Mrs. John Steinbeck has returned to San Francisco . . . Franz Werfel's new book, "Song of Bernadette," has been sold to the movies. B. Ogden Chosim, U. S. Prison Commissioner, will spend his honeymoon in South America on a good-will inspection of the prisons there . . . "Rudolph," the anti-Nazi who broadcast to Germany from Austria, then Czecho-Slovakia, then Amsterdam and finally Paris—each time escaping from the invading armies—now is in America, broadcasting his anti-Nazi attacks via shortwave to Paris.

HOMAGE: Stephen Longstreet, author of the new travel-book, "Last Man Around the World," now is in Hollywood, where he went to the Metro studio to see George Cukor, the director . . . The doorman, pursuant to customary regulations, refused to permit him to enter. Longstreet thereupon presented the review of his book which had appeared in Time Magazine. The doorman read the entire review, then bowed, and opened the gate.

Metropolitan

In a story dealing with the Navy Medical Corps assigned to the air force, Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray returned yesterday morning to the Metropolitan Theater in "Dive Bomber," a recent holdover attraction at the Earle.

Filmed in Technicolor with the cooperation of the Navy Department, the picture details the technical and physical inventions so important to the air fleet. The story ignores conventional romantic angles for strictly illustrative material of the Medical Corps and its duties. Its greatest weakness, however, is its unnecessary length, running over two hours and ten minutes.

Featured in the cast are Ralph Bellamy, Robert Armstrong, Regis Toomey, Allen Jenkins, Moroni Olsen, Alexis Smith and Dennie Moore, the latter two ladies being employed only for comic relief.

No Peace for Gene

Hollywood, Sept. 19.—Poor Gene Tierney seems to be having more family trouble. Her papa, without ever meeting Hubby Oleg Cassini, has condemned the man. And while en route here to see Gene, he received a wire from Gene that they'd meet him at the station. Papa wired back he wasn't coming if he couldn't talk to her alone. Gene's not only broken up but hopping mad. Seems she's supporting the family and sending a brother and sister through expensive schools. If they're not careful, some day soon she's going to say "Nerts" to the lot of them.

After all the fuss and fury over Doug Fairbanks' good-will trip to South America, I'll be darned if an oil company hasn't offered him a cushy job to pour on their good old oil for them down there.

Bette Davis and I did our job of writing a sequel to "The Little Foxes." We want Daughter Alexandra to marry the boy, but the minute the ceremony is over Regina must start her machinations all over again and try to separate them. She finally succeeds and the daughter's character develops into one like her mother. At the end of the picture she kills her mother and then goes mad. How's that for a sweet love story on a gruesome summer's day? Says Bette, "The mother never was any good, anyway."

And the reason Bette's not playing Camile in "King's Row" is that her bosses insisted she make a test for it. Now you tell one . . . It's amusing that after all the trouble N. B. C.'s had hanging onto their blue network Eleanor Roosevelt goes on the blue when she starts boosting that South American coffee. . . . Joe von Sternberg, who first introduced Dietrich to America, is one of the real showmen of the town. He's been out of harness much too long. Looks now as though his "Shanghai Gesture" would be one of next season's winners.

When Raoul Walsh asked an old Indian chief in "They Died With Their Boots On" to go up behind Errol Flynn and tomahawk him, the chief went into all kinds of sign language. This was the gist of it: "Musn't do that on the screen." Walsh wanted to know why not—they did it in the war. "Yes, but there were no cameras then. Young chiefs mustn't know that old chiefs took advantage of white men. You must kill a man now face to face." Yes, we got progress.

NEW FAD— Crocheting is the latest fad, and crocheted hats, gloves, bedspreads, and sweaters have become high style. You'll see all this pictured in Parade this Sunday, with this young lady as one of the illustrations. Other pretty girls in Parade include Lillian, Parade's "average girl," as seen by the glamour photographers, and June Havoc, beautiful sister of Gypsy Rose Lee.

BOOM PROBLEMS—Think Washington has boom town problems? Look at those of East Hartford, Conn., where they make warplanes. Parade brings you the picture story of what United Aircraft's expansion has done to a sleepy New England town. Also pictured in Parade in this Sunday's Post are Bill de Correvont, Northwestern's football hero . . . short article on a trip from Calcutta to Iraq . . . another on how Hitler has made over Britain without intending to do it . . . humor by James Thurber . . . school for Navy divers . . . possible tactics of a Japan-U. S. war . . . baby Lois learns to dress . . . U. S. movie propaganda in Latin America. Parade's variety of subjects is one reason you'll enjoy it. Other reasons: Parade's easy to read, modern, about real people!!

COSSACKS—

Bolshevik Russia is at war — and in the forefront of the battle are the famous cavalry units that were once the Czar's pride! That's the paradox of the Cossacks who divide their time between farming and fighting but prefer riding a horse to anything else. Parade's picture article on these fierce Russians shows action photos of some amazing stunts of horsemanship. Lead article in Parade this week is the picture story of Fred Allen and his radio show: how Fred gets the gags that keep you laughing, informal pictures of Kenny Baker, Portland Hoffa, and the Mighty Allen Art Players, what becomes of a radio comedian's big money.

HOW TO COOK A STEAK— Eighty-five thousand steaks a year are served by one famous New York steak house. Parade shows this restaurant's technique in preparing steaks that celebrities flock to buy. The pictures are guaranteed to make you hungry. Less appetizing but equally interesting is Parade's picture article showing how to camouflage a sniper or a machine gun. Lots of variety in Parade!

ALL NIGHT PARTY— A thousand people attended the U. S. O. "Lawn to Dawn" party in Carmel, N. Y., and Parade shows what a lot of fun they had there. Hit of the evening in more ways than one—was the game in which men threw baseballs at a bull's-eye, throwing a pretty girl out of bed every time the target was hit. You'll see this pictured in Parade, too, when you get The Washington Post this Sunday!

Rent Control

Now that Washington's real estate interests are in favor of rent control for the duration there seems to be no point whatever in further delaying the enactment of a satisfactory bill. It has long been evident that a great majority of the renters are looking to the Government for protection against arbitrary increases in this critical period. And the interest of the Government itself would certainly be promoted by a measure that would afford some degree of reassurance to defense workers now hesitant about taking jobs in Washington because of the high cost of living here.

The real estate interests appear to have taken an entirely reasonable attitude toward the problem. Indeed, the proposal to freeze rents at the level of September, 1940, might have come from tenants instead of landlords. It must be recognized, too, that some adjustments in rents may become necessary because of increased costs of operation. Any sound bill placing a ceiling on rents must be flexible enough to permit such changes under careful supervision by a governmental agency.

Because of the acute shortage of housing that is beginning to plague Washington, moreover, it is of the utmost importance not to discourage private building. Defense requirements call for a curtailment of residential building in general, but the same requirements demand an increase in the living quarters available to defense workers in Washington and some other cities. As an incentive to builders to continue their operations here, E. Barrett Prettyman, representing the real estate group, suggested to the House District Committee that rents for new dwellings be unrestricted for the first month of occupancy. Once fixed, however, they would come under the general "freezing" provisions.

With a choice of varying provisions from three bills before it, the House committee should now have no difficulty in drafting a satisfactory rent-control measure. We hope that it will proceed to do so without further delay. Administration of the measure will certainly cause fewer headaches if it goes into effect before further increases have taken place.

Dramatic Review

All this astrophysical universe needs is a really good press agent. Of course it has had a good deal of publicity from fellows like Eddington, Jeans, Millikan, Einstein and so on, but it hasn't been what you would call constructive publicity. It seems to have developed into a squabble about whether the universe is going bust because it is being wound up too tight or because it is running down—as if anybody cared which. All that sensible people ask of the astrophysical universe is—light but refined entertainment—something to take their minds off the war and the National League pennant race.

And yet when the Heavens put on that truly magnificent show Thursday night they played to an almost empty house despite the fact that admission was free. Lots of people missed it just because they had paid good money to see the movies or to sit in a supper club. Many of those who did see it hadn't any clear idea of what they were seeing. Some thought it was just the antiaircraft boys playing around with their searchlight. Others said that just because this smart guy, Orson Welles, could fool them once was no reason why he should think he could fool them twice. Three years ago, at the time of the great Martian invasion, such people had neglected to notice that, despite the cataclysm, their radios were still working; this time they were not at all alarmed by the fact that their radios had gone haywire. When the Dodgers-Pirates game was blotted out by the magnetic didoes, people thought it was because the masterful Mr. Reds Barber had got his lines mixed at last and had begun recommending a diet of antiseptic soap with sliced bananas and cream.

And all this just because the supercolossal superduper hadn't been properly advertised in advance. No previews, no interviews by Louella Parsons, no broadcasts by Cecil B. deMille. But, of course, the astronomers have an alibi. They are trying to tell us they had no possible way of knowing that the aurora borealis would suddenly decide to take to the road. They even seem to hint that there is something unethical and indecent about the aurora borealis playing as far south as Washington, D. C., and Jacksonville, Fla. They seem to suggest that it's just as well it got so little attention, because that might discourage its cousin, the aurora australis, from trying the same trick.

Now that we know all about it the aurora borealis may decide to give us another and even more brilliant performance. But we fear not. We fear that its feelings have been cruelly hurt. You know how sensitive great artists are.

Disgraceful Blue Plains

Washington has been shocked so many times by stories coming out of the Home for the Aged and Infirm that present reports of horrible conditions there seem mild by comparison. R. F. Camalier, counsel for the Senate District Committee, found Blue Plains to be "indescribably filthy and insanitary." Commissioner Guy Mason reports that the city's aged and infirm housed in that ramshackle institution are "treated worse than criminals." But there is nothing novel in their findings. Mrs. Roosevelt was shocked and depressed when she visited the home nearly two years ago. And a committee of Gallinger Hospital staff doctors described in detail the horrible conditions which put Blue Plains on a par with London's notorious Fleet Prison as it was a century ago.

Some few improvements were made following the outburst of public indignation aroused by those reports. This home for nearly 600 unfortunates, many of whom are bedridden, was actually allowed one full-time physician and several additional staff members. Some of its insane inmates were sent to St. Elizabeths. Some of those most urgently needing medical attention were transferred to Gallinger Hospital. A little painting was done; minor repairs were made; and some porches were covered to afford more room. WPA workers were temporarily assigned to the home as waiters, but this project is now being discontinued. With those minor reforms, Blue Plains slipped back into its routine as a day-to-day chamber of horrors for its inmates.

Plans for the purchase of a large site where a new home for the aged and several other public welfare institutions could be built were outlined some months ago and then abandoned. Congress had made its gesture toward reform by appropriating small sums for meager improvements. The Board of Commissioners was doubtless eager to go further, but it lacks driving force as well as control over the District's purse strings. So Blue Plains continues to accommodate the old folks of Washington in filth and squalor, to deny them adequate medical attention and to endanger their lives in "fire traps." It is a pitiful story. Yet it is precisely what the city has come to expect, for no one is fully responsible for this national disgrace. Ultimately, of course, the blame falls upon Congress, but the simple truth is that Congress knows almost nothing about Blue Plains, and, except for a few individuals, cares less.

Initiative in the solution of this public welfare problem ought to come from the local government. But Congress continues to deny the District a government from which initiative can be expected. Actually Blue Plains is a symbol of the incompetent system of government which Congress imposes on this voteless community. We hope that Senator McCarran and the Commissioners will be able to rescue the city's aged and infirm from the blight of long neglect that has fallen upon Blue Plains. They ought to realize, however, that every local reform movement will be under a severe handicap until the District is given a government with some degree of responsibility to the citizens whose taxes support it. For the makeshift system which has produced Blue Plains is even more obsolete than that disgraceful institution.

The Fall of Kiev

Today marks the end of the thirteenth week of the Battle of Russia. This circumstance offsets any tendency on the part of the Germans to rejoice in the capture of Kiev, a prize of real magnitude and the first major Soviet center to fall into their hands. For the present campaign on the Eastern Front has now lasted almost as long as all the other major campaigns waged by the German army since the war began, and it has proved to be, by all odds, the most costly. This the Nazis themselves acknowledge. According to their statement on casualties in the fight against Russia, the German dead number 84,354, the wounded 292,690, with 18,921 reported missing. Together with losses suffered by the Luftwaffe, the German casualty list totals 402,865. Actual losses have probably been far greater. But, taking the figures as they are, it is significant that these losses exceed the combined total of casualties suffered from September 1, 1939, to June 22, 1941.

But the Russians, too, have suffered terrible losses. And there can be no disguising the fact that the situation in which the Red armies find themselves at present is grim, indeed. The Russians have fought hard and well. They have confounded the prophets who were convinced that it would take Hitler between three and six weeks to smash the Soviet Union as he had previously smashed Poland, Norway, the Low Countries, France, Yugoslavia and Greece. But despite their valor, their tactical skill and organization that have won ungrudging tributes of admiration from foreign military experts, the Russians have steadily had to give way in the face of the terrific drive of the German Wehrmacht. Only on the central front have the Soviet troops managed to hold their own and there the offensive launched by Marshal Timonshenko appears to have died out. Kiev is lost; Leningrad surrounded; Odessa besieged; the Crimea practically cut off from the rest of Russia, and the Nazi forces are pounding ahead to Kharkov, one of the greatest industrial centers of the Soviet Union and the seat of many indispensable war industries. The road to the Don Basin and the oil-rich Caucasus appears to be open to the invaders.

The situation confronting Russia is undoubtedly critical. But the time has not yet come to assume that it is desperate. The loss of Kiev is a real blow to the Red army, one that became inevitable when the Nazis succeeded in establishing bridgeheads across the Dnieper and thus surrounding the Ukrainian capital from the rear. But Kiev's fall need no more be fatal to Russia's chances of holding out than the loss of any other city that previously fell into the hands of the enemy. As long as Russia continues to have an army in the field, the Battle of Russia will not have been won by the Nazis. That is why the United States and Great Britain are extending to Russia, at this critical moment, all the weapons they can spare, with the hope of prolonging as well as strengthening her resistance.

Shipping Strike

The Federal Government cannot be accused of having acted with undue haste in taking over ships tied up at their piers for a week as a result of a strike called by the Seafarers International Union to enforce demands for a war bonus. The vessels affected by the stoppage have been carrying cargoes to the American bases in the West Indies and returning with large quantities of bauxite, used in the manufacture of aluminum. The strike has thus had the effect of hampering this Nation's defense effort in two vital particulars. It is no wonder, then, that, after persistent efforts to mediate the dispute had failed, the Government found it necessary to intervene. If no settlement is reached in the next few days, the Maritime Commission will operate the ships.

There can be no argument regarding the advisability and necessity of paying extra compensation to seamen asked to assume the added risks involved in sailing on vessels plying in danger zones. The principle was long ago recognized and put into force. Recently at the suggestion of the Maritime Commission a new agreement on an industry-wide basis was successfully negotiated between the employers and two unions representing licensed officers. Efforts to conclude a similar agreement with the unlicensed men's unions broke down, however, and the subsequent strike has now tied up an estimated 14 ships.

Since the principle of war bonuses has been recognized and since the Maritime Commission has given its support to arbitration of the dispute no valid reason for the strike exists. Primarily the product of a feud between rival A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions, it simply could not be permitted to tie up a portion of the merchant marine in this emergency. Some hope has now arisen that the Government's strong action will clear the air. The S. I. U. has belatedly announced that it is willing to submit the dispute to arbitration, although on condition that the arbitrators take into account the union's request for a $60 monthly bonus for service in West Indian waters. Since any effort at arbitration must take into account the views and wishes of both sides, this seems, on its face, not an unreasonable request. If, on the other hand, it means that the S. I. U. will not agree to mediate unless and until its demands are first met, the Government will have no alternative but to take over and operate the struck ships.

LABOR DAY

What do I care if summer is coming
And people in buses throng the town,
Summer is long but soon is ended
With the people gone and the shutters down.

And what do I care that the summer people
Bind the shutters and leave the town.
What do I care if the hawk goes over,
Curling and turning and veering down,

Summer is long and summer is ended.
Boats are hangared along the beach.
Only the surf is loud and busy.
Over the fog the seagulls screech

This is a place for a boy to grow in.
Clean as the pebbles along the shore,
This is a place when the people leave it
That sweeps the summer behind the door.

Now shall the season thrive and freshen
The splendor of salt that mats the hair,
The sea and the boy when summer is over
Are happy as schoolmates at the fair.

Liberty And Propaganda

The isolationists, in my opinion, are not only trying to ruin our country, but they are also trying to destroy the morale and reputation of one of its best citizens. This man, Wendell Willkie, is only doing what he thinks best for this great country of America. Unity is what we need now more than ever before.

This letter is really in reference to the "Movie Propaganda" investigation conducted by Senators Wheeler, Nye, Clark, etc. I saw most of the movies mentioned and enjoyed them immensely. The United States is known through the world for its liberty. We certainly are not sticking up for liberty (which includes freedom of speech and press) when we begin to have our movies censored.

I have read that quite a few times Mr. Willkie was not allowed to cross-examine the witnesses at the Senate hearing. Not being an attorney I know little about the profession; but it seems to me that when cross-examination of important witnesses is prohibited, then the objectors to this procedure must fear that "something" may be proved—or in this case "something" may not be proved. The "something" being that these firms are not spreading any more—if as much—propaganda as radios, magazines, newspapers and books.

Thanks

At the meeting last night of the Board of Representatives of Local No. 2 of the National Federation of Federal Employes the officers of the local were directed to convey the thanks of the membership of the local to The Washington Post.

The excellent coverage of the recent convention of the N. F. F. E. held at Atlantic City by Jerry Kluttz was appreciated both as to content and fairness of reporting. Our local appreciates the courtesy of The Post in sending a representative to the convention.

May the National Federation of Federal Employes also continue to deserve the tribute paid to it in your lead editorial of Thursday, September 4, 1941.

Fall of Crete

Thousands of Cretans living in this great country and Canada and perhaps others in every democratic country were surprised to hear of the fall of the strategical island of Crete. It is true that Crete is one of the most strategical and invulnerable islands in the Mediterranean Sea. If it had been well fortified by England with an ample supply of antiaircraft guns and small arms to be used by its natives, it would never have fallen into the hands of two gangsters.

I am deeply worried over this situation because my mother and two sisters are there, and my two brothers are in the Grecian army. I do not know whether they are alive or dead; but, if they died, they fell in the defense of their native land and democracy as a whole for which I am well proud.

I am sure it was due to negligence, passiveness and indifference to defeat that the noble people fell. A great and historical race has fallen.

Benito seems to have forgotten that a few months ago this small nation had the proud, fierce Roman legions on the run! Now that Hitler has saved little Benito's false pride, he defies us as if his were the most powerful, invulnerable nation in the entire world! Ha! Ha! Especially after the small handful of Greeks had pushed him around and harassed him for six months like a bartender would push a bar towel!

Perhaps he is overly intoxicated by the triumphs of Caesar, his predecessor, who fell centuries ago on the very ground on which he stands. It was not long ago that I read in the Los Angeles Examiner that Hitler said he would not harm the Greeks for their heroism because of their great contribution of arts and culture to civilization. I wish to warn all the Greeks in this country and Canada not to be swayed by a gangster's venomous propaganda, because it is a mine of poisonous mineral. We all have read in the American newspapers that he had already executed the valiant women of Crete who dared to fight his well-armed legion with but sticks and stones!

Milk Prices And Profits

As a bewildered housewife I should like to ask a few questions of Mr. Henderson, the milk board and/or the world in general. It was announced that milk would go up one cent a quart. Why we don't know except that somebody decided that the well-being of the consumer was not affected by rising food prices, and that if everything else rises, why not milk? (Why not?) However, my mathematics being hopelessly inadequate to the situation, I find that milk that I had previously paid 11 cents a quart for, or 19 cents for two quarts, is now selling 13 cents a quart or two quarts for 23 cents. (Who gets that inflated one cent extra?)

Another curious phenomenon of the sale of milk is discovered in the highly laudatory serving of milk to children, in school. At 10 o'clock each child who has paid his 25 cents for the week is given a half-pint of milk from bottles. The distribution and collection of the bottles seems to be undertaken by the schools, its teachers and assigned pupils. The market for the milk companies seems to be reasonably assured in bulk. Why, then, may I ask, is milk being sold to children who should have it at the modest price of 20 cents a quart? Many families who would like to have their children served milk at school are being discouraged by the outrageous price. Is the well-being of children above the relief level less a matter of public policy than the lush profits of our milk companies?

Too Many Agencies Probe Strikes

Your occasional comments pointing out failures of administrative agencies to halt the mounting numbers of strikes are really constructive and encourage me to hope that The Post will inspire some much needed legislation.

As you said on September 16, the recent remarks of Mr. Robert B. Watts at Fordham "serve to re-emphasize the fact that Congress has done nothing to improve the machinery for adjustment of industrial disputes." And it is probably a fact that nothing will be done "without constructive leadership from the Administration."

A recent editorial in The Washington Post, captioned "Plethora of Strikes," emphasized a record that "will go down in history as a grave reproach to our industrial statesmanship."

Pertinently, the editor used the figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics to prove that 15,750,000 man-days of work were lost from January 1 to July 31—an increase five-fold over a like period in 1940. The editor finds that it "should be clear to the most patient apologist for strikes against the preparedness program that it is not enough to set up mediation machinery and call for the hearty cooperation of all. Somethihg more is needed."

Legislation is needed. Authority should be conferred on the Department of Labor to deal with labor disputes and other conflicting agencies should be excluded from meddling with its defined functions. The National Labor Relations Act was created to "diminish" strikes. Are strikes diminishing? The National Defense Mediation Board was named by the President to make it unnecessary for labor to resort to strikes. Have the activities of this board served to prevent strikes or does it serve to promote more and better strikes? There are too many boards and defense agencies dabbling now with attempts to settle strikes. It creates an unseemly competition for the "honor" of settling disputes and opens ways to encourage one side or the other to pick a board whose representatives may be expected to favor them.

There is only one President, one Congress, one Supreme Court, one Constitution. More of the kind would be confusing. There should be just one Federal agency authorized to deal with labor problems arising in industry. Such an agency should be established in the Department of Labor where the organic act of 1913 intended labor relations should be handled.

Enlarge the powers of the Conciliation Service to include processes of voluntary arbitration and compulsory investigation. When parties disagree authorize the conciliators to urge them to submit the issues in dispute to arbitration to be determined by a board selected by them or named by the Conciliation Service. If either side refuses to join in such arbitration, clothe the Conciliation Service with authority to forthwith hold a public hearing to ascertain the cause of the strike and find which of the parties thereto is most responsible or blameworthy for its existence and continuance. It should be stipulated that hearings shall be held in the city or town where the strikes or lockouts are existing and the Commissioner of Conciliation assigned to preside and take testimony should be given powers to summons and administer oaths.

At the conclusion of a hearing the commissioner should—unless the parties have reached an agreement—forthwith report his findings to the Secretary of Labor. Such findings should set forth which of the parties is most responsible for the strike or lockout and which one is blameworthy for its continuance. The commissioner may, in his discretion, recommend what should be done by the parties and the secretary shall continue the endeavor to induce them to accept the recommendation.

The main objective of a public hearing is to provide opportunity to bring the parties together in a good understanding which surely follows after their relative positions have been publicly clarified without bias.

In these days, disturbed as they are by activities of competing unions, there is obvious need for this form of public investigation to round out the processes of conciliation and voluntary arbitration. Neither employers nor representatives of unions can raise any valid objection against a law that would enable them to publicly present and describe the merit of their claims to an authorized agency of the Government. The right to strike is protected by statute. Those who strike should be required to tell why under oath whenever the public interest requires them to do so.

The Post Impressionist

John Hawley

John Hawley may not be a slot machine that always turns out three Liberty Bells, but he's the next best thing. John Hawley is a cab driver who goes around giving people money. And I think everyone should know about him, just as everyone should know about Whirlaway, Joe DiMaggio, trust funds, the Red Cross, polaroids, Ann Corio, double brandies, the new United States Navy bomb sight, birth control, welsh rarebits, Esquire, Glen Miller, cod-liver oil, and "Tobacco Road."

I was standing on Connecticut Avenue out by the Shoreham Hotel. It was a bright, sunny day and all the people who strolled by were talking happily about the good breeze which was frisking up out of Rock Creek Park. But I wasn't interested in the weather. I had fish to fry. It was a quarter to 4, and I had to go on the air at 4 o'clock.

A lot of cabs were whizzing by, but they were all full, and besides, all of them were going in the wrong direction. People keep telling me that ladies don't lean on things, but I leaned up against a good solid oak tree and watched the cabs go by. Dozens of them. Yellow ones, orange ones, black ones. Then along comes John Hawley, driving a blue and gray job, and with nothing more in the back seat than a couple of sunbeams. Suddenly the air was torn with a shriek that could have been second cousin to a steam siren. "Golly, did that come out of me?" I thought. It must have, because the next thing I knew the blue and gray had pulled up beside me, swung open the door, and there I was rolling along downtown just like all the other people.

Speeding toward the radio station I had time to fish out a lipstick and compact and do a little nervous repair work on the face that was soon to launch a few paltry quips.

With three minutes to spare we pulled up at the station and I looked for my change purse. And looked for it, and looked for it. It was safe. Safe at home on the dressing table where no one could get at it, including myself. "Oh, my gosh!" That, I knew came out of me, because even under the stress of the moment I recall with what pride I refrained from using the more colorful phrases which occurred to me.

"Sump'n wrong?" asked John Hawley.

"Left my money at home," I said weakly. I knew he wouldn't believe me. Knew he couldn't believe me. Heard too much about that old stall of leaving a wallet in another purse. "Reckon you'd better take me home," I said miserably. That broadcast meant a heck of a lot to me, too.

"This ought to be enough to get you through and see you home," said John Hawley, reaching down into his back pocket and fishing out a couple of bills. Won't be able to come back for you. Got another job."

"Gosh," I mumbled, "you're a peach. I'll never forget it. I'll give you my name and address."

"That's okay," he said. "Don't need it. My name's John Hawley. Here's my address. You can stop in sometime and leave it."

"I'll be there tonight for sure," I said, scuttling out of the cab.

"No hurry," he said. "Good luck with your show," and with a warm smile he was gone.

The show was a flop. But that didn't matter. I kept thinking about John Hawley and how we'd all be a lot better off if there were more of us like him. More of us who were kind, and giving out a little as we go along, instead of making such a grim business of living.

I went around to that address that night like I promised. It was pouring rain. It was raining harder than it has rained in Washington in months. Sheets of it. Hard driving sheets that beat straight down like a hailstorm. I was soaking wet when I got there. I was kind of glad it was raining. I thought maybe it would show John Hawley how much I appreciated what he had done.

Mr. Hawley wasn't at home. He was out cruising somewhere in the blue and gray job. But his wife was there. A sweet and gracious woman who demurred at the thought of my coming through the rain to keep a promise about such a little thing. "It was nice of you to come," she said, "but you really shouldn't have done it."

And his son was there. He stood quietly watching me as I dripped water all over their front hall. A fine, handsome, bright-eyed little fellow about 6 years old. I wondered if his name was John, too, and if he would grow up to be as "regular" as his dad. Somehow I think he will. I think John Hawley will see to that. I think he's that kind of a guy.

Stranger Than Fiction

What's the matter with us? Daily the world situation is unfolded before our very eyes. Through the medium of radio and press an exciting record of current history is afforded each and every one of us. But how many people do you know that do not switch stations the moment a news announcer hits the air? How many people do you know that read below the headlines? A drama with real life figures is being acted out before our very eyes—a drama, so intense, so much stranger than fiction is being recorded in the history books, that the average man, who is affected almost wholly, understands little of the whys and wherefores. And why? Merely because he is not seizing the opportunity to read and to listen.

Is it this national disinterest in world affairs that has slowed the defense effort? Was it the same kind of disinterest that helped bring the once victorious French to their knees?

Great and all encompassing events are revealed in each edition of our daily papers, and we refuse to take notice because it's the "same old stuff every day."

The Case For A Smaller Army

LIPPMANN

THERE are, I believe, powerful reasons for saying that the time has come to reconsider our military policy and to examine carefully the advisability of reducing the size of the Army. It may be useful to state the reasons, and it will, I trust, be clear to anyone who follows the argument that the very last thing intended is to start an agitation which could embarrass our military leaders in their tremendous task.

FOR Gen. Marshall one can have only profound respect and great admiration and all deference, and in Secretary Stimson the Nation possesses a man who in his activities is the model of the public servant and in his life of the patriot—an exemplar of the virtues which have made and will perpetuate the Republic. Thus, the argument which follows is not based, as the reader will see, on the idea that our military policy has been a mistake but on the tentative conclusion that it is out of date and that it now needs to be revised in order to conform to the fact that the state of the war and the character of American policy have changed greatly since our present Army plans were adopted.

The argument in brief is that the greatly expanded army was ordered in the period when we feared our own complete and compulsory isolation—in the summer of 1940 when we anticipated the fall of Britain and there was as yet neither a lease-lend policy nor a naval partnership to protect the two oceans. The conclusion of the argument is that today the effort to raise such a large army so quickly is not merely unnecessary but undesirable in that it interferes with our lease-lend and naval policy, in that it obscures and confuses the nation's understanding of American national policy and is in fact the basic source of most of the discontent which exists in the army camps and spreads its infection beyond the camps.

IT is very important that we should remember and should realize clearly why, in July-September, 1940, the President and Congress took the unprecedented step of adopting conscription to raise a mass army.

The step was taken because for the first time in our whole history, there was the gravest danger that the navy would find itself outmatched and unable, therefore, to guarantee that there would be time to raise, train, and equip an army. Fearing the fall of Britain, which was anticipated not merely by the Lindberghs but by the most reliable men, our first line of defense—which is, of course, the navy—was not strong enough to guarantee the protection of American vital interests and the security of the Western Hemisphere. Therefore, it became necessary as a matter of elementary prudence to raise a large army hurriedly as a second line of defense.

The program for a rapid expansion of the army was adopted in face of an extreme emergency—in case we became completely isolated in the world and encircled by the allied conquerors of Europe and Asia. Like all measures which have to be taken in the stress of emergency, our military program had grave defects. It is not possible to expand an army so greatly and so quickly and to do it well. There were not enough experienced officers. The proportion of raw recruits to seasoned troops was very much higher than sound military policy would approve. There was not enough equipment.

Therefore, when Britain had survived and America had adopted lease-lend and then had begun to occupy the oceanic outposts and to police the seas—the defects of the military program became more and more objectionable as the extreme emergency which had justified the program declined. The fact that the military policy no longer fitted the situation undermined morale in the army, and it fed the isolationist agitators who said that the boys were being prepared not, as originally promised, for the defense of the Americas but as a great expeditionary force to fight in Europe.

This complex of circumstances centering around the great expansion of the army is now, I believe, the cancer which obstructs national unity, causes discontent which subversive elements exploit, and weakens the primary measures of our defense, which are the lease-lend program and the naval policy. I think that a surgical operation is at least indicated—an operation to shrink the army which will, at the same time, increase its efficiency.

The operation is indicated because, under lease-lend and the unfreezing of the navy and through a foreign policy which has strengthened our position in Asia and in the Americas, the conditions which called for a sudden grest expansion of the army no longer prevail. We have decisively strengthened our naval position, not merely by new ships and the new bases but by our collaboration with the British navy. We do not now need in any foreseeable future so large an army as we thought we might need if in fact we had become isolated and encircled. We still need, of course, a strong, small army for emergencies in this hemisphere and for our strategic outposts. But we do not now need a great mass army on the European scale, and we can make far better use of our weapons—over and above those required for a smallish crack army—by shipping weapons abroad than by keeping them here to train a much larger army than we have any prospect of having to use.

AS a matter of fundamental strategy in the conflict, our role is on the sea and in the air and in the factory—not on the battlefields of Europe or Asia. Our army program, now that we have lease-lend and the navy in action, should be made to conform to this basic American strategy. All popular doubts, all political confusion, all ambiguity, should be removed by a clear decision to shrink the army and concentrate our major effort upon the navy and the air force, and lease-lend.

It can be argued, I submit, that the world situation justifies this and that our fundamental policy requires it and that the American nation instinctively desires it, and, that proposed by the President on the recommendation of his military advisers, it would be greeted with profound relief and great enthusiasm.

Newsreel From S. A.

By Carlos Nagel

A Statue To Hitler

NIMBLE-WITTED Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Secretary of Foreign Relations of Brazil, first astounded a distinguished group of table companions at an official dinner in this country, and then caused a storm of hilarity when he began a speech: "On my return to Brazil I shall recommend that we erect a statue to Herr Hitler." There was a long pause, deep silence and worried looks by Brazilian Embassy members. "For it is Hitler," he continued, "who has at last succeeded in drawing the attention of the United States to Brazil."

Facetiously speaking, the United States Government or, better still, the American Hotel Association, should feel just as obliged to Herr Hitler.

Travel by those Latin Americans who used to spend their money periodically in Europe has increased enormously to the United States. From Brazil alone tourists to the States increased nearly 150 per cent between 1938 and 1939. Only the fear of approaching war may have diminished this beneficiary influx of South Americans who want to see what these United States are like. From a business as well as from a political point of view it is paramount that this country keep alive this trend. The average South American, however, is scared to visit the States because of rumors of the high cost of living here.

THERE is among us today Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, commander of the Venezuelan army, former President of the Republic and once Minister of War under Juan Vicente Gomez.

Only by recalling the last days of the famous "Tyrant of the Andes," Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, better remembered in Venezuela as "El Bagre" (the catfish), and the first days of Senor Lopez Contreras' government, can we really appreciate what this man stands for in his country.

Dictator Gomez of Venezuela ruled his country with an autocratic power reminiscent of the Middle Ages before Hitler became the most absolute ruler of modern times. Utterly uneducated, Dictator Gomez's sharp mind and uncanny ability for finances outwitted the trained international financers who came to bargain for Venezuela's riches. Reputedly one of the most brutal despots in history, his people feared and hated him for 27 years. On his death in December, 1935, he left in the tragically famous "Rotunda"—the Venezuelan Bastille—hundreds of political enemies who had been dying a slow death, successors of [illegible] sands who had dared to raise their voices against tae [illegible] tator who himself lived to be 80. His dictatorship has been called "a brilliant study in contrasts," and well it may, since the country found itself at Gomez's death without any debts whatever, with 96 million bolivars in the treasury, with some of the best highways in South America and with an excellent educational system for the people. He furthermore appointed from his deathbed his successor, Gen. Lopez Contreras, something as hard to explain as if Adolf Hitler should choose a man with President Roosevelt's ideals to succeed him in the German government.

Acting President Lopez Contreras took over the country during days of hysteria expressed by a people which after many years saw itself free from tyranny. Lopez Contreras was able to dispel fear and suspicion caused by his former connection with Gomez. He insisted on rule by the constitution which had been nonexistent for 27 years. He did not take over the Presidency until the Congress formally appointed him.

Lopez Contreras, tall, thin, bespectacled, a career-man in the army, steadily gained the confidence and admiration of his country. He steered Venezuela through its first years of real freedom, brought again the country into normalcy, and today he is among us as head of his country's army, an exponent of true democracy.

THERE are certain islands in the Southern Pacific, off the coast of South America which, like so many other sea-bound, tiny plots of land throughout the world, have been destined to play exciting roles in the history of mankind. Temporarily forgotten, these colonies again and again suddenly come into prominence.

The activities of Nazi sea-raiders, as denounced by President Roosevelt recently, have made the Galapagos Islands come again into prominence. An unidentified German ship was supposed to have received aid from the inhabitants of the Galapagos. Outside of the Ecuadorian authorities, the dwellers of the islands amount to about 1500, mostly engaged in fishing to such an extent that a concern under the name of Pacific Developing Co. is planning to industrialize fishing on a large scale.

In the recent past one of the islands has been mentioned as the "heaven-on-earth" of a rather moody German woman trying to "get away from it all." Her method was to establish a colony in which she, the Baroness von Wargner, was the only woman and the only ruler. A mysterious murder among the colonists made Ecuadorian authorities put a stop to the venture.

Although American ships are at present looking for evidence of German raiders in the vicinity of the Galapagos, no proofs of such activities have been found.

Another colorful island looked upon with suspicion by Chilean as well as American authorities, is the island of Juan Fernandez, off Valparaiso, an ideal spot in which raiders could provision themselves with water and food. In the last World War the waters off this island became the battleground of some British and German warships, and the latter were sunk. German survivors were interned by the Chilean authorities first at Juan Fernandez Island itself and later in the Quiriquina Islands off Coronel.

The Gallup Poll

British Have Changed From Defensive To Offensive Sentiment in 10 Months

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Editor's Note: The following exclusive story is an example of the way public opinion measurement has added a new dimension to journalism—and even to history. The British Institute of Public Opinion uses the same methods as the Gallup Poll in the United States.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 19.—The change from a defensive to an offensive psychology among the men and women of Britain is illustrated today in results of a nation-wide sampling of public opinion in the British Isles.

"What do you consider the most important war problem the British government must solve in the next few months?" voters were asked by the British Institute of Public Opinion.

Ten months ago ago, when that question was first asked, the people of Britain were undergoing the first terrible weeks of the Nazi aerial bombardments, and the chief problem, the voters said, was defending their homes and lives against the night bombers.

Trend Change Depicted

Only four months ago, the problem of night bombings had receded considerably into the background, and the voters of Britain said the "big job" was to stop the shipping losses caused by Nazi submarines and surface raiders—a menace that threatened to bleed British resistance to death.

But today, with Russia engaging Adolf Hitler's forces on the vast Eastern front, British minds are preoccupied more than ever before with the straight question of an invasion of the continent and with other offensive moves.

Here, in the order of frequency, is what Britons told interviewers in reply to the question:

1. Invading the continent.
2. Increasing the speed of war production.
3. Maintaining food supplies.
4. Night bombing.
5. Help to Russia.
6. Checking submarine attacks and shipping losses.
7. Organizing man power more efficiently.

In addition to these replies, which were entirely voluntary and not prompted by lists of any kind, about five persons in every hundred said the chief problem would be "ending the war."

In recent by-elections in Britain, candidates who favored ending the war at the present time, or making a negotiated peace with Hitler, have received between 6 and 8 per cent of the total vote.

Attitude Year Ago

Less than a year ago, in November, 1940, Britishers ranked the chief problems of the country as follows:

1. Night bombing.
2. Shipping losses and food supply.
3. Increasing production of arms and aircraft.
4. Public health.
5. Preparation for an offensive.
6. Evacuation problems.

All U. S. Defense Efforts Aimed At Nazis, McCloy Says

By the Associated Press

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 19.—John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, declared today that American defense preparations "are not made in the abstract—they are pointed at only one source of infection, and that is Germany."

In an address before the Michigan Bar Association, McCloy declared that "some of us talk and act as if this country were neither engaged in nor concerned with this world turmoil. One second's reflection is sufficient to convince us that we are.

"We have as much chance of ignoring this war as a man has of ignoring an elephant in his parlor.

100 Divisions in Reserve

"I submit that objective men—and lawyers are objective men or else they couldn't make a living—must look up from isolation and intervention discussion and orient themselves to facts, for in the light of those facts, whether we should or should not take part in the struggle is about as realistic a debate as the medieval dispute as to which equidistant bale of hay a starving but theoretical donkey would move."

McCloy told the lawyers that Germany had 300 divisions totalling nine to ten million men under arms and that perhaps 100 of these were yet to be thrown against Russia. He said it was probable that hostilities would spread to the Mediterranean area, Spain and in north and west Africa.

Today, he asserted, the war's "hottest flame is burning before Leningrad and the rich Donetz Basin of Russia, but tomorrow you may almost be sure that it will be flaring up in the Mediterranean, in Spain and west Africa."

McCloy's figures on German strength apparently represented the latest estimates made with full weight given to losses in the Russian campaign and compared with earlier estimates of 240 Nazi divisions and with Russian reports that the Germans were being compelled to call in divisions from occupied countries all over Europe.

Germany, he said, "has 300 divisions under arms—nine to 10 million men; England has only a fraction of that number; we have 33 and a cavalry brigade. Its air force, alone, is as large as our entire army."

Organization Differences

(Approximately half of the German army is in divisions, the other half composing various supporting combat units, maintenance and supply troops. The United States Army's 33 divisions contain approximately 499,000 men out of 1,400,000 in the Army. Extensive coast defenses, overseas garrisons and selectees under training account for the greater proportion of nondivisional troops in the American army.)

"It is estimated that perhaps 100 of Germany's divisions have yet to be engaged in Russia," McCloy continued. "The tanks and airplanes which Germany can muster on any one day exceed all the tanks and planes which were engaged in all of the last war on all sides. With these weapons Germany wages war on the basis of a strategy that encompasses the globe."

As for America's part in the opposition to the German struggle for world mastery, McCloy said that "we already have within our means full command of the sea, if we wish to express it," and he added that "with England we will at not too far a time command the air, and next year our armies, if needed, will be prepared to respond to any task we now foresee."

Red Envoy's Wife Quits Tokyo; Floating Mine Dispute Flares

Tokyo, Sept. 19.—With Russian-Japanese relations growing uncertain, Mrs. Constantin Smetanin, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, and 50 members of the embassy staff here left for home today.

The tone of the stock market, which had been buoyant in hope of an American-Japanese rapprochement, became cautious, which financial commentators attribute to the Japanese protest to Moscow regarding floating mines.

The press has suddenly begun displaying great interest in the strength and condition of Russian military defenses in the Far East.

Koh Ishii, the cabinet spokesman, stated that under international law mines must be so constructed that if set adrift they either sink or explode. Consequently, he said, Japan demands that the Soviet government either comply with international law or cease putting out mines entirely.

Asked about reports of a Soviet ship concentration in Manila, Ishii said, Japan has no objection to the shipment of Philippine materials to Russia. Japan's stand, he explained, is that Japan cannot remain indifferent to the shipment to Russia of munitions and fuel for war purposes.

Manchukuo Is Years Ahead Of Japan, Industrialist Says

By Otto Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Sept. 19.—Ideologically, politically and economically Manchukuo is rapidly forging ahead of Japan and is chafing under restrictions imposed by the present situation in which she must be satisfied with Japan's cast-off clothes when she needs America's capital and large-scale machinery, Yoshisuke Aikawa, president of the Manchuria Industrial Development Corporation of Shinking, told the Japanese public today.

Coming after the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the outbreak of the "Manchuria incident" yesterday which was in honor of Japan's military victory in Manchuria, statements by Aikawa, who is visiting Tokyo and was interviewed by the newspaper Yomiuri, are particularly striking.

"Manchukuo," Aikawa said, "is a vast country which cannot apply the small-scale technique used in Japan. Here, tiny letters are written on grains of rice. In Manchukuo, letters must be written with a broom. Ten years ago a naughty boy played with arms in Manchuria and old man Takahashi (Admiral Sankichi Takahashi) in Japan got very angry. But the boy has rapidly grown up. He is now leading his elder brother. In all respects Manchukuo is ahead of Japan."

To Retsu Kiyosawa, the noted diplomatic commentator, the development of Manchukuo holds out the possibility of squaring the "Atlantic Charter" proclaimed by President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill with the Triple Alliance thus reaching a settlement with the United States which would avert the danger of war in the Pacific, writing in Keiyoku, a magazine, Kiyosawa says:

"In order to settle various pending issues between Japan and the United States through diplomatic channels, the joint Anglo-American declaration should offer the necessary chance."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Defense and Dresses

Whenas in silks my Julie goes
With frills and gadgets on her clothes
She may look sweet and quite exotic,
But, lady, is it patriotic?

That will be the logical question this fall and winter. Donald M. Nelson, director of priorities, has told the dress manufacturers and retail store operators that frills, decorations and costume jewelry must be eliminated from women's clothes to help the defense program.

Ladies, the fate of the world in some measure may depend on your next choice of suits and dresses. By an extra flounce you may be retarding the completion of a bomber. Through one little decoration you may be tossing a monkey-wrench into the production of Army and Navy equipment.

Some of the oomph you have become accustomed to will now have to go toward the fight for the four freedoms.

Shorter skirts are being urged also, but here Mr. Nelson is treading on dangerous ground. There is the danger of nudity being defended as a matter of all-out aid to Europe.

And a girl like Sally Rand may defend her latest strip tease as a blow at Hitlerism.

It is difficult to see how skirts can be made much shorter. In the words of an old song:

A patriot is Lucy White—
Her clothes are short and pretty tight;
When she sits down you realize
How great has been her sacrifice.

We think Mr. Nelson has his work cut out for him in trying to monkey with women's styles, war or no war. Especially if he gets around to taking in hats. There is one thing no woman can be expected to do—even to save democracy—and that is to pick out a simple hat.

You can wave the flag, play "The Star-Spangled Banner," rebroadcast a Churchill radio message and proclaim that the enemy is at the gate, but she will get that cockeyed bonnet or bust.

Mr. Nelson appeals to manufacturers to reduce the variety of shoe styles, too, and one peek in a shoe store window will convince you that the business can stand it. Changes in women's shoe styles come out as fast as new vitamins.

Then, too, Mr. Nelson urges that drug stores cease demanding such a wide variety of products. He thinks needed products could be conserved if apothecary shops would cease trying to sell everything in the catalogue, up to and including step-ladders, slip covers, skid chains and the Harvard Classics.

And he has something there.

Most of the larger hotels in New York have raised their rates. We knew that just as soon as a point was reached where they could cease complaining about business being terrible, this would happen.

There is now a threat of a general railroad strike. It may present a swell chance for the Government to pick up a lot of railroad systems for fall and winter wear.

Green Salutes Hod-Carriers

WILLIAM GREEN, that stout friend and unfailing defender of the gangster in the union movement or racket, has resounded again on behalf of hoodlum rule in a union of the American Federation of Labor, this time at the convention of the so-called hod-carriers' union, an organization of Government-protected extortionists. This meeting, the first since 1911, is now current in St. Louis under the presidency of Joseph Victor Moreschi, who never was elected to that office or any other national office of the union by any vote of the members or the locals. In the entire present list of national officials only one, Achilles Persion, the secretary-treasurer, ever was elected to any national office by the members of the locals. His term would have expired 25 years ago but for the fact that the constitution provides for elections only at the national conventions, of which this year's is the first in 30 years.

PEGLER

In describing Green as a stout friend and unfailing defender of the gangster in the union movement I remind you that he indorsed as a man of good character a white slaver who was the boss racketeer of one of Green's worst unions and an open associate of notorious criminals; that Green also indorsed Gangster George Browne, the president of the stage and movie employes' union, with whom he sits in the cabinet or executive council of the A. F. of L., and that in a famous St. Louis case he upheld a band of criminals who were persecuting the rank and file and repudiated the victims of their vicious exploitation.

I CALL attention also to the fact that the general counsel of the A. F. of L., Joseph Padway, appointed by Green, is general counsel of Gangster Browne's union and that Padway accepted $1000 from George Scalise, the crook whose good character Green certified, ostensibly as payment for his service in revising the constitution of Scalise's union. That constitution in the revised condition is at once a hilarious travesty and an evil writ, but Padway admits that he got the $1000 from Scalise and that he, too, certified to the Department of Justice that Scalise was a man of good character in an effort to obtain a Presidential pardon for a man who was even then one of the most spectacular crooks, though not necessarily the worst, in the entire history of the union racket.

Addressing the St. Louis convention of the hod carriers' racket, Mr. Green declared that all five million members of the A. F. of L. unions, with one exception, were law-abiding men. He did not name the exception, who might have been his friend Scalise or his friend John Nick, the convicted St. Louis crook, or his friend Umbrella Mike Boyle, the convicted Chicago crook, or his friend Jack Dempsey, the renegade, crooked, convicted Cincinnati cop who is national secretary-treasurer of the iron workers, or his friend Willie Bioff, another white slaver and Capone mob criminal, currently under indictment in New York with Gangster Browne on charges of extorting money from employers through the weapon of his union charter.

GREEN attempted to link the unfortunate rank-and-file victims of criminal union bosses with the crooks who prey upon them and to make it appear that an attack on the criminals is an attack on the workers and an attempt to lower their economic standards. It will be seen, however, I believe, that Green, himself, is an enemy of the rank-and-file member and worker in that he has persistently lent the prestige of his position to the defense and encouragement of the gangster, both by positive statement and action and by open indorsement of Gangster Browne.

The St. Louis convention of the hod carriers received an "account of the stewardship" of the self-elected national officers, in which the entire financial statement of this period, involving many millions of dollars, constituted only 22½ pages of widely spaced figures divided into two general columns—"receipts" and "disbursements"—and two paragraphs of "recapitulation." Details were not given, the explanation being that sufficient detail had been supplied from time to time in interim reports, of which a typical example gives no more effective detail than the grand summation of the 30 years' "stewardship." And Green's salute to the union was delivered at the very moment when a fighting minority was being beaten off before his very eyes in an attempt to hold the election of officers according to the method specified by the constitution. The constitution says the election shall be "by secret paper ballot," but the mob in command of this army of 300,000 American toilers flouted that provision to hold, instead, an election by roll call while Green was mumbling that "dictatorship will never come to America because democratic working men will not stand for it."

Thus are "labor's gains" protected by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, whose executive council includes a gangster, whose attorney general is counsel for union racketeers and whose building trades department in Washington includes Herbert Rivers, second vice president of the licensed Moreschi group of extortioners.

Russia's Rainy Autumn Soon Gives Way to Severe Winter

Now that the first snow has been reported in Finland and rains have set in through western Russia, what are the fall and winter weather prospects along the Russo-German battlefront?

"The autumn season is unusually short in European Russia," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "Snow may replace rain in the central and northern sections any time after October 1. The days grow much shorter and frosts quickly become sharp at night.

"The September mean temperature of more than 51 degrees Fahrenheit in Moscow and Leningrad drops to about 40 degrees in October. The November mean falls slightly below the freezing mark in both cities, while in December it is 23 degrees in Leningrad and 18.5 in Moscow. January is still colder—a mean of about 16 in Leningrad and less than 14 in Moscow.

"Since western Russia is open country with no mountains, temperatures in general are similar, although in the Ukraine above-freezing weather lasts slightly longer. Kiev's September mean is 58 degrees, dropping to 45 in October, about 33 in November, less than 26 in December, and 21 in January. On the Black Sea coast, Odessa, with a mean of 62 in September, reaches a freezing mean only in December. Odessa's fall and winter temperatures are comparable to those of Portland, Me.

"Although the actual autumn rainfall in western Russia is not especially heavy, it plays havoc with transportation because of the poor quality of the roads. The average September rainfall in Leningrad and Moscow is little more than two inches; Chicago, by way of comparison, normally has about three inches in that month. Around Kiev and Odessa normal precipitation is even lower than in the north."

Creator of Captain Hornblower Is Confident of British Victory

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

C. S. Forester, who created Capt. Hornblower from a movie producer's name and a passion that England mustn't die, has fenced at last the boundary between reality and romance that he was so adept at leaping.

Here yesterday, sprawled during an interview on a hotel bed, restless, boring into his own thoughts, trying to help the interviewers "because I've been a newspaperman myself," Forester said he was "here in British government service and kindly let it go at that."

He is doing nothing else for the while. Concentrating on England, nothing of fiction is piling in his mind. He doesn't like the suggestion that daring men ever "piled" in his mind or that all hours of his days were concentrated on slanting decks pitching in seas. Ideas, he said, came to him about one a year. But now he has fenced off romance entirely for a while.

His ideas, anyway, were strange and variable. His processes were something like this:

FORESTER relaxed on the hotel bed, talked about his friends in England

In 1936, going home from Hollywood where he had been working, his ship's wireless carried word of a threatening movement by Hitler into the Rhineland. He said he saw the danger to England and would write a story of England with its back to the wall. The freighter he rode bucked the seas and up from the water strode a great eighteenth century sea captain, unbeatable for long and England in all of his sinew.

But this striding fellow the sea gave up as an offering to an anxious mind had no name on his dripping coattails and casting about for one that had a ring of suggestion to romance and strength Forester remembered his friend, Arthur Hornblow, a producer for Paramount Pictures.

Post Staff Photos

HE WAS RESTLESS, tried to help the interviewer "because I've been a newspaperman myself"

"It suggested a name to me: Capt. Horatio Hornblower."

But, his ideas are variable.

George Forester, 8, his son, sometimes wouldn't eat his lunch and Forester saw that telling something fanciful at mealtimes helped matters along. The man who could splash blood into the riggings told his son of Poo-Poo and the Dragon, having to do with a perfectly normal little boy who owned two tame and circumspect dragons, a tale adequate to childhood's purposes since children love things they can rationalize, he said. George began eating better. The children of the neighborhood came to hear it, too, and Little, Brown & Co. will publish it in February.

Another story of his, "Beat to Quarters," will appear in tomorrow's Post as a complete novel.

He spoke of Poo-Poo more eagerly than of Hornblower. The great sea captain bored him to death in the writing, he said. But toward the dragon he was affectionate. The dragon isn't technical. It developed simply as something in a home. Hornblower had to contend with weather, ropes and the human spirit, matters the dragon has risen above. Forester was helped by some old reading he had done.

There is a book, he reminded, called Falconer's Marine Dictionary, published around 1816. He had read it in early life and learned precisely how to get a ship into trouble and then remedy all the difficulties. Besides, he had sailed many seas since childhood. The son of a British government official in Egypt, he frequently went to England, once to be shipwrecked.

Now he has dimmed off romance and focused his eyes against it for a while. He isn't at all sure he will be remembered for Horatio Hornblower, but thinks he could be remembered for a factual work on sea power versus air power, an enterprise he hopes to tackle after the war, when history has written the decision and perspectives are clear. But this factor of bein remembered isn't to be overemphasized because Forester isn't the kind of writer given to such botherings. He can sprawl too easily, too relaxed on a bed to have much temperament.

He relaxed there, talking much about his friends in England and recalling that he had known some very "arty" ones. Now they write him about their gardens, tended against food shortage. "They write me about their onions."

He doesn't have a doubt about the men in England who had grown and loved onions all along nor of those who took to them only in time of trial.

"Of course they'll come through all right," he said, in the first strong tone of voice he'd used throughout. "Understand it this way: There is no alternative, none at all in this war."

Prospect of Scrubbing Makes Outlook Brighter at Home for Aged

SUPERINTENDENT CASS NEEDS SOME DISHES

DR. CYR OBSERVES NEED FOR LINENS, BLANKETS

By N. E. F. Meekins
Post Staff Writer

The Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains at long last today undergoes a thorough scouring and cleaning as a part of a proposed program to clear up the "appalling" conditions at the institution.

The barn-like institution, which houses 580 persons, has been the target of outspoken criticism by both District officials and Congressional leaders. As a result, 67 WPA workers were assigned by Otto J. Cass, new superintendent, to give the place "a thorough going over from top to bottom."

Cass ordered the workers to scrub the walls, the wards, tables and all woodwork. Yesterday the kitchen was scoured of about a half-inch of grease and grime.

"When the workers get through with the woodwork and walls," Cass said, "they will start on the beds. If we can't have new mattresses now we will, at least, have clean ones. These people are deserving of having clean beds and linen to sleep on. Those beds are going to be put out in the yard so that the sun can get to work on them."

Cass said he was going to try to borrow some strong disinfectant from Gallinger Hospital today—he has none on hand—for use in the few bathrooms at the institution.

Cass said the needs at the home are many. He said there is only one bathtub for 43 Negro patients. The mattresses are worn out and linens and blankets are badly needed. At dinner last night, many inmates ate soup from dinner plates—there are not enough soup plates. They were obliged to eat dessert from tin cups they had used for tea.

Dr. Donat Cyr, resident physician, said medical equipment of all sorts is needed.

"One of our greatest needs is wheel chairs," he said. "We now have 30 and there are 125 bed patients. Most of these patients have to stay in bed all day because they can't walk around."

The patients, many of whom had long ago abandoned hope for any improvements, were somewhat cheered yesterday by the turn of events. However, they are still skeptical:

"It sounds fine," one of them said. "But, we have been going on like this for so long that it seems there's no hope for improvement. We feel as though we are a forgotten lot. We aren't criminals here, you know. We have not done anything wrong. Maybe we can't expect very much—but, almost anything is better than what we've had."

Some of the inmates, it was learned, live in fear of their lives that a fire may break out. The fire escapes on the building are made of wood; there is no fire hose and no fire extinguisher in the kitchen where the outmoded coal ranges get red hot. In order to reach the fire alarm box, one must vault a 3-foot hedge in the rear of the place. And there is only one attendant on duty all night to make a tour of inspection.

"I don't know what would happen if a fire would break out suddenly late at night," Cass said. "I guess, though, we'd get the people out somehow."

Three Indications of Age Watched in Hollywood

Carriage, Arms And Waistline Are Revealing

By Ida Jean Kain

AGE is a subject I never touch on when interviewing a stage or screen star. I tried it just once—and finished the interview. I didn't find out her age or much of anything else after that.

Nowadays I consult the almanac. And I have to marvel at the birthdates listed when I see some of the glamor girls face to face. For a fact, most of them look five years younger—and some of them 10—than the book says they are.

The stars have to keep their looks, so they live by the rules of health, and that is the main thing that keeps them young. But there are so many signs of age an actress seems to escape. For most women that line from the tip of the chin to the dimple in the throat is beauty's Achilles' heel. But no star ever permits her chin to double-cross her. She not only cultivates an elegant head carriage, which is the surest way of keeping the line clearly defined, but she takes time for plenty of extra beauty care.

Arms and the Woman

Her good carriage also helps to ward off that hump at the back of the neck which is another sign of age. If you have one of those humps at the nape of your neck you can blame it largely on the habit of drooping your head forward.

Flabbiness of the upper arms is apt to be overlooked by the average woman. But it's an age sign the actress can't afford. She has to appear in evening clothes so frequently that her arms and shoulders must be kept lovely. It would probably be a very good thing for the rest of us to have to don decollete evening gowns more often. They bare the most obtrusive points of age—the dowager's hump, flabby arms and thick waistline. Of all this evidence, the middle-aged spread is the least becoming. The actress does not put up with it and you don't have to.

They Live Right

It practically never happens that an actress is overweight. Most members of the film colony are extremely health-minded and well up on their vitamins and minerals. They refer to these as the beauty foods, but under any name they help to extend a woman's best years and to protect her looks. Also, any woman as beauty-minded as a star learns to value relaxation, outdoor exercise, calisthenics and plenty of sleep.

Chests Were Only Furniture Of Early Swiss

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Encirclement is an old story to the Swiss, who go staunchly about their peaceful business in good times and bad. It is interesting now to recall that the history of Switzerland goes far far back in the story of man to the primitive lake dwellers who pre-date any of the ancient civilized cultures.

Like most other people of the world, the Swiss developed the chest as their first furniture—and for many a generation this was the only piece of furniture in a household, being used to sit on as well as to put things in—and often pinch-hitting as a table or a bed. But essentially, it originated as the simplest of containers for keeping possessions.

The first Swiss chests were plain, unpolished, hollowed-out logs. Gradually they were finished off, then panels were added and later these were ornamented with painted designs and with carving, with metal mounts and locks and inlaid decorations. Existing in Swiss museums today are many fine old chests—one is a fifteenth century chest hewn out of a single solid piece of wood. Another remarkable and very ancient chest has curious cabalistic motifs and crests, while a chest with panels illustrating the different months of the year has peasant caricatures for ornament.

Traditionally in Switzerland, as in most other countries, the chest is an important part of every bride's dowry—often pictures of the bride and groom being painted on for decoration, along with dates and initials. But since the Swiss have made an art of woodcarving, the most remarkable of the old dowry chest were those with intricate carving.

Vest-Pocket Compact

'Monkey Marker' Provides Record Of Child's Growth

It has long been considered important that every mother know the growing habits of her children. For this purpose there is now available an attractive device for measuring a child and keeping a permanent record of his growth.

The device, called "Monkey Marker," has a cunning little monkey which does the measuring. He slides up and down until his tail rests on the child's head. The mother then scores the marker with a pencil, writes the date and puts it away until next time.

Good Form in Gloves

HOW TO BUY gloves is a question that is not unusual in this day and age when women are giving more thought to even the smallest items in their wardrobe. A woman who wears sport clothes most of the time wants to know what gloves are suitable for sports wear in contrast to those worn for dressier occasions.

The rugged finished leathers, such as pigskin, calfskin, buckskin and capeskin, are being shown for sportwear. The extra heavy fabric gloves, or so-called double-woven ones, are also good sport gloves. Shortie, wrist-strap, pull-on and gauntlet are the most popular styles.

For dressy afternoon and informal evening wear, kid, capeskin, doeskin, mocha (similar to suede, but thicker and heavier), doeskin and sueded fabrics are the most popular materials. In the pull-on style, shortie with open or button back, or one to four button lengths are considered more dressy, but they would double for street or casual wear.

For dressy costumes—The doeskin gloves, above, worn with the soft suede handbag, by Josef, and the rayon crepe afternoon dress add the proper touch of formality. The overseam of the gloves is machine-stitched

Shirt Tail Problem

A BUSINESS woman who wears suits virtually every day to work, asks if there is any way to keep a blouse and skirt together.

Yes, there are so-called "garment grippers," each consisting of a piece of rubber that is pinned onto the skirt band. They come in pairs and are pinned to the front and back of the skirt or on either side. As a matter of fact, they can be placed wherever a woman has particular trouble keeping in her shirt tails.

Know Your Colors

AFTER LEARNING that famous American designers are exponents of color this season, rather than drab black, a fashion-conscious young woman wants to know how she can tell what colors look well on her.

One fashion authority suggests that a woman pick out her best beauty point—hair, eyes, or skin tones, and play up to it. For example, a woman with a creamy skin can wear the new greens that are being shown, also violet shades if she has natural coloring or wears rouge. The woman with olive coloring can wear the flame reds, dark emerald greens and nut browns so much in vogue at present. Women with blue eyes and blond hair or brown eyes and rich brown hair look best in the colors suggested for the creamy and olive complexions respectively. Light blue, which is especially good this season to accent up black, also looks well on blond-haired women.

According to another color expert, a woman should also choose colors that blend with her personality. Much power is attached to the psychology of color. Purple, for example—one of the most popular colors this season—is reputed to be a color of power. Too much power is dangerous, however, and so too much purple might be awesome. Green is supposed to be the color of worldliness and material gain. Blue is a spiritual, religious color. Yellow is considered the color of friendship and gaiety. Orange and peach colors express vitality.

For tailored wear—The sporty boxlav gloves by Kislav, above, are the perfect complement for a tweed or plaid suit and a casual brimmed hat. The gloves are handsewn, yet they are sturdy

Hand-Washing Technique Given

Nine people out of ten do not know how to wash hands properly. That is the startling opinion of washroom attendants in public buildings, such as hotels, railroad terminals and private clubs, who see thousands of people every day washing their hands the wrong way.

The first step should always be to wet the hands. Then apply the soap, and rub the hands together thoroughly while a good later is formed. Get under the nails thoroughly with suds and friction. When all the soil has been loosened, rinse the hands completely and dry thoroughly on a clean individual towel.

Baked Red Snapper Ideal Dish for Robust Appetites

SNAPPY fall days put an edge on the appetite. And it is not uncommon in this boom town of Washington to see many persons waiting in line to appease their robust appetites. I, for one, was glad to wait in line for luncheon at Woodward & Lothrop's Tea Room on a recent snappy day for I was rewarded with food that was tops for such a day. Red Snapper stuffed with a savory dressing, served with broiled tomatoes was my choice. But other items on the menu were also deserving. Here is the luncheon menu:

Luncheon Menu

Chilled Loganberry Juice
Baked Red Snapper with Dressing
Broiled Tomatoes Nut Muffins
Peach Pie Coffee

If you want to bake a red snapper in your home you will find it makes a flavorsome pivotal dish. Select a 3-pound red snapper. Cut salt pork into slender ribbons and dip each ribbon into a mixture of herbs and spices, using ⅛ teaspoon minced thyme, ¼ teaspoon minced bay leaf, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, ½ teaspoon each of ground cloves and allspice. Using a larding needle, lard the fish with the salt pork. Stuff with dressing made as follows:

Stuffing—Chop or grind ½ pound fish to a paste. Add 1 cup scalded cream, 1 egg, slightly beaten, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, 1 small onion, minced fine and 1 teaspoon minced parsley. Mix well. Stuff fish and sew it up. Season fish with salt and pepper, rub with butter, lay in baking pan and pour 2 cups white wine over it. Bake in medium oven, basting frequently.

Broiled tomatoes are a splendid accompaniment for the red snapper. They are easily prepared. Here is a recipe:

Broiled Tomatoes—Wash medium sized tomatoes. Cut them crosswise into halves, leaving skins on, and slice a small piece off the tops and bottoms. Sprinkle halves with salt, pepper and sugar. Cover with bread crumbs and dot generously with butter and broil for about 10 minutes in a moderate broiler.

Cut Grease Spots With Kerosene

Fortunately, in many homes grease spots on work clothes are once again becoming a problem. The farm wife has long had them to contend with, and so has the wife of the garage mechanic, but now many more men are engaged in jobs that stain their work garments.

Laundering these clothes can be eased considerably by following the procedure long used by many farm women. Soak the grease-spotted areas in kerosene for half an hour, and then launder in good hot suds. This is a laundering tip which comes in handy, too, in households where boys tinker with bicycles, or men with the family car.

War Has Corked Flow Of Diplomatic Champagne

Envoys Are Turning to Domestic Wines; Caviar Is Out, Except at Soviet Embassy

By Dudley Harmon

Since champagne is as much a fixture at diplomatic receptions as potted palms in hotel lobbies, Washington is speculating what local plush-parties are going to do about the situation this year. The answer is that if you are served champagne at an embassy or legation, you can be sure that your host loves you very much or that your drink is—American.

In short, news from the champagne-caviar front is not encouraging. Ambassadors who two years ago would have shuddered at the very idea of American wines are now serving them and liking it. Some have given up even putting in orders for imported liquors; instead, they call up the store around the corner and ask for the best domestic wines in stock.

In the old days, before bombs and blitzes, diplomats would write to New York bonding houses and ask that imported liquors be held in bond. Then, after getting a release from the Treasury signifying their cases were duty free, they would have a shipment sent down. Today the bonding houses say they have no more in stock.

Diplomats can still get some imported wines, but the price is almost prohibitive. And few foreign diplomats feel like splurging these days. Some, like Spanish Ambassador Juan de Cardenas, have unusually fine cellars which may last for some time longer. British diplomats still get their Scotch and gin from home. But the other diplomats are turning more and more to American brands. One envoy has adopted a native gin which his social secretary recommended as what she'd been serving her friends for years.

Chilean Wines Rise in Favor

Also rapidly rising in favor are Chilean wines, which more and more Washington hostesses are adopting. Particularly popular is a white wine of the Rhine type, which the Chileans have brought to perfection. Other South American wines are also gaining ground.

Even more discouraging are bulletins from the caviar sector. Since that is one delicacy which isn't produced in this country, it's either Europe or nothing. One couple dining at a leading Washington hotel the other evening were determined to celebrate a bit of good news with champagne and caviar. The best the waiter could dig up for them was some queer tasting salty stuff.

You can still get fresh caviar from dealers if you don't mind paying $28 a pound. Since few can afford this, one of Washington's leading firms no longer stocks the fresh kind. A next-best variety costs a mere $6.90 for 8 ounces. The very best caviar—in caviar circles known as the large-egg variety—is now impossible to find. Many grocers still have a stock left over from before the Soviet-German war, for if you keep caviar in a cool place it will last two years.

The only man in Washington whose supply line for this tid-bit is still open is the Soviet Ambassador. The embassy here says that they still receive it, mostly by ship, but some by plane. For nondiplomats a shipment of caviar via clipper would reach an astronomical figure. Ever since the Soviet Embassy here was opened with a bang at a super-gala reception in 1934, it has been famous as a paradise for caviar connoisseurs. They are not limited there to a few little eggs on a square of toast, but find great silver bowls heaped with the stuff.

James Cromwell Plans Party

Odds and ends: If there isn't imported champagne at James Cromwell's party next Wednesday, there'll still be other fancy touches. It's reported that entertainers will come from New York for the fete, which will celebrate the birthday of Mr. Cromwell's sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill. Nearly 100 people have been invited, so the story goes. Mr. Cromwell, former Minister to Canada, will entertain at the home of his mother, Mrs. Edward Stotesbury.

Several small parties are being planned for Miss Jane Acheson and Dudley Brown, whose wedding will take place next Saturday. Henry Royce, one of the ushers, will give a cocktail party for the couple and their attendants on Friday at Hockley. That night Mr. and Mrs. Acheson will entertain the wedding group at dinner and they will be given a luncheon by Mrs. Raymond Lee next Saturday. Only members of the families and close friends have been asked to the small reception following at the Acheson home in Georgetown.

Still more New Yorkers flocking to Washington. Mr. and Mrs. William A. M. Burden have leased the home of Mrs. Paul Bartlett on Thirtieth Street in Georgetown and expect to move in October 1. He has a defense job here. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, with whom the Duchess of Windsor stayed after she left England and before her marriage, will be honor guest at a dinner to be give by Clarence Hewes on Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers recently arrived in this country by clipper from France, where they lived for many years.

Mrs. Barnett Will Be Here To See Cousin

Mrs. George Barnett, who is planning a series of weekend house parties at her Virginia home, Wakefield, in October, plans to be at her Washington home next week when her cousin, the Duchess of Windsor, will visit here.

Spending this weekend with Mrs. Barnett at Wakefield will be her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mrs. Charles P. Hill and Mrs. Colston Dyer. Mrs. Dyer's husband is Capt. Dyer, of the U. S. M. C., and at present in London, where he is observing. He has been traveling about the world on a mission for the United States.

Prochniks Back From Trip North

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik have returned to their home after a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Francis Spalding, in Marion, Mass., where she had a house for the summer. Miss Patrica Prochnik has also joined her parents here after a round of visits in the North.

Mrs. Spalding returned to this country several months ago from Egypt, where her husband is stationed at the American Legation. She plans to spend the coming winter in Boston but will send her young son, Francis, jr., to the Stuyvesant School in Warrenton.

Charles Monroe Peers Honeymoon in South

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Monroe Peer, whose marriage took place here recently, are now on a motor trip through the South. After October 1, they will be at home at 2119 H Street for the winter. Next spring, they will move to Virginia.

The bride is the former Miss Beatrice Viola Hirsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hirsch. She studied at New York University and the American People's Theater and then taught at the Central School of usiness and Arts in New York, before coming to Washington.

Mr. Peer is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peer of Woodstock, Va.

Mrs. Egon Glesinger, who is Swedish, arrived here several months ago from Berne, Switzerland, with her husband, Dr. Glesinger, who is secretary general of the International Timber Committee. Dr. Glesinger, who is Polish, will make his headquarters in Washington during the emergency. The Glesingers formerly made their home in Brussels, Belgium. They are stopping at Wardman Park Hotel.

Wessels Plan To Take House

The Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Wessel will move today from their apartment at the Woodward to the Wardman Park Hotel. On October 1, they will take possession of the house they have leased for the winter at 6221 Twenty-ninth Street. This is the home of Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, who plans to leave early next month for Minneapolis to spend some time.

Mrs. Lundeen's daughter, Joan, will enter the University of Minnesota as a freshman this month, and her brother, Ernest, will be in the same university as a junior. Later in the season, Mrs. Lundeen expects to come back to Washington.

Mme. Wessel, who recently returned from a summer in Sweden, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given this evening by Miss Carolyn Nash.

Dolly Corbin Entertains Group At Informal Party

What is "just a few friends dropping in" to Dolly Corbin, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Clifford L. Corbin, is a full-fledged cocktail party to anyone else. Receiving informally wherever she happened to be, Miss Corbin, who was wearing a floor-length dress of powder blue crepe, was assisted by her mother, whose shell pink chiffon dress contrasted with that of her daughter.

Among those gathered around the punch bowl and sandwich-laden table were Mr. and Mrs. James O'Grady, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammond, Miss Julie Kelley, Miss Julie Cahill, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Moulton, Miss Betty Burton, Miss Betty Van der Straten-Ponthoz, Max Millard and Miss Kitty DuBois.

Strolling through the spacious rooms and playing the Corbin slot machine were Miss Achsah Dorsey, Travis Brown, Hal Moseley, Jock Merriam, Miss Eleanor Meem, Joseph Greenwood, Mr. and Mrs. George Renchard, Miss Bambie McKenna, Waverly Taylor, Owen Winter, Frank Moss and Bob Parsons.

Kristi Putnam Is Engaged to Wed John Hay

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. George R. Putnam of Washington, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Kristi Aresvik Putnam, to John Hay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Hay of New York City, and grandson of the late John Hay of Washington.

Miss Putnam attended the Madeira School and was graduated from Bryn Mawr College in 1940. Mr. Hay attended St. Paul's School, and was graudated from Harvard in 1938. He was for two years Washington correspondent for the Charleston News and Courier, and is now in the Army, stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Verbryckes Plan To Live Here

Now honeymooning in Atlantic City, Ensign and Mrs. J. Russell Verbrycke 3d, who were married September 17 at the home of the bride's parents, will make their home at 2700 Q Street after October 1.

The bride, formerly Miss Barbara Crews Page, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stuart Page, and her husband is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Russell Verbrycke, jr.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a costume suit of cocoa crepe with a matching hat and accessories and a corsage of orchids. The grandfather of the bridegroom, the Rev. J. R. Verbrycke, officiated at the noon ceremony.

The bride was unattended, and Robert Verbrycke served his brother as best man.

Georges Picots Hosts at Party

The Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Georges-Picot entertained at a small, informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their home on Twenty-second Street.

Honor guests at the party were Mme. Picot's brother-in-law and sister, the French Financial Attache and Mme. Henri Bardeau who are stationed in New York.

The First Secretary of the Embassy, Baron James Baeyens, and Baroness Baeyens will return today after a cruise to Central America.

Mrs. Flowerree To Visit Capital

Mrs. Robert Flowerree, of New Orleans, will arrive on Monday for a stay of several weeks in Washington. She will stay with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hammonds, at their home in Wesley Heights. Mrs. Hammonds is the former Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree.

Mrs. Flowerree also expects to spend some time with her brother, Clarence Hewes, at his home on Massachusetts Avenue.

Chapmans Leave For St. Louis, Mo.

The Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman left yesterday for St. Louis, Mo., for a short stay. They will return to Washington Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are planning to give up their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren and move into one at the Westchester. They have set their moving day as the one traditional for Washington, October 1.

Alice Jewell To Be Married

Mrs. William Reid Jewell, of Sauk Center, Minn., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Alice A. Jewell of this city, to Edwin Earle Ferguson, son of Mrs. William Crouse, of Spencer, Iowa.

Miss Jewell attended Grinnell College and George Washington University. Now a teacher at Gordon Junior High School, she is a member of Phi Delta Gamma Sorority.

Mr. Ferguson was graduated from the Drake University Law School and received his doctorate in law from Yale University. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega and Omicron Delta Kappa fraternities. He is an attorney in the Solicitor's office of the Department of Agriculture.

The wedding will take place about the middle of November.

Miss Diana Patch Becomes Bride Of A. B. Holladay

The wedding of Miss Diana Lightfoot Patch, daughter of the Rev. Grace Lightfoot Patch of the First Divine Science Church, to Andrew Bolling Holladay, son of Mrs. Daisy L. Holladay, of this city, took place yesterday afternoon at 3:30, at St. Paul's rectory. The Rev. Edmund Fontaine officiated in the presence of members of the families.

The bride, who dispensed with attendants, wore a blue street dress, a black hat with blue facing and a corsage of white orchids. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a motor trip to Atlantic City. They will live in Wasington.

The bride is a member of Alpha Beta Chi sorority. Mr. Holladay is a graduate of St. Paul's Academy and is studying at Georgetown University. He is in the office of the Adjutant General of the War Department.

Gen. Contreras, Wife Honored At Parties

With still another day of official fetes before him, the former President of Venezuela, Gen. E. Lopez Contreras is bringing to a close his five-day visit in the Capital. With Senora de Lopez Contreras he will return to New York where they expect to remain until sometime in December.

Yesterday they were honored at an informal luncheon at the British Embassy at which the Charge d'Affaire, Sir Ronald Campbell, was host. Later in the afternoon Gen. and Senora de Lopez Contreras were honor guests at the reception given by the Chief of Staff and Mrs. George C. Marshall at their quarters in Fort Myer.

Strictly a military affair, with only a sprinkling of high ranking Naval officers, the Marshall party was held between 5:30 and 6:30 o'clock. Mrs. Marshall had assisting her: Mrs. William Bryden, Mrs. W. W. Gordon, Mrs. Courtney Hodges and Mrs. Stanley Embick.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolph Berle were hosts at a dinner party last night honoring Gen. and Senora de Lopez Contreras. Ranking guests were the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. The remaining guests included the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, the British Minister, Noel Hall; the Apostolic Delegate Amleto Cicognani, Maj. and Senora de Alfred Jurado, of Venezuela; the Librarian of Congress and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Harrison, of New York.

Today Gen. and Senora de Lopez Contreras, who have been whirled about Washington at a terrific rate, will visit the Pan American Union and be feted at a reception to be given this afternoon by the Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will be hosts at an informal dinner party this evening in their honor.

Griswold–Miller Wedding Solemnized at St. Alban's

St. Alban's Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Elizabeth Griswold, daughter of Mrs. Ralph M. Griswold and the late Capt. Griswold, U. S. N., and John Wall Miller, son of Commander and Mrs. Justine Miller. The Rev. Charles T. Warner officiated at the candlelight ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Admiral Alexander Sharp, wore a blush-tinted gown of ivory satin fashioned with long sleeves, a full gathered waist and a fan-shaped train. Her fingertip veil fell from a coronet of orange blosoms and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias, white roses and bouvardia.

The matron of honor and a sister of the bride, Mrs. Hugh Kemp Clark, of Wilmington, Del., topped her pink and dusty rose chiffon dress with a tiny hat of pale pink feathers. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Capt. Harvey Reagan, U. S. A. A. C., served as best man, and the ushers were John Bowie, Frank Boyd, Richard Ihlder and Burkeley Mann.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at which the bride's mother wore a turquoise chiffon dress and black accessories. The mother of the bridegroom had chosen a pearl gray frock with which she wore green accessories and a corsage of orchids.

The bride was graduated from George Washington University, where she was a member of Kappa Delta Sorority. Her husband is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, where he specialized in engineering.

After a honeymoon cruise to Florida the couple will return to Washington to make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guests of Son Here

Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Charles, of Coral Gables, Fla., are spending a few weeks with their son, P. L. Charles, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, at his home in Mount Rainer, Md. Mr. Charles was for more than 20 years regional director of education in the Philippines, during which time Mrs. Charles was also engaged in educational work there.

This evening at 8, Mrs. Charles will be guest speaker of the women of Sherwood Presbyterian Church. Her topic will be "Pioneering in Christian Democracy in the Orient."

Mrs. L. W. Robert And Her Mother Switch Dwellings

Fair exchange is no robbery, at least not temporarily. Mrs. Lawrence Wood (Chip) Robert and her mother, Mrs. Harold Walker, rediscovered the truth of that old adage the other day, and so today you will find Mrs. Walker ensconced in the Robert apartment, at the Mayflower and the Roberts occupying Mrs. Walkers house at 2110 Leroy Place.

It seems that a short while ago Mrs. Robert decided she wanted to move into a house for the winter, and shortly thereafter discovered that her mother was looking around for an apartment, and so the switch was made, to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The glamourous "Evie" will hardly be settled in her new home however, before the parties and houseguesting start. Mrs. George H. Earle, of Ardmore, Pa., wife of the United States Minister to Bulgaria, will arrive on Monday to spend a couple of days, and that evening the Roberts will entertain at dinner in honor of Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer. On Friday evening another dinner will have for honor guest, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, and so it goes.

Watrous Family To Move Next Week

Col. and Mrs. Livingston Watrous and their daughter, Miss Margaret Watrous, expect to move from the Brighton Hotel next week to a house they have leased for the winter months.

Their new home is at 11 East Lennox Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

20 Children To Be Aided By Sorority

Alpha Chi Omega To Care for Group Of Bomb-Shocked British Youngsters

Twenty bomb-shocked British children will be cared for in a hostel by a fund being raised by Alpha Chi Omega Sorority as one of its major projects under Mrs. John W. Houser of Washington, the organization's National defense chairman.

The sorority, which has 61 active and 49 alumnae chapters in the United States and Canada, is seeking a $2000 fund, sufficient to maintain the score of small children for a year in a hostel provided in England, Mrs. Houser said yesterday.

Mrs. Houser has just been named defense chairman for the sorority by its National council, following her presentation of a defense program at the National convention this summer in Pasadena, Calif.

At the convention she represented the alumnae group of Washington, which took the lead in advocating that the sorority adopt a definite program for defense and war relief. Mrs. Houser was head of the defense committee which made a report at the convention. At that time she urged the fund for bomb-shocked children which was adopted.

Children of one to five years of age, who have to be reconditioned after severe shock, will be cared for with the fund. It will be handled through the American committee for air raid relief, which is affiliated with the British War Relief Society, Mrs. Houser said. Since the hostels and some of the services connected with them are donated, $100 each will maintain a child there for a year, she said.

By undertaking this project, the sorority is following a precedent set in the last war, when it had a project devoted to child sufferers, most of whom were orphans.

In some localities, the chapters are raising sums for the new fund with teas and other special events. But the local alumnae chapter and the active chapter at American University are handling their share of the project by voluntary contributions.

As another phase of its defense program, the national organization has invested $5000 in defense bonds from funds already on hand.

Mrs. Houser will report on these defense activities at a meeting of the afternoon group of the local alumnae chapter at a luncheon at 1 p. m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. G. W. Haskins, 118 Linden Lane, Falls Church.

Mrs. Joseph H. Ball, wife of Senator Ball of Minnesota, is defense chairman for the local chapter and will make a talk at the same meeting.

The approximately 100 members in the alumnae chapter here represent a large proportion of the 61 active chapters, so they were in a position to take the lead in the defense program which the national convention adopted.

Mrs. Gaines H. Gough is president of the local alumnae chapter, which is planning further activities, including the United Service Organizations, and the making of garments for the Red Cross at meetings.

Mrs. Houser as Polly White was graduated in 1934 from the University of Southern California, where she majored in journalism. She has written magazine articles, including one for the Readers Digest. She lives at 5014 Fulton Street Northwest.

The sorority for which she has become national defense chairman has an alumnae membership of approximately 15,000 with some 2,000 active members.

Feted by Officers

Capt. Lawrence F. Safford, U. S. N., who was recently promoted to that rank, and Mrs. Safford, were honor guests at a dinner dance last night at the Hotel Twenty-four Hundred in celebration of his promotion. Hosts were his fellow officers in his office at the Navy Department.

Senator's Wife Named League Chairman

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Joseph H. Ball, wife of Senator Ball, of Minnesota, has been appointed publicity chairman for the Voteless District League of Women Voters, it was announced this week by Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president. Mrs. Ball is also defense chairman for the Washington alumnae chapter of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority, which she represented at the meeting of the United Women's Organizations of the District this week.

OPEN HOUSE TEA — The Washington Chapter, National Council of Jewish Juniors, is planning an "open house" tea for Sunday afternoon, September 28, at the Jewish Community Center.

Miss Eda Bess Krivitsky, national board member and national chairman of the twelfth biennial conference to be held in Baltimore during the latter part of October, is expected to attend.

The program of entertainment will feature the presentation of a tableau with musical accompaniment, entitled "Councilrama," written by Rose Saidman.

Mrs. George Nordlinger will be guest speaker, it was announced. Dorothy Schiller, president of the chapter, and Sadie Grossman, chairman for the event, are being assisted by a committee including Frances Henchen, Elizabeth Satlof, Mildred Blenha, Goldie Bachman and Miss Saidman.

Today from 2:30 to 5 p. m. the chapter is opening the season with a lawn party at the home of Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, 3111 Idaho Avenue Northwest.

Dorothy Levin is chairman, with a committee including Jennibelle Loeb, Dolly Clayman, Freda Blumenberg and Sylvia Schachtman.

Mrs. Rand to Return

Mrs. Oscar R. Rand will return to Washington tomorrow from a visit of several weeks in Los Angeles. She is the wife of Lieut. Col. Rand.

Mrs. Howorth Heads B.P.W. Expansion Unit

Mrs. Lucy S. Howorth, member of the Board of Veterans' Appeals and of the Business and Professional Women's Club, has been named chairman of a committee to consider plans for the club's expansion of activities, it was announced yesterday.

The committee, which held its first meeting this week, will continue its discussions at another meeting next week. Its report will be sent to the club's executive board. Other members of the committee are Dr. Florence Armstrong, Mrs. Velma K. Tinsley, Miss Sallie Marie Wells, Miss Margaret E. Rauber, Mrs. Zeda Daniels and Miss Rena Pond.

The proposed expansion of the club has for one of its purposes wider participation in defense activities. More effective functioning as a State unit of the National Federation is another purpose of the study.

Chi Sigma Cup To Be Awarded

The Loraine Lease Good Cup for the best chapter history will be presented to the winning chapter at tonight's banquet, which will be the climax of the province conference of Chi Sigma Sorority.

The banquet, to be held at 7 p. m. at the Kennedy-Warren, will be followed by installation of new province officers.

Two national officers, both of Washington, will attend the banquet, Mrs. Loretta McCleery, president, and Mrs. Marguerite Bayne, editor-in-chief.

The conference, which included business meetings Thursday and last night, is in charge of Miss Marjorie Mertz, province president. Ten chapters in the District are represented.

Mrs. Good, one of the founders of the sorority, gave the cup, which for several years has been rotating among the chapters which have compiled the best history annually.

Z. T. A. Alumnae Unit to Plan For Founders' Day

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority at its first business meeting of the fall next Tuesday will make plans for the celebration of Founder's Day October 15.

The meeting next week will be held at 8:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. John Warlick, treasurer of the chapter, 2602 Valley Drive, Alexandria.

Mrs. Laurie Hess is president of the chapter, with Mrs. George Neal, vice president; Mrs. Franklin Steinko, secretary; Miss Adelaide Woodley, historian; Mrs. Albert Goergens, assistant secretary; Mrs. Edgar L. Withrow, Pan Hellenic delegate.

Mrs. Goergens and Mrs. Linden Crone will assist Mrs. Warlick, hostess, at the next meeting, when new members will be welcomed.

D. C. Republican Women to Meet

The League of Republican Women of the District will start its fall season with a meeting October 6 at 2:30 p. m. at the clubhouse, 1612 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, announces a board meeting for 11 a. m. on the same day.

The clubhouse will hold open house every Tuesday afternoon in October from 4:30 to 5:30.

Wolf Chapter, D. A. R., To Resume Sessions

Captain Wendell Wolfe Chapter, D. A. R., will resume its meetings Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Thelma Mills Rector, 3701 Fourteenth Street Northeast with the new regent, Mrs. Mabel Wheelock King, presiding.

Mrs. Ruth B. Parker will give a paper on the Constitution. Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Hope Ross Anderson, Mrs. Ruth P. Barnard, Dr. Laura S. Brennon, Mrs. Mary W. Burton, and Mrs. Hope Fetty.

U. S. Intends To Speed Soviet Aid, Hull Says

By Bertram D. Hulen

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of State Cordell Hull gave assurances at his press conference yesterday that the United States was thoroughly mindful of the need of material assistance for Russia. Asked for comment on London reports of concern over the turn of affairs in the Soviet Union and the need for a heavy flow of equipment to Russia from Britain and the United States, Hull said that this Government was planning nothing but an increase of aid and an increase of speed in getting aid to Russia.

He did not go into details, obviously because he considers the means are for other branches of the Government to work out.

Already funds and credits have been advanced to the Soviet government to the extent of 60 million dollars. The immediate problem concerns a speed-up in production, readjustment of American allocations to Britain to provide for diversions to Russia, and methods for getting the supplies into Russia by way of Vladivostok, the Persian Gulf, Archangel, or all three.

Presumably these details will be worked out, if the Russian armies can withstand the shocks of the German blitzkreig and there is no internal collapse that would remove the Soviet Union as a belligerent by way of a negotiated peace. No indications have been given, however, that a heavy flow of supplies can get well under way immediately, or even for some weeks, if not months.

While the military news from Russia was discouraging yesterday, diplomats were disposed to attribute the gloomy reports from London as in part intended to impress the United States with the urgency of the crisis and to encourage the adoption of a far-reaching program at the tripartite conference in Moscow.

Officials expressed the belief that Germany had yet much to accomplish in Russia, notwithstanding the advances of the last few days. They were satisfied that there would be time to do much in support of the Soviets, unless Joseph Stalin should decide to negotiate or the military situation from the Russian standpoint was much worse than it appears to be.

Secretary Hull said that no full and accurate reports had been received concerning the military situation. For that reason he declined to comment on the London dispatches portraying the military picture in adverse colors.

Asked about the departure for Russia of several members of the Soviet Embassy staff in Tokyo today, Hull said he had received nothing new in relation to Japan and Russia in the Far East.

Hod-Carriers Decry Labor Racketeering

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—A resolution condemning labor racketeering and gangsterism was adopted today by the A. F. L. International Hod Carriers', Building and Common Laborers' Union at the closing session of its first convention in 30 years.

A guarantee against work stoppages on National defense projects was contained in another resolution, which pledged the union to settle all grievances and disputes by conciliation and arbitration.

The 1200 delegates went on record in support of President Roosevelt's foreign policy and "all possible aid to Great Britain and her allies."

An internal union fight, led by a minority group, came to the front again with adoption of a resolution ordering Compressed Air Workers' Local No. 147 of New York to stand trial before the international executive board on charges of "constitutional irregularities and other violations." The trial will be held at a date to be fixed later.

Brian Feeney and John Clarke, representatives of the Sandhogs' Local, waged an unsuccessful convention battle against Joseph V. Moreschi, international president. Moreschi was reelected to a 5-year term of office Wednesday.

Important changes in the union's constitution were approved yesterday over the strenuous objections of the Feeney-Clarke group. broader powers over local unions by permitting him to suspend their officers and order investigations at his discretion.

Another amendment provided for a referendum of the union's 250,000 members every five years to determine whether a convention shall be called. Such a referendum will be conducted in 1946 and, if a convention is approved by a majority of the union, it will be held in Cleveland.

Antirat Brigade Plans Attack On Zoo Sector

Expansion of the District's rodent-control program to the Zoo was announced yesterday by Health Officer, George C. Ruhland. It will start there September 29.

Zoo Park rats are reported to have been causing consternation to both animal inmates and property owners adjacent to the Zoo grounds. Their extermination will be handled by specialized workers from the Health Department, it was announced.

In his budget estimates, Dr. Mann asked for an "assistant keeper" to head a rodent-control program at the Zoo. He described conditions as "deplorable." In line with Dr. Mann's complaints, Dr. Ruhland offered services of his staff to remedy the situation and set a week from Monday as "rat hunt" day.

Builders Protest Priority Price Limit

Oppose Nelson Plan to Free Materials Only for Houses to Sell at $6000 or Less

By Thomas M. Cahill.
Post Real Estate Editor

A $6000 ceiling on residential construction for sale announced yesterday by Donald M. Nelson, director of priorities, in a plan to grant priority assistance for building 200,000 privately financed defense housing units, met with almost unanimous protest from various Washington builders on the ground it is not broad enough to accommodate the wide range of demand in this area.

Director Nelson's announcement followed approval of the plan in principle by the Council of the Office of Production Management, and an order implementing it becomes effective Monday.

The paragraph bringing protest locally states:

"To qualify for the priority assistance extended under the new plan, construction must be confined to family units of a value not in excess of $6000, if for sale, or for which the monthly shelter rental does not exceed $50. These figures represent top prices for housing to receive assistance under the plan. Construction in lower brackets to meet the economic situations of workers in different categories will be encouraged, and it is expected that in most cases the costs involved will be substantially lower. Exception to the limits set will be permitted only in special circumstances, and then only on the basis of individual consideration."

Ground Cost a Factor

Real estate men and builders declared that the ruling would work a definite hardship on their business in Washington, where ground values were in many cases higher than in other cities and add to costs of construction. In their opinion, Washington is the "No. 1 defense area," having the highest wage for Government employes, totaling more than $2000 annually and the highest family income of any city or section of the Nation, being practically twice the national average. Many defense workers coming into the city, they point out, are in the higher wage brackets, and are entitled to higher priced homes. The problem here, they explained, is to fill the need for housing in all price ranges, particularly when much of the incoming population is engaged in defense activity.

Edward R. Carr, chairman of the home builders committee of the Washington Real Estate Board, and developer of Shadybrook, Barnaby Woods and Yates Gardens, said: "I feel that any builder, be he a member of the real estate board or not, should cooperate 100 per cent in any measure necessary for defense. However, if this present policy of nothing over $6000 houses or $50 a month apartments is strictly adhered to, I do not believe it will meet the needs of the Washington area from the housing standpoint because of the per capita earning power of the average Washingtonian. The edict will work a particular hardship on those builders of high-class residences who have procured their ground and who, under this regulation, will not be able to develop it until after the emergency. If any possible relief can be given to builders in this field, it will avoid a great deal of unemployment.

Fear Cheap Developments

Albert W. Walker, developer of Westmoreland Hills, Westhaven, Wood Acres and Green Acres, said, "It is my feeling that if a limit of $6000 is placed on residential construction in Washington, it will result in a ruined city flooded with cheap developments." Citing the high per capital income of National Capital residents, he explained that workers here are of white collar type and expect better housing.

"While a $6000 limit may be all right for the country as a whole, it is my opinion that Washington should have a higher priority value."

Claud Livingston, sr., president of William H. Saunders Co., Inc., said, "Much thought should be given in deciding on the maximum price of homes to be approved by the Defense Housing Co-ordinator in the District of Columbia where the majority of the defense workers and other government employes who are seeking living quarters are unmarried and only require furnished rooms or small apartments at a reasonable rental, and I feel sure that our builders could and would fill the demand within a short time if allowed to purchase material at a reasonable cost, arranged through the Priority Division. In this way homes could be built in limited numbers and different price ranges, thus affording opportunities for different classes to secure suitable homes, instead of placing a ceiling of $6000 as suggested, thereby bringing about undesirable conditions in some sections of our city.

"I feel certain that a sufficient number of apartments could be supplied to fill the demand for those who prefer to rent, and homes for those who wish to buy, if priorities were given, raising the maximum amount of the selling price, and by doing so employment would be given to many that will be without jobs if the builders are stopped suddenly.

Must Look to Future

"It must be considered that there is a class of people coming to Washington who are used to higher standards of living than those of purely industrial centers and who would naturally want a better class of living quarters.

"I think we should look forward to the future of our own city and try to avoid having many sections with hundreds of small homes exactly alike, with small lots and without shade trees, and in many cases at such a distance that septic tanks would have to be used for sewage disposal."

Frank Gardiner, of Bowling & Gardiner, developers of Edgewood, Glenwood and Bradley Village, said, "Due to the high wage standards and rigid building codes of the District of Columbia and Montgomery County, Md., the very necessary defense housing in and around Washington will be brought to a standstill unless the $6000 minimum sale price is raised to $8500. Our experience has proved that the type of Government employe which we have in Washington requires and is demanding of us housing in the $8000 to $10,000 class."

A dissenting note was sounded by Paul T. Stone, heading Paul T. Stone, Inc., builder of the Skyland, Arna Valley, Gunston Hall and Mayfair Gardens apartment projects and developer of Wrenwood and Bradley Woods. Stone said: "It is my opinion that the position taken by Mr. Nelson is correct; that expensive home construction should be discontinued during this emergency and all builders should aid in solution of the housing problem for the defense workers. The benefit to be derived by discontinuance of expensive construction will not only favor the defense worker, but will cushion the fall and lessen unemployment when the crisis is over."

Affects 200,000 Homes

The new procedures, worked out by OPM officials and Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, will assure priority aid for 200,000 privately financed homes for defense workers, it was said, other arrangements having already been made for giving priority aid to 100,000 publicly financed units.

To hasten construction of essential defense housing, project preference ratings will be granted, it was explained. Highest rating of those to be available for housing will be assigned to defense projects which were already under construction September 1, and for remodeling and rehabilitation, creating accommodations for defense workers. Lower ratings will be given to new construction for rent, and still lower ones for new construction for sale.

All defense housing ratings, however, will be in the defense, or "A" class, and certificates of rating will be extended in the field for privately financed projects by field offices of the priorities division, on recommendation of the defense housing coordinator.

By use of project ratings, it was stated, the priorities division can assign one rating which can be used to secure delivery of scarce building materials (which appears on the list), and which will go into any one defense housing project. This plan will do away with need for many different individual applications for different materials. A list of defense areas has been developed in which there is an acute shortage of housing for defense workers and defense housing within these areas, both public and private, may be granted priority assistance.

The defense housing critical list includes certain materials, products and items necessary to housing construction, and project ratings will apply only to items which appear on it, and in such quantities as Director Nelson authorizes. This is to stimulate and expedite production of greatest possible number of dwelling units, which economical use of available limited quantities of critical materials will permit.

Procedure Explained

Explaining procedure to obtain a preference rating for defense housing projects, the statement instructs private builders to file application with local offices of the Federal Housing Administration. Director Nelson having made use of this agency as a ready means of assistance. This special service of FHA, however, is completely separate from and has no connection with its underwriting activity as a mortgage insurance agency. Copies of application forms may be obtained from these offices, or local home financing institutions.

No application for aid, it was emphasized, will be considered by priorities officials until it has been demonstrated that homes involved are designed for and readily available to defense workers, at prices within their reach, at locations convenient to their employment, and conform to minimum standards of the defense housing coordinator's office. It must also be shown that such housing is being, or will be, built with minimum quantities of scarce materials.

Before any specific privately financed project can be given a rating, it must qualify as defense housing and be approved by the defense housing coordinator's office. This done, and the latter official having recommended the project, a rating may be assigned in the field by the priorities division to the particular job involved on a project rating form. This rating will be given to the builder of private housing and the builder can then extend the rating by signing a copy of the order and serving it on his suppliers. The latter can extend the rating to their own suppliers in the same way.

Metals Chief Item

Decision to give preferential status to defense housing was announced some weeks ago and yesterday's plans are steps to put the program in effect. The statement declared: "With the impact of the defense program upon the national economy, housing operations in every field have been affected by the shortages in the products manufactured from critical metals, without which livable housing cannot be produced."

Citing the need for workers' shelter, it concludes: "The production of housing has been in competition with the production of other defense essentials, and was delayed because the scarce materials needed for both were diverted by priorities from housing into other uses. Because of this, a decision had to be made to regulate the flow of critical materials to insure the necessary supply for housing."

Former Radio Singer Fires 4 Shots at Fleeing Prowler

FOILED PROWLER—Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mayer thwarted a suspected burglar last night with a prearranged signal. Mayer fired four times as the man fled, believes he was hit

A former radio singer fired four shots at a prowler last night after surprising him in the rear of the former's apartment, 5821 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Charles H. Mayer, 28, said he believed he had hit the man. Early today police were searching the wooded section in the rear of the apartment for the interloper. Meantime, they were checking all Washington hospitals.

Mayer surprised the man through a signal between him and his 25-year-old wife, Lenore, which they had devised after a recent burglary. Mrs. Mayer was taking a bath when she heard the man at the window. She called out to her husband: "Charles, I think I smell gas. Go in the kitchen and look at the range."

Mayer left the living room on the pretense of going into the kitchen. Instead, he picked up a .38 caliber revolver, slipped through the front door and ran to the rear of the apartment. However, the prowler heard Mayer's approach and ran. Mayer fired four times.

The Mayers said last April a burglar entered their apartment and escaped with $800 in jewelry belonging to Mrs. Mayer. Since then, they said, three attempts had been made to enter the apartment.

Mayer is employed as an examiner of records in the Surgeon General's Office. His wife is a secretary in the Federal Housing Administration.

Milk Unit To Survey D. C. Needs

Under leadership of Mrs. Lucian Jordan, health chairman of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, a special subcommittee of the District Nutrition Committee yesterday took the first step toward preparing an income yardstick for administration of the proposed one-cent milk program.

Another meeting was scheduled for next Friday, when the task is expected to be completed.

The subcommittee's responsibility is to define Washington's lowest third income level. Its findings will be transmitted to the city-wide committee appointed Wednesday by the Board of Education to draw up plans for participation of needy school children in a proposed penny half-pint milk project.

The group's first meeting was held yesterday at the Council of Social Agencies, 1101 M Street Northwest.

According to rules of the Department of Agriculutre, one-cent milk is available only to those children who are on public relief, from families on public relief, private charity or WPA or who are in the community's lowest third income level.

Negroes to Observe Russell Anniversary

The eighty-first anniversary of the birth of Dr. Charles E. Russell, journalist and humanitarian, will be commemorated by the District of Columbia branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on a special radio program tomorrow night over Station WINX.

The program will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10 p. m., and will pay tribute to Dr. Russell's life and contribution to progressive causes. He was one of the founders of the association, and one of his forceful writings on the position of the Negro in America will be read.

Kemp to Speak

Fletcher Kemp, county superintendent of schools, will speak at a meeting of the Nellie Custis Parent-Teacher Association at Aurora Hills Monday night at 8 o'clock. Following the address there will be a reception for teachers.

New Pupils Jam Schools To Register

Kindergarten and elementary school children, newcomers to the District school system, crowded into principals' offices yesterday as registration of new pupils began at 4 o'clock, providing a foretaste of what the expected enrollment of 96,250 for the coming school year will be like.

No totals on the first day registration at the city's 133 grade schools were available from the Board of Education last night, but it is expected that about 3400 new students will have been added to District rosters on Monday when classes begin. The listing of new students will continue at the various buildings from 8 to 10 a. m. today.

The heaviest influx was felt in Southeast and Northeast Washington, where the all but abandoned Van Buren School and two portable buildings will be pressed into service to take care of the booming enrollment. Registration of new pupils in that section has been going on all week, and it was estimated that well over 400 newcomers have already been listed in the section.

The combined office of the Ketcham-Van Buren School reported that 140 new youngsters had already been signed there, with about 200 more coming from the Navy housing project at Bellevue, all to be added to about 750 old pupils expected back.

Eight classes in the Benning School, in Northeast, and the Anacostia Junior-Senior High are to be placed on part-time schedules to take care of the increase, and Benning will also use the two portable schools, relics of World War school crowding.

Grade school principals in Northwest Washington reported less of an influx, although the Petworth School said that yesterday's total of 30 new pupils was the highest they had ever had, 20 above last year's opening day total.

Auxiliary Holds Sale

Dyer-Gunnell Post, No. 180, American Legion, Women's Auxiliary, is sponsoring a baked-goods sale this afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock in the Federated Store, Vienna.

Retired G.P.O. Printer, Now 85, Recalls Garfield's Death

Ernest J. Elwood, retired Government Printing Office printer and former civic leader, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday with members of his family yesterday at the Home for Incurables and recalled it was also the sixtieth anniversary of President Garfield's death.

Confined to the institution as the result of a broken hip suffered a year ago, Elwood reminisced about how Garfield's death of wounds from an assassin's gun caused him to work on his day off.

Employed on the Utica (N. Y.) Observer, Elwood was called in to work when the President died. Garfield had been shot two months previously in the old Pennsylvania Station here.

There was a steady procession of messengers bearing gifts, congratulations and flowers to Elwood's room yesterday, and last night his three children and their families were with him.

Youngest celebrant was his 2-year-old great-grandson, Darrell Acree, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon D. Acree, of 1401 Staples Street Northeast. Children present were Mrs. Rexford Holmes, of 2422 Tunlaw Road Northwest; Mrs. Leslie Wright, of 1206 Oates Street Northeast, and E. J. Elwood, jr., of 3618 South Dakota Avenue Northeast.

Elwood is a former vice president of the Stanton Park Citizens Association and for many years was administrator of indigent relief of the Columbia Typographical Union.

Hearings On Rent End Tuesday

Committee Will Call OPA Expert Who Was Joint Sponsor Of Control Bill

A rent expert of the Office of Price Administration, sponsor of one of three rent-control bills now before Congress, has been summoned as a witness at what is expected to be the last hearing the special District Defense Subcommittee will conduct on the subject, it was learned yesterday.

An invitation to appear at the hearing has been sent to Karl Borders, chief of OPA's rent section. Borders was a witness at an earlier subcommittee session which heard details of OPA's bill to create the office of District Rent Administrator under appointment of President Roosevelt.

Hearing Tuesday

At what Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, District Committee chairman and subcommittee head, has said will be the final rent hearing, Borders is expected to be asked his views on a rent bill introduced this week on behalf of Washington real estate interests. This bill would empower the District Commissioners to name a rent administrator and would freeze rentals at the September, 1940, level.

The hearing will be Tuesday at 10 a. m. in the District committee room. Following it, the subcommittee will take action in an executive session.

Capper Plans Action

Unless the House acts to regulate rents in Washington, he will ask the Senate to do something about them, declared Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee, yesterday.

Describing the housing situation in the Capital as "alarming" due to the swift influx of defense workers, Capper declared, "I believe the House is on the right track and I certainly hope something will be done."

Committee Adopts Chest Drive Slogan

The Washington Community Chest campaign committee yesterday reminded residents of the District that "the rush of national defense preparations will leave in its wake many defenseless," in announcing preliminary plans for the fourteenth annual Chest drive to be held November 13 to 27.

Approval of a two million-dollar goal, poster and emblem designs, and a campaign slogan were disclosed, following the committee's first fall meeting. "For their tomorrow—give today" will be the slogan under which Washingtonians will be asked to contribute to the city's needy, while donors will receive a blue lapel tag, bearing the recently adopted permanent Chest emblem—a picture of the Lincoln Memorial with the words, "For humanity."

The posters will depict a boy and girl silhouetted against the Capitol, to represent the increased charity needs of a defense boom town.

"Quite realistically we anticipate a hard campaign," John A. Reilly, chairman of the Chest's metropolitan unit admitted. "We shall need more metropolitan unit volunteers to find and reach the thousands of new people in town. But it is unthinkable that metropolitan Washington should fail to meet local needs on the home front while serving as the arsenal of democracy for the world."

Although better business conditions were cited as a reason for expecting adequate response to the drive, campaign leaders pointed out that the population increase and the addition of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties to the canvass area will increase the cost and difficulty of collection. They added that many agencies had found it necessary to ask for increases in their budgets because of boom conditions.

Dentists to Discuss Aid to Selectees

A program to give dental attention to selectees now deferred because of defective teeth will be discussed at the first fall meeting of the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society tonight at 9 p. m. at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. A report on the program will be given by Dr. J. C. Brazier, chairman of the society's dental preparedness committee.

Dr. J. Edward Bowman, newly elected president of the society, will preside at the session, and Dr. William O. Claytor, president-elect of the National Dental Association, will summarize future plans of the association.

Detectives Take Night Off . . . So . . .

Two New York detectives here to testify in a murder trial decided to take the night off last night. They headed down town and at Sixth and G Streets espied a familiar face in the sidewalk crowd.

"Isn't that Paul Crews?" William F. Vaughn asked his partner, James A. McCarthy. He pointed out a 24-year-old youth.

It was. They accosted him, and talking to him, learned he should be in New York serving a parole. They took him to headquarters, where he was booked on a charge of being a fugitive from justice.

Service Men To Take Over Capital Today

Open houses, dancing, movies, boxing bouts, swimming, a variety show, sightseeing and chapel music await service men on leave in Washington this weekend.

Another of the popular street dances, in E Street between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets Northwest, adjoining Post Square, will be held tonight at 8. In contrast, the visitors can hear a program of chapel music, at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest, also at 8 p. m.

The Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will sponsor movies at 6 p. m. at the church, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

The National Catholic Community Service Club offers a dancing class at 3 p. m. at 918 Tenth Street Northwest and a dance will be held at 9 p. m. A dinner and dance will be held by the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church League for Men in the Service, starting at 6 p. m. at 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

A dance also is scheduled at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, at 9 p. m. and a dance begins at the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest, at the same hour. There will be a dance at the Soldiers', Sailors' and Marines' Club, 1015 L Street Northwest, at 8 p. m. The club will hold open house, starting at 4 p. m. tomorrow. Open house will be held at 7 p. m. at the Service Men's Club. St. John's Episcopal Church Parish Hall, Sixteenth and H Streets Northwest, will have open house starting at 6 p. m. today. The Y. M. C. A. holds open house tomorrow from 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.

A sight-seeing tour, under auspices of Mount Vernon Place, Francis Asbury and Foundry Methodist Churches, will start at 2 p. m. today in front of the U. S. Supreme Court Building.

Five activities have been announced for visiting colored service men. These are a dance at Banneker Fieldhouse, Georgia Avenue and Howard Place Northwest, at 8 p. m.; dancing and games, Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., 901 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, 8 p. m.; boxing matches, Y. M. C. A., 1012 Twelfth Street Northwest, 7:30 p. m.; skating, Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., 8 p. m., and swimming, Banneker Pool, 5:30 p. m.

Barge Trips, Other Outings Tomorrow

Barge trips along the old C. & O. Canal, a scientific session on Chesapeake Bay and two nature walks are on the Office of National Capital Parks schedule tomorrow.

Two horse-drawn barge trips, one at 9 a. m. and the other at 1 p. m., will be conducted by Sutton Jett, canal historian, and James A. Fowler, naturalist. Special buses will leave 1416 F Street Northwest at 8 a. m. and 12 noon.

Dr. R. V. Truitt, director of the University of Maryland marine biology station on Solomon's Island, will reveal mysteries of salt water life to visitors tomorrow afternoon. Persons taking the tour are asked to meet in front of Bowen's Hotel, Solomon's Island, at noon. Special buses will leave the F Street terminal at 10 a. m.

A tree walk through Lafayette Park is scheduled for 2:30 p. m. tomorrow. For early birds, a bird walk will be conducted through the National Arboretum beginning at 7:30 a. m. The group, led by George A. Petrides, junior naturalist, will assemble at Bladensburg Road and M Street.

The season's closing campfire program was held last night in Rock Creek Park. Dr. Carl P. Russell gave an illustrated talk on "Pioneer Adventures Along the Oregon Trail."

61st Traffic Victim Killed On D. C. Street

D. C. traffic deaths this year.... 61
Same date last year..... 50
Total last year..... 79

On the heels of President Roosevelt's request that something be done about Washington's rising traffic toll, another pedestrian was killed last night by an automobile.

The District's sixty-first victim of the year was Horace Johnson, Negro, 59, of 2144 L Street Northwest, who was fatally injured about 7:30 p. m. as he crossed Twenty-first Street at L Northwest.

Police said he walked into the side of an automobile driven by Francis C. Romeo, 24, of 1500 Twenty-first Street Northwest.

While Johnson was given first aid in a drug store at the corner, some bystander apparently became flustered and turned in a fire alarm. Johnson died four hours later at Emergency Hospital.

Isador Dischel, 63, of 225 H Street Northwest, was knocked down by an automobile at Second and H Streets Northwest and Major Evans, Negro, 41, of 1719½ Marion Court Northwest, was struck at 1717 Seventh Street Northwest.

Dischel was taken to Sibley Hospital with a fractured shoulder and leg injury and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital. Evans was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital with head and arm injuries.

An inquest into the traffic death Saturday of Thomas J. Coleman, 79, of 510 Fifth Street Northwest, resulted in exoneration of Lloyd B. Wilbank, 25, of 327 Fourteenth Street Northeast, driver of the street car that struck him at Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue Northwest.

Elder Smith to Conduct Mormon Parley Here

Elder Joseph F. Smith, member of the Twelve Apostles' Quorum of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, today and tomorrow will conduct a Washington-Baltimore quarterly conference at the Washington Chapel, Sixteenth and Columbia Road Northwest. He is president of the Utah Genealogical Society.

A priesthood meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock will open the conference. Aspects of the Mormon Church's security and welfare program will be discussed tomorrow at 8:45 a. m. Other sessions will be tomorrow at 10 a. m. and 7 p. m.

Plan to Ease Traffic Over River Urged

Commission Prepares for Completion of New War Building

Occupancy next year of the new War Department Building in nearby Virginia, with its 20,000-employe capacity, will create a traffic problem requiring a four-ply antidote, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission warned yesterday.

Backing up its conclusion with a wealth of statistics, calculated to demonstrate the additional burden which the huge structure would place on Arlington, Key and Highway Bridges, the commission recommended:

Extension of Independence Avenue west to the banks of the Potomac River, widening of Twenty-third Street from Washington Circle to Lincoln Memorial Plaza; construction of a K Street viaduct to by-pass Georgetown and early completion of the Maine Avenue and Fourteenth Street grade separation project.

Sees Traffic Speed-Up

These four improvements, Planning Director John Nolen, jr., explained to Chairman Frederic A. Delano and members of the commission, would materially speed up traffic over the three river bridges which would be used by War Department workers traveling to and from their new headquarters building.

Nolen's report, subsequently approved and forwarded to the War Department and Public Roads Administration for consideration, pointed out that better approaches—to be effected by the four major highway changes—would bolster efficiency of the three bridges by more than 50 per cent.

Highway Bridge's present capacity of 800 cars per lane per hour, during the morning and evening rush periods, would be boosted to 1250 cars, said Nolen; Arlington Bridge, from 1000 to 1500, and Key Bridge, from 800 to 1500.

Would Eliminate Bottlenecks

All this would be accomplished, not by any changes in the spans themselves, but by spending up access to them, through improvement of their approaches. Bottlenecks would be eliminated by widening Twenty-third Street and abolishing the traffic light wait at the intersection of M Street and Key Bridge, said Nolen.

His report was based on a study undertaken with consultation of the District Highway Department, Public Roads Administration and the District traffic director's office.

The new Navy Department office building under construction at Arlington Ridge Road and Columbia Pike, a short distance from the proposed War Building, will accommodate 5000 workers. Of the 25,000 employes using the two structures, 80 per cent will live in the District or Maryland and 20 per cent in Virginia, Nolen estimates. At present the figures are 87 per cent and 13 per cent, respectively.

Funds Ready for One Project

Congress already has authorized and appropriated for the Maine Avenue grade separation project, which would eliminate a traffic jam particularly noticeable during rush hours and in the cherry blossom season. The other three proposed improvements are still in the planning stage, however.

Nolen emphasized that the "big four" would be no panacea for all increases in the volume of traffic which may come in the future. The four-ply plan simply is an expedient to facilitate the flow of traffic incidental to the housing of 25,000 Federal office workers in Arlington County. Further growth unquestionably would call for the construction of a new bridge or tunnel across the Potomac, Nolen said.

The Planning Commission yesterday also:

Recommended that the proposed Washington-Baltimore Parkway follow a route through Anacostia Park extended. Greenbelt, the Agriculture Department research center at Beltsville and Fort Meade. The greater part of this high-speed, noncommercial interurban boulevard would be across land now in public ownership.

Indorsed a plan for extending Independence Avenue westward, in connection with traffic congestion relief, by building a causeway spanning the north bay of the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park.

U. S. Rose Culture Is Aided By War Abroad, Expert Says

Hitler's path of European conquest may bring long over-due recognition to the wild American rose, Dr. James A. Gamble, chairman of the Potomac Rose Society show committee, predicted yesterday at the opening meeting of the forty-third annual American Rose Society convention at the Smithsonian Institute.

The war, he said, has sharply cutrailed the importation of rose bushes and seeds from Europe, and to date Americans have relied heavily upon these immigrant stocks for their rose gardens. To replace them, he urged that the country's horticulturalists develop the more than 100 varieties of native American roses.

He suggested that a regional testing ground be established to test suitability of the plants to various soils and climates thus enable the production of about 250 million more roses every year.

About 230 members of the society attended the session which also was addressed by Dr. Charles E. Resser, curator of stratigraphic paleontology of the U. S. National Museum, who spoke on early records of roses in North America, and by Dr. T. M. Little, assistant geneticist with the Department of Agriculture, who talked on the "Area Spread of the Wild Rose Species in North America."

During the day the delegates visited private rose gardens in Alexandria and Chevy Chase, and last night held a roundtable discussion at the Hotel Raleigh on rose culture in various sections of the United States.

Today's program includes a business meeting at the Raleigh at 10 a. m., a rose exhibit at the Smithsonian, and an informal dinner at 7 p. m. at the hotel. Prizes for the exhibitions will be awarded at the Smithsonian after the dinner.

Cards Nose Out Cubs, 3-1, Trail by 2 Points

Moore Hits Two Doubles To Win Game

Harry Gumbert Gives But Seven Hits as Mates Gain on Idle Dodgers in Hot Race

By the United Press

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—With Harry Gumbert pitching seven-hit ball and Terry Moore supplying punch at the plate, the St. Louis Cardinals today defeated the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 1, and moved to within two percentage points of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers in the tense National League pennant race.

The league-leading Dodgers, having an off-day in Philadelphia where they meet the last-place Phillies in a double-header tomorrow, watched the baseball ticker helplessly as the Cards moved nearly abreast of them in the campaign that has only nine more days to run.

In that time, each team must play nine more games with the Dodgers apparently in the best position since seven of their tilts are with the Phillies.

The Cards entered the four-game Chicago series with their customary crippled condition aggravated by a shoulder injury suffered yesterday by First Baseman Johnny Mize. Mize was replaced by Johnny Hopp.

Moore Doubles Twice

Moore, who hasn't connected once during his limited service since recovering from a beaning last month, filled in for Hopp in centerfield and promptly regained his batting eye. His two doubles led to all the Cardinal run-making and were more than enough support for Gumbert's pitching.

Paul Erickson went the route for the Cubs. He allowed eight hits and kept the Cards fairly well subdued except for Moore's two wallops and three hits by Stan Musial, the rookie tip from Rochester. Musial knocked in one run.

Gumbert, obtained from the New York Giants for Fiddler Bill McGee, who subsequently lost his stuff, marked up his fifth straight victory and eleventh of the season against six defeats. The loss was Erickson's seventh compared with five wins.

Moore set up the first Cardinal run in the first inning with a long double to right which sent Jimmy Brown, who had singled, around to third. With none out Erickson was in a tight spot but it looked as if he would weather it when he fanned Johnny Hopp and then Estel Crabtree after walking Musial to fill the bases. But he tried hard for the corners against Frank Crespi, walking the Cardinal second baseman to force across a run. Martin Marion popped out to end the inning.

Cubs Tie Score

The Cubs tied it in the fourth on singles by Bill Nicholson, Babe Dahlgren and Lou Stringer, but Moore's bat came back to plague them in the fifth. Gumbert opened the inning with a single, but Brown forced him at second. Then Moore found his favorite spot in right for another double, scoring Brown, and the center fielder scored himself on Musial's blow over second.

Stringer led off the Cubs' seventh

Series With Phillies Will Make or Break Brooklyn's Chances

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—Icredible as it sounds, the last place Phillies, 51½ games out of first place, may blast the Brooklyn Dodgers right out of the torrid National League pennant scramble during a five-game series that opens with a double-header at Shibe Park tomorrow. If they do, it will be the third time in 15 yeyars they have helped the Cardinals win the pennant.

On paper the downtrodden Phils, already beaten in 102 games and fresh from dropping four in a row to Cincinnati, do not rate a chance with the Flatbush Flock, but—the Dodgers have scored only one run and made but five hits in their last 16 innings against the Phils.

Furthermore, the records show that the Phils, who are not as bad as some believe, have a habit of playing championship ball against pennant contenders.

Remember '26 and '34

In 1926, when the Cardinals were battling Cincinnati for first place, the Phils knocked the Reds out of the race. Again in 1934, when the Cardinals and Dizzy Dean put on their sensational drive to nose out the Giants for the pennant, it was the Phils who started the Giants on the skids with two straight victories late in September. It's a cinch the Cardinals are hoping to benefit again from the Phils.

Manager Leo Durocher, still hot under the collar over the balk called against Pitcher Hugh Casey that led to a Pittsburgh victory yesterday, announced he was taking no chances. His two best pitchers, Kirby Higbe and Whit Wyatt, the only 20-game winners in the league, will not toe the mound in tomorrow's twin bill.

Wyatt has not worked since shutting out the Cardinals, 1 to 0, on three hits last Saturday in the final game of the crucial series at St. Louis.

Blanton and Hoerst Get Call

Against these aces Acting Manager Hans Lobert of the Phils plans to start the veteran Cy Blanton, with his screwball, and youthful Southpaw Frank Hoerst, who tossed a four-hitter to the Dodgers and

Officials Seeking Cause of Trouble; Durocher Fined $150

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19.—The indescribable Dodgers had the National League still traveling and talking in circles today trying to clean up the debris from yesterday's storm in Pittsburgh.

Manager Leo Durocher was fined $150 for using some virulent language to Umpire George Magerkurth and the big umpire, in turn, was being investigated for spouting the same sort of invective.

Bill Klem, supervisor of the league's umpires, came here from Pittsburgh this morning and returned to Philadelphia this afternoon, along with President Larry MacPhail, of the Brooklyn club, in an effort to track down the truth.

What happened on Forbes Field was clearly visible, but not entirely audible, to 9,000 fans. Magerkurth called a balk on Pitcher Hugh Casey, of the Brooklyns, to give the Pirates the tying run in the eighth inning and Casey was so incensed he threw three straight balls over the head of his catcher, the umpire and the batter. Magerkurth rushed out to the mound and reprimanded the hurler, whereupon Durocher blew up and was ordered out of the game. The batter walked, another tripled and Pittsburgh won the game.

—And Under the Stands

Things happened afterward that are known only vaguely, however. Under the stands Magerkurth encountered several of the Dodger players and the wrangling continued until another umpire, Bill Stewart, broke it up.

In announcing Durocher's stiffer-than-average fine today following a conference with Klem and Magerkurth, League President Ford Frick absolved the manager of the later trouble.

"This closes the book on Durocher," he said, "but we are going to find out what happened under the stands and there may be some further disciplinary action tomorrow."

He admitted that Magerkurth's own conduct was also subject to question and said Klem would interview Umpire Stewart as well as the Brooklyn players in Philadelphia, where the Dodgers were waiting out an open date.

MacPhail Defends Players

The players understood to be involved included Whitlow Wyatt, Dolph Camilli, Pete Coscarart and Joe Medwick.

MacPhail, although not present at Frick's conference, came rushing to the defense of his players with a declaration that he and Klem were both making an investigation and that if the reports are true that Magerkurth had used profane lan-

'Lippy Leo' Battles With AP Writer; They Part Friends

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—Manager Leo Durocher of the National League leading Brooklyn Dodgers, engaged in fisticuffs tonight with Ted Meier, an Associated Press reporter.

Durocher met Meier in a Philadelphia hotel and exchanged remarks with the reporter.

Following a sharp verbal battle, witnesses quoted Meier as saying to Durocher: "You're not talking to Magerkurth (Umpire George Magerkurth) now."

The Brooklyn manager then was heard to have invited the reporter "outside," and they proceeded to an alley adjacent to the hotel. A short, violent flurry of fists ensued but friends of both men broke them apart with no damage to either.

They shook hands and walked away.

Meier, who weighs 250 pounds, later said he thought Durocher, who scales a mere 173, was "kidding." "But he wasn't," he added.

Durocher brought the Dodgers here to battle the Philadelphia Phillies in twin bills on Saturday and Sunday and a single game Monday.

Palais Royal Pinmen Win Over Raleigh

Palais Royal bowlers took three games from Raleigh Haberdashers Thursday night to feature hostilities at the opening of the Departmental Store Bowling League at Hi-Skor Alleys. Al Watson had a 371 set, as Kann's tripped Jelleff's in three games.

Bags an Eagle And 6 Birdies On 1st Round

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 19.—Firing an eagle and six birdies, Slammin' Sam Snead shot a six under par, 64, today, to take a one-stroke lead in the first qualifying round of the $5,000 Hurst invitational golf tournament.

It set a new scoring low for the Torresdale-Frankford County Club course and Snead needed it to overcome the 65, which a virtual unknown, Terl Johnson, of Norristown, Pa., had recorded a few minutes earlier.

Going out in 32, two under par, Snead really got hot coming home. He started with an eagle three on the par five tenth when he put his second shot on the green and sank an 8-foot putt. He followed that up with two birdies, muffed an approach shot to take a bogey on the par four thirteenth, came back with a birdie on the fourteenth and finished out in even par for a 32, four under regulation figures. He nearly got another birdie on the eighteenth, where his 20-foot putt stopped on the lip of the cup.

His only bad hole on the first nine was the third, where he two-

Plans Opened for Mexico to Play U. of New Mexico

By International News Service

Mexico City, Sept. 19.—Negotiations for a New Year's Day football game between the University of Mexico and the University of New Mexico were opened here tonight with United States Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, taking a leading part.

After a preliminary conference with Coach Bernard A. Hoban and Graduate Manager Leopoldo Noriega, of the University of Mexico, Chavez asserted that the game would be played in the Mexico City National Stadium if negotiations go through.

"It would be a symbolic contribution to the good relations between the two countries to have these universities, one of New Mexico and one of old Mexico, meet on the field of sport," Chevez said.

Citadel Swamps High Point, 45-0

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 19 (AP).—The Citadel Light Brigade launched its 1941 season tonight by overpowering a helpless High Point College team 45 to 0 before a crowd of 5,000 spectators.

The High Point team was unimpressive offensively, gaining only 21 yards net from scrimmage against the Citadel's stout defense.

Fate of 11 Redskins Depends On Showing in Game Tonight

Squad of 44 Will Be Pared to 33 for Season As Players Clash in 'Bread-and-Butter' Battle

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 19.—The Redskins will stage their big "Bread and Butter bowl" game here tomorrow night. For the benefit of local consumption, it has been designated as a "East-West Battle" but it will be the nearest thing to mayhem seen on a gridiron.

Forty-four players will enter tonight's struggle with hopes of retaining positions on the 1941 Redskins. Coach Ray Flaherty isn't kidding when he says that only 14 of the present squad have assured themselves of jobs for this season. The league rules set a limit of 33 players.

Somebody has to be sent home and every player on the squad says, "It can't be me." Although some fans will call this a glorified scrimmage, it is more than that. It will be the same kind of game that sent Andy Farkas to the hospital and cost the Redskins the services of one of the greatest backs in pro football history last year. The host of rookies who have been through the training grind know that it is now or never as far as their football future is concerned.

Baugh vs. Filchock

It will be a passing duel between Sammy Baugh, on the West and Frank Filchock on the East. Coach Ray Flaherty has disregarded the East-West angle and in reality the line-ups will be those of the two teams that he will use alternately by quarters against the New York Giants in Washington on September 28.

The epidelc of sore throats and colds which hit the squad here this week is likely to keep four players out of action. Wilbur Moore and Bob Tichenal have the worse cases but Bob Masterson and Jack Guthrie, the latter a rookie quarterback, are ailing. Coach Ray Flaherty was back on his feet today and supervised the final drill of the training season in the West.

'Skins Here Tuesday

The Redskins, those who make the grade, will leave here Sunday morning for Chicago, arriving there on Monday for practice and lunch before departing for Washington, where they will arrive on Tuesday. They will go directly to American University for practice.

Ray Robinson Knocks Out Max Shapiro

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19.—Banging his way up toward a shot at the lightweight championship, Skinny Ray Robinson, the Harlem hammer, flattened Maxie Shapiro, little East Sider, in three rounds in Madison Square Garden tonight for his twenty-fourth straight victory as a professional. Robinson weighed 135¼; Shapiro, 133¾.

Held fairly even in the first round, Robinson floored his stumpy rival twice in the second and had him on the deck twice more in the third before Referee Arthur Donovan stepped in and stopped the bout at 2 minutes, 4 seconds of that heat, with Shapiro helpless against the ropes in his corner.

A crowd of 11,945 paid a gross of $21,822 to see the show.

20th K. O. Victory

It was the twentieth knockout the sensational Negro swatter has chalked up in his string of 24 triumphs since he left the amateurs only last October. After tonight's tusale, in which the belting beanpole didn't extend himself, Promoter Mike Jacobs began laying plans to move Robinson into a lightweight title shot against the winner of the forthcoming bout between Lew Jenkins, who holds the New York State Commission's sanctions as champion, and Sammy Angott, of Louisville, and Washington, Pa., who is recognized by the National Boxing Association.

The whole thing was brief and to the point. In the first round, Robinson toyed with his opponent as Maxie fought out of a crouch and did not give Robinson a target to punch at.

In the second, Ray started firing his high hard one and straightened Maxie up with a long right. A flurry of punches pushed Shapiro down for a count of three near the ropes. A right hand dropped him for eight a few moments later.

Picking up in the third where he left off in the second, Ray caught Shapiro flush on the mouth with a smashing right and a long, solid left, and Maxie went down for nine. He got up again, but a barrage

Keller Visits N. Y. Stadium; May Not Miss World Series

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19.—Hopes of the New York Yankees for having Outfielder Charley Keller available for the world series got a big lift today.

The home-run slugger, who suffered a chip fracture of his right ankle a few days ago, showed up at Yankee Stadium today and walked around on the turf.

He said the tendons hurt a bit, but that he was sure he would be ready to play in the series.

He planned to don spiked shoes tomorrow and exercise some more.

Dodger Bums Get Piece of Blarney Stone for Luck

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—If the Dodgers need luck to win the National League pennant, they've got it now.

A Brooklyn fan sent Outfielder Dixie Walker a piece of the Blarney Stone, in Ireland, set in a gold horseshoe.

"Wear it, Dixie, my boy," wrote the unknown donor, "and the Dodgers can't lose."

ROMAN'S PERFORMANCE LAUDED

When the year's super feats are recapitulated, as they inevitably will be in those late December days which find the sports section a document of retrospect, turf people will be reserving a large hunk of fame for a little bay colt named Roman.

POVICH

They heaped 140 pounds on the back of the four-year-old son of Sir Gallahad II—Buck Up the other day at Belmont and he sprinted to victory in time that equaled the track record, yet, in the annual High Weight Handicap. It may have been the finest six-furlong performance of all turf history.

No horse before Roman ever ran six furlongs in 1:10 with 140 pounds on his back, and his performance was the more amazing inasmuch as 30 pounds of it was dead weight, lead contained in the saddle bag beneath little Don Meade. Meade could distribute his own weight in the manner best helpful to the horse, but that 30 pounds of lead was simply there to be carried by Roman.

Back in 1905-1906, we have it on authority of Humphrey Finney, editor of the Maryland Horse, the sprinter Roseben twice won the Manhattan Handicap at Belmont, each time carrying 147 pounds, but in no such fast time as Roman unreeled the other day. In contrast, Roseben was a big horse with huge quarters and born to carry weight.

Roman is on the small side but, as the horse people say, beautifully balanced, with tremendous shoulders, and altogether a horse of excellent quality. He gets his speed and weight carrying ability from both his sire and the distaff side. Sir Gallahad's qualities are well known, but Buck Up was no champion when she raced as a filly. However, Buck Up is of lineage fully as proud as Sir Gallahad's.

Investigation reveals that Buck Up, dam of Roman, is by the good mare Bucking, she by Look Up, as the turf folk say. Look Up is of the Ultimate line and the Ultimate strain means the speed and quality of Domino. Thus in Roman, Joseph D. Widener possesses a colt with some of the combined attributes of Sir Gallahad and Domino, which comes pretty close to tops in breeding.

Englishman Started Weight-Fixing

If you are still with us, perhaps you'll be interested in knowing something about this weight business as it is scaled for horses. The man who started it all and whose word on the subject for years was law in the fixing of weights was a British admiral named Henry J. Rous who back in the '80s devised the modern system of handicapping horses.

Admiral Rous was the virtual dictator of the British turf after retiring from the Navy in the early seventies, and made a diligent study of horses' performances in relation to weight. American racing took its weights from the British turf as formulated by the admiral. It is no mere happenstance, for example, that the fixed weight for the Kentucky Derby is 126 pounds for 3-year-old colts.

One hundred and twenty-six pounds, translated into the English vernacular, means nine stone, which was an accepted racing weight in England. Thus, when Roman was carrying 140 pounds the other day, he was carrying ten stone. England has another word for ten stone. It's "welterweight," from which comes the prize ring's label for 140-pounders, incidentally.

Weight is, of course, the great leveller in racing and sufficient disparity will bring great horses and mere good ones together in a tight-fit finish. Horsemen will tell you when you ask how much weight a horse can carry that "enough weight will stop a train." They don't pretend to know how much of a package a horse will carry until they try it. "The last pound you put on a horse may be the straw that breaks the camel's back," observes Humphrey Finney.

Owner Riddle Was Indignant

Aged Sam Riddle, 15 years back, was so indignant at the Pimlico track Handicapper for piling 136 pounds on his Crusader in the Gold Cup Race that for several years he refused to race his horses at Pimlico. He called it a back-breaking race at the long distance. William L. Brann, owner of Challedon, refused to run his steed in a race last year when the track handicapper assigned him 135 pounds. Brann would have run Challedon at 132. That's how important he considered three additional pounds.

Actually, the Highweight Handicap has been run in faster time than the 1:10 of Roman, but the circumstances were different. From 1926 to 1939, the six furlongs were run on the straight away Widener course. Last year it was restored to the main track with its two turns which accounts for the difference in time. The straightaway course record of 1:09 2/5 is held by the good sprinter Balko, a big black charger that may have been the most beautiful horse on the American turf.

Boy, fetch me my bowler.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

NOVA CAMP IS WEIRD ONE

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Sept. 19.—There never was a fight camp quite like this one. And there have been some weird ones.

Sitting at the ringside yesterday, his deeply sunken eyes fastened steadily on Nova, while Lou was working five rounds against three sparring partners, sat towering Prof. Brown. Since Dr. Pierre "Oom the Omnipotent" Bernard, Nova's first Yoga teacher, expelled Nova from his cult on a trumped up charge of clear thinking, Prof. Brown has been in charge of Lou's faddist side.

CONSIDINE

We commented that Lou looked better in training than we've ever seen him look, and the professor gave us that caved-in stare for a moment. "He's 100 per cent improved, since I took over the matter of his balance," the professor, who looks a little like Ambassador Winant, intoned. "In another year he'll have a sense of balance that will compare favorably with that of all the great champions of the past."

We suggested that Lou might not be able to wait a year; that he might need it right now—or at least by September 29.

"He'll beat Louis," the professor said with quiet conviction. "Nova's punching right for the first time in his life. When I first got him he held his right hand back near his right ribs, and he had to pivot around something like a golfer before he could get in position to throw a punch. Then when he threw it he'd be off balance.

"Now I've got him standing more in a facing position with his opponents, and instead of lunging forward when he punches I've got him squatting downward suddenly and shooting his fist out and back very fast—piston-like. He's never off balance that way."

Professor Discounts Method

We added something to the effect that we always thought that the only way to hit a ball or a chin was to pour your weight behind the bat or club or racquet or first. "That's wrong," the professor boomed sternly. If your weight is traveling down you exert more power than when it is travelling in the direction of the thing you want to hit. I'll show you pictures of Joe DiMaggio at the moment this bat comes in contact with the ball, and you'll find him instinctively in the same semi-squat that I've been teaching Nova.

"It's Tibetan, these theories of mine," the professor explained. "I first became interested in them through a friend of the poet laureate of a Tibetan lamasery. Did you know that the Tibetan priests are so perfectly versed in these exercises that they are said to be able to kill a man with a single punch? I don't box much myself any more—I was heavyweight champion of Alaska in 1912—but not long ago I let a punch go against a young heavyweight, with all my balance theories behind it. He was semiconscious for four hours. I boxed some with Nova when I first became associated with him. But not any more. I make him think too much . . . and I'm afraid that if he gets in that habit in the ring, he might get clipped."

Nova in Great Shape

We asked the professor to name his other disciples.

"Three painters," he said.

Sitting not far from the professor was Judge Jeremiah Mahoney, the distinguished jurist who is not only a fight fan but still an excellent boxer. "I boxed with Lou not long ago," Judge Mahoney told us. "I think he's got a chance against Louis if he overcomes his bad habit of feinting his way into being a perfect target for a one-two punch. My great worry is that he'll get so badly hurt in the first round that it might all be over then and there. But let him go through that first round successfully and he's going to be awful hard to beat . . . awful hard. He's a better boxer than Louis and I think he's sturdier. I give him a very good chance—if he gets past that first round."

As we were saying, Nova looks better. He's in truly magnificent physical condition. Nova's punching faster, he no longer seems to get his legs crossed when he's hitting, he has added bewilderingly to his feinting and he packs a better wallop.

We're inclined to scoff in our coarse and ignorant way at words like "cosmic punch" and "dynamic posture" but something has made him a better fighter, and for the time being at least we're inclined to give the credit to the Yoga and Tibetian mob.

We think Judge Mahoney is right, but Nova's danger extends over a much longer period. Louis proved all over again in the Coan fight that he can punch as hard when he is dog-tired and discouraged as he can when he's fresh. We give Nova a chance to win the decision, but if he does we think he'll have to get up two or three times to do it. For Lou's iron jaw is still pretty easy to hit. Max Baer hit that jaw, then pulled up his tights, patted down his hair and waved to a friend in the eighth row—and Nova had time to recuperate. When Louis hits a guy he keeps hitting him as fast as he can throw them.

Grid Spotlight on Dixie Games as Season Officially Opens

Major Teams See Action Over Nation

Virginia to Meet Hampden-Sydney in Opener; Richmond Plays N. C. State

The college football season opens today and autumn is officially here.

There are not great intersectional clashes. There are even mighty few games that figure to be close. But some 15 major colleges pull up the curtain on the 1941 version of their gridiron machines and—playing set-ups or no—the events give the Nation's 20 million pigskin enthusiasts a preview of the madhouse events to come.

As usual, Southern teams predominate on the opening card. The mighty of the Southern and Southeastern conferences takes their respective fields under baseball weather and play before shirt-sleeved fans.

Most even game in the South, perhaps, is that tonight at Raleigh, pitting N. C. State against the University of Richmond in a Southern Conference encounter. Other major outfits which open today and tonight include North Carolina, Clemson, Florida, Tennessee, Virginia and V. P. I., all of which meet smaller schools of weaker caliber.

Richmond Faces N. C. State Unprepared

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Richmond University's Spiders are going to charge off their first game to experience, Coach Glenn F. Thistlethwaite said tonight as he left by train with the squad of 40 players who will oppose North Carolina State at Raleigh Saturday evening.

"We're just not ready," he said. "State's unusually strong and we have a very green team. However, we should learn a few things which will help us later."

The players went through a light workout, studied a few blackboard diagrams and then went down to Main Street Station for the train trip to Raleigh.

Boston College Meets St. Anselm

Newton, Mass., Sept. 19 (AP).—The departure of a galaxy of stars and an entire coaching staff appears to have made little difference to the Boston College Eagles, who launch this section's 1941 college football season tomorrow by engaging little St. Anselm before an expected crowd of 20,000.

Denny Myers, who succeeded Frank Leahy here, named 11 players who shared in Boston College's Sugar Bowl triumph over Tennessee on his starting line-up, which probably will remain intact for next week's major clash with Tulane at New Orleans.

Under Myers, the Eagles have discarded the Notre Dame attack for a combination of single wing back and T-formation plays.

Vols in Real Test With Hurricane

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 19 (AP).—The Tennessee Vols, unconquerable in the past three seasons of regular play, will be put to a severe test tomorrow afternoon by Furman's Purple Hurricanes.

The Hurricanes have a rangy, formidable squad and figure to give Tennessee a real scrap.

Head Coach John Barnhill of Tennessee will send his Volunteers onto the field at 2:30 p. m. (C. D. T.) with an undetermined status. Barnhill will try the one-two team system that his predecessor, Maj. Robert R. Neyland, used so successfully, but it may be discarded before the first period is well under way.

Cavaliers Ready For Tigers Today

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 19.—Coach Frank Murray sent the Cavalier football squad through a light pregame rehearsal today and said the entire squad was ready for action in the University of Virginia's opening game with Hampden-Sydney here tomorrow.

Nine lettermen were named in the Cavaliers' starting line-up. Nick Schlegel, 1940 varsity squad member, was elevated to a regular tackle post, and Tony Lakin, ineligible as a sophomore last year, moved into left guard.

Nashville Wins Association Play-Off, 3-2

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Sept. 19.—The Nashville Vols won the Southern Association playoff tonight by trimming Atlanta's charitable Crackers in 10 innings, 3-2, for the fourth time in the seven-game series.

A closing rush gave Manager Larry Gilbert his third straight Shaughnessy playoff title, the Vols scoring twice in the ninth after eight scoreless innings in a tight pitching duel and winning in the tenth on two hits and two forceouts.

Bob Chipman pitched brilliant baseball, outlasting Nashville's Russell Meers and Lefty Gassoway.

Atanta won the regular season pennant with games to spare.

Nashville now meets Dallas, Texas League playoff victor, in the Dixie Series.

Penguin Stars Seek Honors At Annapolis

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 19.—Dinghy sailors from Washington, Baltimore, Annapolis, Eastern Shore points, Boston, Red Bank, N. J., and sailing centers of Barnegat Bay and Long Island Sound will compete tomorrow and Sunday in the first national championship regatta of the Penguin Class Dinghy Association.

Among the contestants will be Paul Norris, Seattle, Wash., radio announcer who last weekend won the penguin races at the President's Cup Regatta, Washington, D. C. His penguin Mike Fright is champion of the Seattle penguin fleet, one of the largest small-boat fleets in the country.

The eight-race series will be held under the auspices of the Annapolis Yacht Club. The first three races tomorrow morning will be open to all contestants sailing as a single fleet. The fleet then will be divided into two divisions based on the standings. The upper half of the contestants, Division 1, will race for the national championship.

The Annapolis Yach Club trophy will be at stake in Division 1. The other skippers will compete in Division 2 for a trophy donated by William Heintz, Penquin class president.

The initial races in both Division 1 and 2 will be sailed tomorrow afternoon, followed by a dance at the Annapolis Yacht Club. The finals will be staged Sunday morning with the presentation of prizes scheduled at 3 p. m.

Gonzaga Invades Petersburg Today

Gonzaga High eleven, with a 22-0 triumph over National Training School already to its credit, goes out for its second victory of the season today when it faces Petersburg (Va.) High representatives on the out-of-town gridiron.

The only other competition of the day for local schoolboy teams will be Bullis Prep's first start of the year against Newport News High at the Virginia school's field.

Now It's A 'V' Formation For Possible Eagle Victories

Coach Cassell Combines Notre Dame Box With Short Punt Formation for A. U. Team

By Jack Munhall

The startling alphabeltical trend which threatens to transform football from sport to soup has gone two letters further out at American University. Stafford H. (Pop) Cassell has cooked up a pigskin dish which he calls the "V," and which is one character advanced over the celebrated "T."

Now, before we go any further, it should be explained that Cassell claims no innovation. He admits frankly he borrowed his idea partly from the old Notre Dame "box" and partly from the short punt formation, which allegedly grew out of the box. He won't admit, however, that the "V for victory" campaign had any influence on his new system.

"Of course if this bolsters the esprit de corps of my ball club then so much the better. But the real reason for the development of the "V" was because I thought it very simple to teach and because it appeared to combine more power and deception than any other system I have tried."

In case you have so far been unable to decipher the "V," it should be explained that the "V" gets its name from the position of the center in relation to the four backs. The center forms the closed end of the letter. Behind him, and a step to his left and right, are the Nos. 4 and 1 backs, respectively, and behind them and a step to the outside are the Nos. 2 and 3 backs, respectively. Thus is formed the "V," which you may look at in pictures accompanying this article.

In support of his new formation, which he worked out during the summer, Cassell offers four major arguments. He claims that:

1. It gives increased power, principally because the ball carrier can, at all times, have three backfield blockers in front of him.

2. It affords chance for much deception, because all four of the backs are in position to spin and to engage in reverses.

3. It is very easy to teach; adaptable to any type of material.

4. It offers a more versatile backfield in every way, with all four men being able to run, pass or kick from their normal positions.

Balanced Line

While Cassell will not compare his "V" with any of the so-called major formations, he does claim for it one distinction. That is, it has no strong side, either in the line, which is balanced and split, or in the backfield. With every other widely used system there is a strong side.

Cassell, while he says that the "V" can easily be taught to any group of boys, admits that there are certain kinds of talent preferred at center and at all backfield positions. But this, he says, is no different than in any other system, for he is a firm believer that a coach's material should determine the kind of football he uses.

At center Cassell desires a big, rugged fellow who can crossblock and who is unerring in his passes to the backs, since there is little margin of fumble-safety when he is passing directly to the Nos. 3 and 2 backs.

For his Nos. 4 and 1 backs, or the close-up backs, Cassell wants boys who can handle the ball and block especially well. If they have any other specialities, so much the better, but the first two things he looks for from them are ball handling and ability to clear the path. At the 3 and 2 back berths, Cassell wants fast men who can hit that line and also kick and pass. In other words he wants a least one triple-threater, or a close facsimile thereof.

Good in Practice

One advantage of the "V," as can be obviously seen, is its constant threat of a quick kick, for every back can, from his regular position, get off an unexpected punt. When the Nos. 3 and 2 backs punt, they are screened by as well as blocked for by the up backs. And if an up back fades back for a quick kick, he also can be afforded ample blocking protection by the other three. His sidekick, of course, is already in position to block, and the Nos. 3 and 2 backs can move in as the kicker moves back so they, too, will be ready to repel oncoming defenders.

Just how all this will work out under real game conditions, Cassell says he isn't sure, though in practice he has been delighted with the results.

"It's like the old fellow watching a hen," he says, "and wondering just what she'll hatch."

What Cassell hopes will hatch are plenty of touchdowns for the Eagles, who have been the doormats of local football for years and years, but who look fit to take in the welcome sign this year, as far as rivals are concerned.

Desire Football Games

The Richmond (Va.) Optimists grid team, composed of former high school players, is seeking 170-pound games with several District elevens on Sundays. Challengers should write Hank Wolfe, at the Richmond News-Leader.

Line Coach Shields Joins G. W. Squad

Gene Shields made a delayed appearance as George Washington line coach yesterday, reporting to the East Potomac practice field shortly after stepping off a plane which brought him here from Portland, Oreg.

The big former Oregon line coach was expected back about the fifteenth of the month, and as each day passed without him Head Coach Bill Reinhart's anxiety increased. Without his chief assistant, Reinhart was unable to go full speed ahead with the final drills before the Colonials open their season with Mount St. Mary's next Saturday.

In a reshuffling of the George Washington University coaching staff, Kermit (ZuZu) Stewart has been appointed freshman football coach, it was announced yesterday.

Stewart, a former star Colonial guard and a member of the coaching staff for several years, succeeds Ray Hanken, who will work with the varsity squad.

In civilian clothes yesterday, Shields did little more than greet the players and get a line of what has been accomplished in his absence. Tomorrow he will don frayed pants and a battered fedora, a la Coach Reinhart, and get down to work.

Leonard to Face A's in Quest of 18th Win Today

The Nats today will attempt to further their twin ambitions—permanent escape from the American League cellar and an ascent to sixth place.

They meet the Philadelphia Athletics in the first of a three-game series at Griffith Stadium. The immediate idea will be to increase to four full games their margin over the eighth-place A's. Ahead of the Nats, the St. Louis Browns have only a single-game grip on sixth place.

Dutch Leonard, still striving to achieve 20 victories for the year, will seek his eighteenth today. He must win all of the three remaining starts he will make to reach his goal.

Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats yesterday denied published reports that Ossie Bluege would be placed in general charge of the Nats' farm teams. "I have made no such plans," said Griffith.

Three Colleges Donate 1000 Tickets to Soldiers

New York, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Fordham, N. Y. U., and Manhattan acted today to provide service men with 1000 free tickets to all home football games played in the Yankee Stadium or the Polo Grounds by the three schools.

A joint statement announcing the action was issued by Graduate Managers Jack Coffey and A. B. Nixon of Fordham and N. Y. U., and Athletic Director Herb Kopf of Manhattan.

Knight Resigns As Nebraska Coach

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 19 (AP).—Wilbur Knight, University of Nebraska baseball coach since 1933, has resigned because his coaching duties conflicted with his physical education work at the agricultural college, the athletic department announced today. The athletic board, meeting next Monday, is expected to name Paul Amen, former Cornhusker football and baseball star and now assistant coach, as head coach of baseball.

Miller Takes Midget Finale At Speedway

Charlie Miller, Linden, N. J., driver of a noisy outboard motored job, last night won the featured 25-lap event on the season's last midget auto race program at West Lanham Speedway. Announcement of the cessation of this year's racing at the track Ed Mahoney built last summer was made during the program. The West Lanham management, it was said, decided upon the move because of the cool weather that has attended the last two cards and because the track has been made dangerously slippery from heavy dews.

The 4000 fans who turned out for what proved their last glimpse of the sputterin' cars until next summer were treated to a night's entertainment that included most everything in the books. There were spills, with none seriously injured, comedy and plenty of action and drama.

Victor Grabs Early Lead

The feature race, in which Miller avenged his last week's losses to Tony Willman by defeating that rival handily, was a monotonous affair Miller jumped into an early lead, followed by John Ritter, Johnny Pierson and Red Redmond, and they maintained that order, with few exceptions, until the finish.

Tough-luck victim of the night was Jimmy Forte, 38-year-old Philadelphia veteran. His misfortunes started en route to the track when the trailer bearing his midget auto was struck from behind. His racing car was damaged so seriously that it could not be used and so he arrived at the track two races late.

Hurriedly, Forte obtained the use of a car owned by Hubert Routt of this city, and just in time entered the third and last qualifying heat for the bigger events to follow. In good story book form, Forte not only won the race but established a new A. A. A. track record of 2:26:.61, but his luck was destined to go sour again.

Forte's Car Blows Tire

On the fifth lap of the feature race, for which he qualified by finishing fourth in his semifinal test, Fort's car blew a tire and forced him from competition. The errant tire hurtled from the track and landed among a group of fans who proved clever dodgers.

Oddest race yet seen at West Lanham transpired in the semifeature which was for drivers who thus far had failed to qualify for the feature. Nine cars were entered, seven actually started and two finished. Only near-serious mishap reducing the field was suffered by Walter Fair of Philadelphia, whose car spun out of control coming out of a turn and bumped his head against the restraining wall. The car bounced crazily and shook Fair to his teeth, but he emerged unhurt, thanks most to his crash helmet.—J. M.

Middies and Hoyas Meet Again Today

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 19.—Navy's football squad was put through a light dummy scrimmage drill today in preparation for tomorrow's informal practice session with Georgetown University.

The Middies practiced offensive formations and punting during the drill which lasted about an hour and a half.

Swede Larson, Navy coach, said Phil Hurt, Howard Clark, Wes Gebert, Bob Froude, Alan Cameron, Zeke Zechella and Lars Wanggaard were on the sidelines with injuries. Hurt suffered a chest injury in Wednesday's informal scrimmage with the Hoyas, Larson added.

Miler to Be Inducted

Torrance, Calif., Sept. 19 (AP).—Lou Zamperini, former Southern California mile ace, has been ordered to report for induction into the Army Sept. 29. He holds the N. C. A. A. mile record of 44:08.03.

G. W. High Trounces James Monroe, 31 to 0

Entire Alexandria Squad Used in Rout Of Monroe Eleven; T Formation Used

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 19.—George Washington High School's gridiron team flashed a warning to other Class A high schools in Virginia here this afternoon in defeating Class B James Monroe High, of this city, 31 to 0, in what marked the opening encounter for both elevens.

It was the worst defeat suffered by a local high school team since 1935 when the Alexandrians won, 38 to 6.

Rasty Doran, coach of the Presidents, kept his first string in only a few minutes and then used his entire list of subs. Had he desired, the score might have equaled that of the Bears over the Redskins last year.

The Alexandrians worked their plays from the difficult T formation—and to perfection. Dorem undoubtedly has one of the smoothest elevens produced in the northern Virginia high school in recent years. So baffling were their plays that the Fredericksburg defense was constantly in a muddle as to where to turn next.

George Washington scored its first touchdown in the early minutes of play, charging down the field in a sustained drive that carried 52 yards from their own 18.

Dalton drove, Marty Foltz and Johnny Shelton, running from a modified T, ripped off consistent yardage, with Shelton going over from the 1. Foltz missed the placement.

In first downs the Presidents outgamed Monroe, 17 to 3.

Montreal Tops Newark, 6 to 4; Leads Play-Off

By the Associated Press

Montreal, Sept. 19.—The Montreal Royals forged a game ahead of the Newark Bears in the final round of the Governor's Cup playoffs tonight by taking the third game of the best-of-seven series, 6-4.

A double by Alex Kampouris with two out and two on in the eighth inning gave the Royals their winning margin and cost Big John Lindell his first defeat since July 8.

Lindell held the Royals to five hits, but four of them went for extra bases, including a home run by Jock Graham in the sixth. Graham also had a single in three official trips to the plate.

Red Birds Win

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 19 (AP).—The champion Columbus Red Birds defeated the second-place Louisville Colonels, 8 to 1, tonight in the first game of the final series of the American Association Governor's Cup playoffs before 4734 spectators.

With Johnny Grodzicki turning in his third straight victory of the playoffs, the Red Birds made the most of Bill Sayles' and Owen Scheetz's wildness by hitting hard and timely in the pinches to allow only one of their eight hits to be wasted.

Sayles, the losing pitcher, went out in the fourth after having allowed five of Columbus' eight hits and issued six bases on balls. Scheetz, in relief, forced a run over before retiring the side and was knicked for another pair of tallies in the sixth when Ray Sanders homered over the right field fence with one on.

Editors Pick Alabama, Duke For Grid Titles

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Sept. 19.—Duke and Alabama are going to get somebody's post-season football bids—or most of the South's sports editors are mighty mistaken.

An Associated Press poll of gridiron prognosticators in nine States gave Duke 35 out of 38 votes for first place in the Southern Conference; Alabama 25 out of 38 in the Southeastern Conference. North Carolina was the overwhelming choice for runner-up in the Southern, and Tennessee—champion since 1938—second choice in the Southeastern.

Clemson, defending champion of the Southern Conference, was rated third for 1941, and not one editor picked the Tigers to retain the title. Twelve, however, thought Clemson would be second to Duke. The three editors failing to name Duke No. 1 gave Wallace Wade's team as second choice, and picked North Carolina as probable champion.

Each sports editor was asked to name his selections to the top five teams in each conference, in order. Allowing five points for first choice, four for second, and on down to one for fifth, here's how the press box ranked them:

Southern.		Southeastern.

Devitt Beats Hagerstown At Night, 13-6

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 19.—George McGowan, fullback, sparked Devitt Prep School eleven of Washington to a 13-to-6 victory here tonight over the Hagerstown High School in the first football game ever played here under lights.

McGowan, with scintillating line plunges which were usually good for from 5 to 15 yards and end runs, scored both of Devitt's touchdowns.

A lucky recovery of a forward pass which jumped out of the arms of a Devitt receiver into those of Jack Love, was responsible for Hagerstown's touchdown. Love ran 90 yards to score.

Devitt, after the first few minutes of play, smothered most of the Hagerstown offense.

Richards' Net String Snapped By Frank Kovacs

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 19.—Giant-killer George Richards, of Montebello, Calif., reached the end of his string today in the Pacific Southwest tennis tournament.

The young southpaw started off like a streak against Frankie Kovacs, the Oakland funster, but Good-time Frankie showed him shots he couldn't handle and won, 2—6, 7—5, 6—4, 6—3, to enter the men's singles finals.

Kovacs plays the winner of tomorrow's match between National Champion Bobby Riggs and Frank Parker, of Altadena, Calif.

Richards had eliminated such seeded stars as Ted Schroeder and Hal Surface.

Bogart and McClure Qualify in Crump Cup

Philadelphia, Sept. 19 (AP).—Ralph Bogart and J. E. McClure, of Burning Tree Club, Washington, qualified for match play for Crump Cup at Pine Valley Country Club. Bogart shot 172 and McClure 173. Frank Ross, Hartford, Conn., won medal with 152.

Agusiewicz Shines for Colonials

Little Guard Makes Self Felt With Excellent Work

On the various All-America check lists for 1941 you probably won't find the name of Henry Agusiewicz. George Washington's pocket-size guard, but Colonial coaches would debate a long time before they'd trade their little star for any rival.

"By far the best blocker on the line," is the praise teammates give this 180-pound junior from Mount Carmel, Pa. Agusiewicz (pronounced Au-gus-savage) is as fierce a competitor as his name implies, and for a little fellow (he's only 5 feet, 8 inches) he packs more drive into his compact frame than most 200-pound tackles.

Last year Agusiewicz was, perhaps, the Colonials' most outstanding sophomore, being particularly noted by fans for his ability to pull out of the line and bowl over wouldbe tacklers as he led interference for G. W. backs. But that is only one department of the game in which Lil' Hank is exceptionally proficient.

Yesterday as Coach Ray Hanken sent the Colonial linemen through a blocking drill, in which an end and another lineman, emulating a halfback, would box a tackle, Agusiewicz was the most impressive player of the lot. In one series of plays, particularly, Henry was really something to see. He and Stan Ziobro, a guard, converted this season into an end, were pitted against Walter Murphy, promising 208-pound sophomore tackle. The massive Murphy never had a chance. Ziobro would set him up with a shoulder block and as he struggled, then Lil' Hank would flip him over with a crashing charge that once flipped the powerful tackle head over heels.

Speaking of Ziobro, this versatile 182-pound senior promises to develop into the coach's dream of a crashing end. Fast and rugged, he appears to lack only one prerequisite of a great end—height. His 5-fot 9-inch stature is several inches shorter than normal for this position.

But back to Agusiwicz. We already have spoken of his ability to run interference and to block at his position, and now we come to what seems his strong forte—defensive play. Here he is a natural. His drive and power make him difficult enough to be blocked, but unlike so many linemen with terrific drive, Agusiwicz usually is smart enough to escape being mouse-trapped. Add to these talents his uncanny success in diagnosing enemy plays and his speed, which enables him to overtake halfbacks in the open field, you have the makings of a true all-American guard. . . J. Diminutive Player Uses 180 Pounds To Best Advantage

Whirlaway to Face Small Field In Lawrence Realization Today

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Whirlaway has a date to pick up some loose change at Belmont Park tomorrow, and if victor he'll move into third place on the all-time list of racing money winners.

Four other three-year-olds were named to go with the champ in the forty-ninth running o fthe ancient Lawrence Realization, but despite Whirly's defeat by War Relic at Narragansett a week ago, none of these appeared to be in his league as a galloper.

As a result, he figured to be about 1 to 8 to get back on the winning track in this three-year-old classic. The stake involves some $15,000 or more, and that amount, added to the $324,611 he already has in the bankroll would boost Warren Wright's whirlwind from fifth place up past Gallant Fox and Equipoise. This will leave only Seabiscuit with his $437,730 and Sun Beau with his $376,744 still in front of Whirlaway and his campaign to head the list by next March.

Out for Jackpot

Owner Wright and Trainer Ben Jones not only are shooting at the Realization on the first big Saturday of Belmont's busy fall meeting, but they're out for the whole jackpot this time.

In addition to Whirly, they're sending Mar-Kell, daughter of the great Nellie Flag, after the $15,000 or so in the forty-fifth running of the matron stakes. Off her handy victory in the Spinaway Stakes at Saratoga, this husky young lady probably will be the choice in the field of 13, despite the entries of such stake-winners as Alf Vanderbilt's Petrify, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Spanish Moss, Jock Whitney's Court Manners and William Ziegler, jr.'s sleek miss, Romping Home, for the six-furlong dash.

The mile and five-eighths of the Realization is the longest Whirly has been asked to go since he started his triumphant tour of the tracks in the Kentucky Derby.

Not Much Competition

In spite of the distance and the fact that many folks thought he was a tired horse in losing to War Relic last week, he shouldn't have to work up a good sweat beating off such as William du Pont, jr.'s, Fairymant, W. E. Boeing's Time Counts, Hal Price Headly's Alaking or his own stablemate, Dandy Fox, who make up the rest of the field. Alaking is the only one of the lot who has shown championship class of any kind this year.

Equipet, Regaining Form, Wins by Five Lengths at 'Graw

Steel Beam Runs Second To 3-2 Shot

Victor Grabs Early Lead and Increases Margin With Smart Ride by Shelhamer

By Clocker Mike

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 19.—Breckinridge Long's Equipet was only an also ran in the Eastern Shore Handicap, but in the Belle Star, fifth and feature race today, she was a real champion. The crowd of 8000 knew of her speed and they made her 3-2 over her 10 opponents. She took the lead early and drew out gradually to reach the wire in hand and five lengths clear of Steel Beam. Crow Wilder, after being last at one stage of the race, took the show money.

A 2-year-old daughter of the great Equipoise, Equipet lost little time in wresting the lead from Visiting Nurse. Leaving the back-stretch she had drawn out to a daylight lead and had yet to show her best speed. She was never threatened for the lead but behind her came a merry battle for the honor of chasing her. At one stage of the race it appeared that Home Wolf would take those honors, but he gave up and Hooks came through on the rail to loom as a factor. However, in the drive to the wire, Equipet continued to lengthen her lead and Steel Beam held on to her margin for the place. Both Home Wolf and Hooks dropped out of the picture and Crow Wilder took a photo decision from Arthur C. for the third award.

Trained by L. G. (Buster) Bedwell, it was only natural that Al Shelhamer would do the booting. The win put Shelly in the lead for the $500 gold stop watch offered the leading rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR MOWLEE, $25.70, $8.80, $4.30; CHALDAR, $7.80, $4.30; CHEER ME, $2.70.

SIR MOWLEE was steadied along behind the pace of BLABLAH, responded to pressure in the stretch to take command and had to be hard ridden to outlast CHALDAR. The latter raced on the outside for the first half, ducked to the rail and was going well at the end. CHEER ME was shuffled back while trying to move, came to the outside and closed best of all. BLABLAH was in front, until leaving the eighth pole and then quit. UNKNOWN LAND was in close quarters after going a sixteenth of a mile and lost his rider.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:34½. Winner, S. Brooks' br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRACK FAVOR, $5.30, $3.40, $2.90; LEGAL LIGHT, $5.10, $4.20; McHENRY, $8.60.

CRACK FAVOR, perfectly ridden, moved on the outside of the leaders and just got up in the stretch run. LEGAL LIGHT moved with the winner, but could not get up. McHENRY raced with the leader and held on gamely. TALENT came from last place to be going well at the end.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:07½. Winner, B. Long's ch. f. †Mrs. M. Hackett-J. Farrell, jr., entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EQUIPET, $4.90, $3.40, $2.90; STEEL BEAM, $10.40, $5.00; CROW WILDER, $6.70.

EQUIPET was outrun briefly by VISITING NURSE, took command when the latter tired, drew away while running easily and was well in hand at the end. STEEL BEAM broke up from the start, but was no match for the winner. CROW WILDER closed with a belated rush after being last at the half-mile pole. ARTHUR C. moved into contention after a half and ran evenly thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). Purse, $1200. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:37. Winner, J. B. Belk's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUSTERING, $11.00, $5.60, $4.80; DAILY DUBLIN, $4.30, $3.40; BATTLE STAR, $5.00.

BLUSTERING was sent to the front at once under hustling tactics, held sway throughout and was kept to mild punishment to the end. DAILY DUBLIN chased the winner from the start, but was not good enough. BATTLE STAR moved up gradually and closed well while in close quarters on the rail. ST. PETER closed willingly after lacking speed early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:06. Winner, B. Brodsky's dk. b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENTLE SAVAGE, $22.60, $10.60, $7.10; TIBERIUS, $7.60, $5.80; KEY MAN, $3.80.

GENTLE SAVAGE was in contention throughout, opened a daylight lead on the final turn, was headed at the eighth pole, but came again under a hard drive. TIBERIUS raced wide to reach contention, appeared the winner entering the stretch, but hung in the final drive. KEY MAN moved up gradually and was going well at the end. MIGHTILY lacked speed early and came well in the last quarter.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:36. Winner, Miss E. Boerger's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DISTILLATION, $4.90, $3.40, $2.80; AGNES KNIGHT, $11.90, $6.00; CONNIE PLAUT, $3.30.

DISTILLATION was perfectly handled, moved up gradually in the last half to take command at the sixteenth pole and was going away at the end. AGNES KNIGHT showed good speed from the start, took command on the backstretch, but could not resist the winner. CONNIE PLAUT lacked speed early and lost much ground while making her move. SCOUT ABOUT was closest to the leader at the eighth pole, but faltered in the final drive. CHERRY'S CHILD closed with good speed.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Thirteen 3-year-olds have been named overnight for the $10,000 added Potomac Handicap, at 1 1-16 miles. Louis Tufano's Market Wise is the top weight of the field, with 120 pounds, and it is expected that approximately 15,000 fans will turn out to make the son of Boker's Tip the favorite in the starting field. His closest competitor will likely be the Walmac Farm's Bushwhacker, second in the Washington Park Handicap. Also in the field is one filly, Cis Marion, which will race in the interests of Ella K. Bryson. Two entrants in the Potomac received final blowouts yesterday morning during the training hours. Canroll stepped a handy half mile in 49 2-5 and Bushwhacker reeled off three panels in 36 2-5. Circle M Ranch's Big Pebble, winner of the Widener Cup, Hollywood Gold Cup, and the Washington Park Handicap, and being pointed for the $15,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap, also worked. The son of Black Servant stepped 1⅛ miles and hung up the following fractions, 51, 1:18 2-5, 1:46, 1:59 and was still breezing at the end. This move left no doubt as to his retaining his best form. Following a very dull race Thursday, Bolivar, the property of Frank Christmas, was shipped back to Fox Valley Farm, Monkton, Md., to be turned out. Yancey Christmas, brother of Frank, announced that Black Grouse, one which won about seven straight this year before meeting defeat, had been permanently retired. Another which Yancey has turned out on the farm was the 3-year-old Rough Egg. Jockey Danny Scocca has left Maryland, after a very successful half-mile season. Danny has gone to Narragansett and will ride the charges of Charlie Miles. Hazel M. Babylon, owner of a modest string of runners, gave the Havre de Grace press gang and others a party following the races Thursday night. BILL.

First race—SIR REG should have won last out when beaten a little over a length by Star Chance. May give a better account of himself when not bothered. SUN LARK ran a good race last out while losing ground most of the way. GRANDIOSO is a long shot possibility that had trouble last.

Second race—PERLETTE ran a promising race last when a long price and a repeater would be enough to earn a set of brackets. PANTHER CREEK is an invader from the West and is very consistent. CHALLENGE is far down on the list but if started should go well.

Third race—PONY BALLET was a clever winner here earlier in the meeting and while at Delaware was a stake winner. Needs only alert handling and McCombs assures you of that. MISS SARITA has been improving and may furnish the contention. CHUCKLE is a fair one that has worked well.

Fourth race—RUSSIA was a winner here, going a mile and a sixteenth and was forced to come from last place. This mile and a half is right down his alley and makes him look like the best bet of the day. GRANDEVER has gone back but will like the long route. REGENT woke up last out to be second.

Fifth race—SKIN DEEP had a rough trip last out and may take this sprint at a long price. Races in New England say he can beat this kind and today might be the day. CLYDE TOLSON may have needed that last race. BILL FARNSWORTH is getting old but can still give a good account of himself.

Sixth race—MARKET WISE appears a shade here and will have the benefit of having George Woolf in the saddle. BUSHWHACKER seems to improve each start and is strictly the one to beat. BOSTON MAN will likely improve over that last race.

Seventh race—RONCAT came from out of the clouds to be third in a sprint earlier in the meeting and the added distance will be a help. ONE TIP opened a long last out and then tired as if short. TROIS PISTOLES has trained well over this oval.

Eighth race—CRIUS was such an impressive winner here that I'm forced to go right back to the veteran. Has always shown best over this strip and is dead fit. BRAXTON ran well after being in trouble for the opening half mile. CISNEROS improved last out.

Best bet—Russia.

CLOCKER MIKE'S SELECTIONS

1—Triphammer, Grandiose, Sir Reg.
2—Perlette, Hiblase, Circus.
3—Bestefall, Pony Ballet, Miss Sarita.
4—Grandever, Russia, Panoramscope.
5—Sassy Lady, Skin Deep, Clyde Tolson.
6—Boston Man, Cis Marion, Market Wise.
7—Ice Water, One Tip, Yale o' Nine, Mintson, Stand Alone, Crius.

Best bet—Perlette.

Hawthorne Selections

1—Goal to Go, John Hunnicutt, Mirrored.
2—Sugarare, Anopheles, Sabariel.
3—Alspur, Marse G., Lonely Road.
4—Exclaytee, Goshen, Hillblend.
5—Valtile, Vinum, O'Play.
6—Kokomo, Miss Dorwood, Great Occasion.
7—Westcan, Pell Mell, Dark Phaona.
8—Bachelor's Bower, Her Reich, Spanish Bells.
9—Kilocycle, Peltier, Illinois Tom.

Bill Cunningham's Column

Mike Jacobs Deserves Credit

Cunningham

They're saying Mike Jacobs isn't the man Tex Rickard was because it took Louis, not Mike, to arrange the profitable marriage between the Louis-Nova fight date and the world series jam in New York, and that then it happened only more or less by accident. Uncle Michael originally set the embroglio for this week, but the Louisian directorate pleaded a postponement.

In fact, they pleaded so positively that they said they wouldn't fight at all unless the affair was set back for at least ten days.

"Joe was pretty well tuckered back there in the spring," said John Roxborough, his principal mouthpiece. "He had that family trouble and all. But the most thing is that he's been messing around out in that hot sun playing a lot of golf, and you know what happened the last time he played a lot of golf."

What happened was that Schmeling knocked him as stiff as a petrified herring for the one and only real demerit in his professional career. The ultimative ten-day postponement kicked the extravaganza back to September 29, which is a Monday, with the World Series coming up Wednesday and New York already jammed with a ready-made audience.

They're saying Tex Rickard would have set such a date deliberately, instead of having it forced upon him accidentally, and that, by that margin, he was greater than his successor as a promotorial genius.

Maybe and all right, but this brings up a point that many a fight fan doesn't know. That's the fact that, instead of being rivals, or even Elijah and Elisha, the tall Texan and the reformed ticket speculator were really partners from the first, after a manner of saying and if there hadn't been any Mike, there never would have been any Tex, so far as New York was concerned.

Mr. Rickard, all said and done, was mostly all front like one of these garish movie theaters that consist of an elaborate marquee and nothing but a big, plain shed out in back. He moved into New York all goffered with the romance of the mad, bad West. He'd been the big saloon man in the Klondike, in Reno and Goldfield. His crap games were clean, his faro decks straight. He had the Gans-Nelson and the Jeffries-Johnson fights to his credit.

Mike was a salesman—by that time a ticket salesman. In fact, he was a double ticket salesman—a ticket scalper. He first learned the precious secret that there's double dough in good paper while he was still in the short trouser period.

Just how, where and when he got mixed up with Rickard isn't part of the record, but it was away back at the start of the Texan's New York adventure.

In fact, the fight that really made Rickard king of world promoters was the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Boyle's Thirty Acres and it was Jacobs, not Rickard, who really put that one over. Tex had dreamed it up on gargantuan lines. The world had never heard of such guarantees. The idea of trying to charge $50 a seat was unprecedented. Such backing as Tex had quit cold on the venture. They decided the mad was stark, raving crazy. Even Jack Kearns, supposed to be the cutest manager the game had yet produced, choked in the presence of such unprecedented figures.

"All right, steady now," said Mike to Tex. "I'll tell you how to do it. Leave me have the tickets and go ahead with your plans."

Mike carried the problem right to the ticket speculators. He knew their language and he made the sale. Furthermore, he talked them out of cash in advance. He'd bring another $100,000 to Tex and Tex would build another row of seats. That great bowl was practically tailored to order—to the speculator's order, that is.

The fight, if you recall, cleared a half million dollars.

That put Tex on his way, Madison Square Garden and the 600 millionaires was the next step. Mike never showed publicly in any of this, except as a Garden employe—the head ticket man. How and what he did with those tickets on big fights is all the part of another 1000 or so stories.

Tex died. There came in time a new deal and Mike was found in a little hole in the wall of his own nearby on Forty-ninth Street. He still had the tickets—the best ones—if anybody cared to pay a premium for them.

Bring up these matters today and the Broadway answer invariably is, "That was awright in them times," the implication being that these times are different.

Finally the Garden decided to lend itself no more to the charity fights staged by a New York newspaper combination, so the sports editors decided to incorporate and stage their own fights. "The Twentieth Century Sporting Club," an old name long dead, was revived and Mike was stuck in as the official front man. That all blew up in time, but Mike kept the name and the club, and, in the meantime, he picked up and got exclusive rights to Joe Louis, just as his long-dead friend and partner had picked up another young slugging heavy named Jack Dempsey, and had similarly built a monopoly around him and with him.

The rest had come along.

The boys explain the difference by saying, "Tex never promoted anything with his own money. He always used somebody else's. Mike, on the other hand, has always had his own and has always used his own."

Maybe he lacks something the tall Texan had, but most of what the tall Texan did was after Mike's go-ahead. Tex got the credit; Mike got the dough.

As to which that makes the smarter—you call it your way.

Invader Wins Belmont Park Steeplechase

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Invader today won the Broad Hollow Steeplechase Handicap for the second year in a row. The 5-year-old chestnut gelding, a son of Chance Play, was a $9.90 for $2 second choice in the field of five jumpers and earned the $3100 first money by a length under the driving finish of the veteran Francis Bellhouse. The time for the trip of about 2 miles, which included a dozen obstacles, was 3:47 2-5, not close to Fairmount's track record.

Mrs. Arthur White's Bay Dean, winner of the Glendale at Aqueduct, was second by ten lengths. And, much to the consternation of those who installed him favorite at 65 cents on the dollar, Thomas Hitchcock's 3-year-old Bath, finished third. Placement was fourth, while Larchfield fell with Jockey Magee at the sixth fence. Magee got off with a shaking up.

Receives Trophy

After the running, the successful trainer, "Dolly" Byers, representing Mrs. Clark, accepted a trophy presented by President Alfred Vanderbilt. Byers used to ride the track record-holder, Fairmount, for J. E. Widener.

Bath won the recent Harbor Hill Steeplechase in his debut, performing like a potential champion. But in today's fixture, the young son of High Strung did not race so smoothly. He was rank and seemed green.

Bay Dean stole a wide early lead over Bath while Invader was trailing. When the field reached the tenth jump, Bath and Invader drew alongside the pacemaker. However, Bath dropped out of it around the last bend and continued to fade in the run home as Invader went on to outfinish Bay Dean.

Capital Store Sales Rise 8% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended September 13 increased 8 per cent over the like period last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. Sales in the latest week were 15 per cent over the previous week, the latter gain being due in part to the Labor Day holiday in the September 6 week.

For the four weeks ended September 13, local department store sales were 20 per cent heavier than in the like 1940 period.

The fifth Federal Reserve district in the week ended September 13 showed a gain of 8 per cent in store sales over the same week last year and 21 per cent for the four-week period.

Stamp Sales Leap 30 Per Cent

Sale of $4,453,748 in Defense Savings Stamps during August showed an increase of 30 per cent over sales for July, the Treasury Department announced.

Total sales for the four months since the defense savings program started on May 1 last were: May, $3,475,070; June, $2,802,345; July, $3,238,283, and August, $4,453,748.

Directors of the Columbia National Bank have declared a dividend of $3 a share, payable as follows: $1.50 on October 1 to holders of record September 22; $1.50 on January 2 to holders of record December 22.

Albert J. Browning, president of United Wall Paper Factories, Inc., has been appointed special assistant to Donald M. Nelson, executive director of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, the company announced yesterday. Browning expects to go to Washington the first of next week to take up his duties.

Advertising Gains 3.5 Per cent

Chalking up an increase over last year for the twenty-fifth consecutive week, retail display advertising in the newspapers of 84 major cities totaled 18,873,129 lines during the seven-day period ended September 6, according to Advertising Age.

This is a gain of almost 650,000 lines, or 3.5 per cent, over the 18,239,516 lines during the corresponding week of 1940.

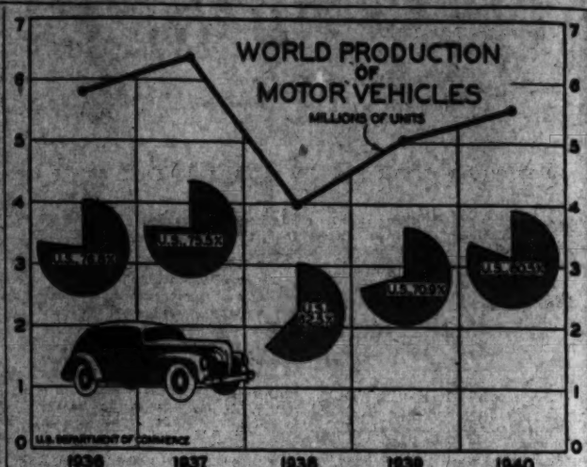
For the 36-week period from the beginning of the year, newspapers in the reporting cities have printed a total of 709,857,103 lines of retail display advertising, compared with 677,540,244 lines during the same period of last year, an increase of 4.8 per cent.

Food Prices Dip In Week

The trend in wholesale food markets turned downward this week, after a year-long rise which was interrupted only on three other occasions since September, 1940. The Dun & Bradstreet Wholesale Food Price Index for September 16 fell 1 cent to $3.33 from the 12-year peak of $3.34 recorded in the preceding period, while indicating a gain of $1.03, or 44.2 per cent, over the corresponding 1940 level of $2.31.

Commodities showing declines during the week included wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, lard, cocoa, eggs, potatoes, prunes, steers, hogs and lambs. Advances occurred in hams, cheese, cottonseed oil, beans, and sheep.

The Dun & Bradstreet Wholesale Food Price Index represents the sum total of the price per pound of 31 foods in general use.



Morgan Banking Firm Barred As Morgan, Stanley Trustee

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission yesterday prohibited the banking firm of J. P. Morgan and Company from acting as trustee for any securities sold by the investment firm of Morgan, Stanley and Company.

The commission said in a lengthy opinion that the firms were under common control and the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 disqualifies as trustees persons or firms whose loyalties to others might conflict with their duties to protect investors.

The famous New York banking firm had asked for the opinion in preparation for acting as trustee of indenture securities to be issued by Shell Union Oil Corporation. The ruling, however, applied to any other securities issued under the sponsorship of Morgan, Stanley & Company.

The commission noted that the businesses of the two firms once were conducted together, but the Federal Banking Act of 1933 required separation of the two businesses.

No officer or director of one of the companies is an officer or director of the other, the commission conceded, but it said the same families control both firms.

Thus, while J. P. Morgan is the head of the banking firm, his son, Henry S. Morgan, is the principal stockholder and an officer of the investment firm.

This analysis of stock holdings was made public:

J. P. Morgan and his family own 15.50 per cent of the capital stock of J. P. Morgan & Co. and 40.53 per cent of the preferred stock of Morgan Stanley Co. Thomas W. Lamont and family own 34.56 per cent of the banking firm and 29.37 per cent of the investment firm; the family of the late Charles Steele owns 11 per cent of the banking firm and 24.34 per cent of the investment firm; Russell C. Leffingwell and family own 3.75 per cent of the banking firm and 3.80 per cent of the investment firm; Francis D. Bartow and family own 2.5 per cent of the banking firm and 1.11 per cent of the investment firm. Arthur M. Anderson and family own 3.12 per cent of the banking firm and 1.11 per cent of the investment firm.

"We are of the opinion," the commission said, "that the persons in control of the corporations have such a community of interest as to preclude a finding by us that the trust company is not under direct or indirect common control with the underwriter."

Steel Crews Get Smokes For Speed

Pittsburgh, Sept. 19 (AP).—Pittsburgh's famous smoke now contains tobacco aroma.

It comes from Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation Mills where, traditionally, the company passes out cigars every time a mill crew or a department sets a new production record.

In the last three months, J. & L. crews, working on defense orders at the highest pressure in history, have received: 16,450 packages of cigarettes (for men); 40,925 cigars (for he-men); 500 stogies (for tough guys); 192 plugs of chewing tobacco (for very tough guys), and—339 pounds of candy.

—And Big Business

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—From Wall Street today came a report that better business had brought back the "have a cigar" greeting—but there's a new angle to it.

While some executives have returned the free-for-all humidor of smokes to their desks, one has reduced it to an efficiency basis—a short cigar for visitors he wants to see only briefly; a long one for those with whom he wants to talk at length.

The "efficiency expert" said his callers "get the idea."

Lumber Output Mounts in Week

By the Associated Press

The National Lumber Manufacturers Association reported yesterday that lumber production for the week ended September 13 stood at 124 per cent of the average of the corresponding week 1935-39, and shipments 127 per cent.

Production totaled 267,193,000 feet, which was 14 per cent greater than the previous week, and 10 per cent greater than the corresponding week a year ago.

Shipments aggregated 276,172,000 feet, which was 10 per cent greater than the previous week, and 3 per 22 per cent less than the corresponding week last year.

Orders booked were for 248,463,000 feet, which was 25 per cent greater than the previous week, and 2 2per cent less than the corresponding week last year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Wheat prices fell 2¼ to 3½ cents a bushel and other grains suffered smaller or greater losses as heavy liquidation developed after midsession today.

War news from Russia and the statement of Bernard Baruch advocating legislation to place a ceiling over the entire price structure were cited by floor brokers as important factors in the selling. Belated profit taking on the part of dealers who still had profits as a result of the recent sharp price upturn and some hedging sales added to the liquidation. Many stop loss orders were put into execution when prices began to give way.

Wheat rallied almost a cent from extreme lows as a result of late short covering, but final quotations were 1¾@2⅛ lower than yesterday's December, 1.30⅛@1.30¼; May, 1.24⅛@1.24⅝. Rye closed 2 ¾cents down; December, 74¾; corn, ⅞ to 1⅛ off; December, 81½; May, 87@ 88⅝; oats, 1⅛ to 1⅜ down; soybeans, unchanged to 1⅛ lower, and lard 12 to 20 lower.

Today's general price retreat carried wheat down to levels 4 to almost 6 cents below last week's four-year peaks. Corn was about 3 cents lower, oats 4 cents off, rye 5 to almost 7 cents down and soybeans, 22 to 24 lower.

Meat Packers Lose Decision on Overtime Clause

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—A ruling on the overtime provisions of the Wage and Hour Act which may cost meat packing firms from three to four million dollars in back wages was announced today by Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe.

The court held that Swift & Co. violated the provisions and directed the Wage and Hour Division of the Labor Department to draft an injunction to restrain further violations.

At issue was the 14-week exemption from overtime provisions granted by the act to employes engaged in handling, slaughtering and dressing—such as watchmen, clerical workers, truck drivers, and elevator operators.

The company contended that overtime need not be paid to those employes because they were not covered by the act. Judge Igoe decided that they were.

Alex Elson, Chicago counsel for the Wage and Hour Division, said employes' suits for recovery of back wages have been pending against Swift, Wilson & Co., Armour & Co., and the G. H. Hammond Co., a Swift subsidiary, since May, 1940.

Yule Toy Volume Seen 15% Heavier

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Trade circles reported today toy deliveries for the Christmas buying season, due to reach their peak this month, probably would exceed the 1940 volume by 15 per cent.

Simpler toys, in many cases of materials substituted for metals now needed in defense work, were forecast. Output of some metal playthings has been curtailed, manufacturers said.

Home Loans Mount

The Federal Reserve Board reports that home mortgage loans of Federal savings and loan associations rose $30,000,000 to a total of $1,718,000,000 during July.

Advances of Federal home loan banks to such institutions, however, declined $2,000,000 to $168,000,000.

Oil Supplies Shrink Despite Output Boost

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday a 4,080,000-barrel decrease during July in total stocks of all oils.

Stocks amounted to 547,170,000 barrels on July 31, compared with 551,250,000 barrels on June 30.

Domestic production increased from 120,396,000 barrels in June to 123,774,000 barrels in July and was 4,567,000 barrels higher than during the previous July.

July 31 stocks of crude petroleum refinable in the United States totaled 255,378,000 barrels, compared with 259,075,000 barrels on June 30 and 263,496,000 last July 31.

Demand Rises 16 Per Cent

The bureau reported July 31 motor fuel stocks at 83,746,000, compared with 88,646,000 (revised) on June 30 and 89,609,000 on July 31, 1940. Domestic production totaled 39,609,000 barrels.

The total demand for motor fuel in July was reported at 64,509,000 (assuming no imports for consumption), or 16 per cent higher than in 1940. The gain in actual consumption was described by the bureau as probably much less, since July, 1940, was a relatively low month and because of "speculative buying in fear of a shortage in July, 1941."

Production of motor fuel reached a new record, but the bureau said heavy demand resulted in a draft of about five million barrels on gasoline stocks.

Texas Output Slumps

Daily average crude oil production, which had increased every month since November, 1940, declined slightly in July. The July daily average was 3,815,500 barrels, or about 20,000 barrels below the June average.

Most States increased their production in July, but the report said these gains were not sufficient to balance a material drop in Texas. Kansas established another new record and Illinois production continued to rise.

Daily average crude runs to stills in July were reported to have reached a new record of 3,909,000 barrels.

Heating Fuel Stocks Gain

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Stocks of light oil, fuel for home heating, increased approximately 866,000 barrels above the corresponding period a year ago, the American Oil Institute announced today after a survey of Eastern Seaboard petroleum stocks for the week September 6-13.

The report said that stocks of fuel oil for homes were normally higher at this time of year as the approaching fall and winter seasons brought increased demands for fuel.

The institute reported gasoline stocks, both refined and unrefined, dropped by 565,000 barrels in the area from Maine to Florida from the level of the previous week.

Week's Auto Output Estimated at 60,615

Detroit, Sept. 19 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that car and truck output this week would total 60,615 units, continuing a gradual increase noted in the second month of the new model period. The total compares with 53,165 units last week and 78,820 this week last year.

Ward's reported that materials problems had cropped up in several plants, impairing final assembly shipments. It was expected many of these would be cleared away for next week's operations.

Every Bit Counts

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Substitution of painted steel for zinc-coated metal waste can tops was reported today by the National Enameling and Stamping Co., which estimated the saving would be about 20 per cent of the strategic metal ordinarily used in a garbage or ash can.

Food Exports Jump Under Lend-Lease

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday large shipments of lend-lease food and other supplies to England boosted United States merchandise exports in July to the highest level of the year.

Food exports, particularly, jumped in July, although they have been declining almost steadily since the war began. Food shipments totaled 46 million dollars, more than double the monthly average so far this year, and included 11 million dollars of meat, six million dollars of lard, nine million dollars of dairy products, and four million dollars of eggs. The department no longer gives the destination of individual commodities but indicated nearly all of this food went to England under lend-lease.

July reports so far available show that exports totaled 359 million dollars, but the department said that delay in filing and tabulating export documents made it inadvisable to accept this as a final figure for comparison with other months. However, the figure compared with $329,737,000 in June and $316,869,000 in July of last year.

Imports declined slightly to $277,847,000, compared with $279,536,000 in July, 1940.

For the first seven months of the year, exports totaled $2,445,676,000, imports $1,871,944,000, and the export excess was $573,732,000.

In the similar period last year exports were $2,381,056,000, imports $1,526,455,000, and the export excess was $854,601,000.

Aeronautic exports showed little change in July. Compared with June, shipments of airplanes increased from 352 to 360, but shipments of airplane engines declined from 478 to 298.

Trade Comparisons

Comparisons in foreign trade in certain leading agricultural commodities in July follows: (figures given in this order—July, 1940; June, 1941; July, 1941; first seven months of 1940, and first seven months of 1941.)

Army Purchases 41 Million Cans Of Vegetables

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Purchase of more than 41 million cans of vegetables for the Army at a cost of $4,451,017.46 was announced today by officials of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot.

It was one of the largest orders for canned vegetables ever made by the Army.

The purchase involved 41,216,868 cans of corn, peas, tomatoes, snap beans, lima beans, pumpkin, beets, sauerkraut, tomato juice and tomato catsup.

Contracts provide for future delivery of most of the vegetables, the goods to be stored in contractors' warehouses pending requisition by the Quartermaster Corps.

Stocks, Bonds Suffer Worst Loss in Month; War News Adverse to Soviet Is Blamed

New York, Sept. 19.—The stock market today turned in the sharpest average loss in more than a month, with the war news receiving the principal blame and other factors contributing.

The list displayed slipping tendencies from the start and, at the close, losses ranged from fractions to a point or so for leaders. There were a few setbacks of as much as 3.

Offerings never were especially urgent, however, and transfers of 577,980 shares compared with 790,863 the day before. The Associated Press composite of 60 stocks finished with a net decline of .4 of a point at 43.6, biggest reaction since August 15. Counting Thursday's slip of .1, the day's backslide wiped out the rally of Wednesday.

Bearish interpretations were placed on German-Russian bulletins indicating the Nazis were sweeping through the Ukraine. In addition authoritative quarters in London stressed the critical position of the Reds. All of which was hardly conducive to bolstering speculative sentiment.

The usual lightening of commitments as a weekend precaution brought a reduction of bids in many instances. Signs of a slackening of the upward business curve also widened the ranks of market conservatives.

In the share division J. I. Case conceded 3 points. United States Steel, Bethlehem and Youngstown Sheet lost a point or so each as shortage of materials persisted as a threat to mill operations.

Others in arrears were General Motors, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Western Union, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Boeing, Douglas Aircrafe, United Aircraft, Consolidated Aircraft, Dow Chemical, J. C. Penney, International Paper, New York Shipbuilding and Canada Dry. Holding modest improvement were Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Chesapeake & Ohio, Gamewell and Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies.

In the Curb, Singer Manufacturing was 5½ points on small dealings. Heyden Chemical and Standard Steel Spring advanced 2 each. In minus territory were Glen Alden Coal, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, Pennroad and International Petroleum. Volume here approximated 137,000 shares versus 151,000 yesterday.

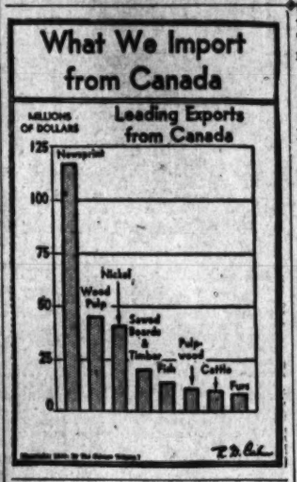
Declines of one to two or more points in a recently strong group of foreign dollar issues induced selling in other sections of the bond market today and the trend was lower at the close.

Most commentators blamed the sudden turn of the Russo-German conflict for bringing out the dribble of offerings that depressed the dollar issues. Heaviest losses were suffered by Tokyo Electric Light 6s at 43⅞, Norway 6s at 83½, Australia 4½s at 70, Denmark 6s at 69½, Oriental Development 5½s at 41½ and Japan 5½s at 57⅛.

Losses among domestic loans generally were small and there were numerous issues emerging with moderate gains.

United States Governments were mostly a little lower on both the stock exchange and over the counter but selling was orderly and several Treasury loans developed resistance.

Total sales of $5,461,600, par value, compared with $7,359,850 on Thursday.



Cotton, Wheat Depressed by Baruch Plan

By the Associated Press

Cotton futures prices slumped as much as $1.85 a bale and other commodity quotations generally followed suit yesterday.

Traders in most markets credited the heavy selling pressure chiefly to Bernard M. Baruch's advocacy of a solid ceiling over all prices. News from Europe's war zone also was interpreted as discouraging and increased hedging added to the load.

At Chicago, Wheat closed 1¾ to 2⅝ cents a bushel lower, corn was off ⅞ to 1½ cents, rye lost 2⅜ to 3 cents and oats 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents. Soybeans resisted the downturn, closing unchanged to 1½ cents a bushel lower.

New York cottonseed oil quotations dropped .11 to .17 of a cent a pound, Santos coffee lost as much as .1 of a cent a pound, sugar futures were weak and wool tops were off as much as 1.2 cents a pound.

A late rally wiped out part of New York cotton futures' losses on announcement the cotton goods ceiling price probably would be raised, but the close was $1.20 to $1.80 a bale under the previous level.

Spot commodity prices, declining partly in line with futures, carried the Associated Press index of 35 wholesale staples down to 92.98 per cent of the 1926 average from 93.16 per cent the day before.

Cotton Spinning Rate Accelerates

By the Associated Press

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that the cotton spinning industry operated during August at 125.3 per cent of capacity, on a two-shift, 80-hour week basis, compared with 123 per cent during July this year and 90.5 per cent during August last year.

Spinning spindles in place August 31 totaled 24,344,016, of which 23,029,066 were active at some time during the month, compared with 24,338,750 and 23,027,818 during July this year and 24,730,894 and 22,064,474 during August last year.

Active spindle hours totaled 10,263,003,576 for August, or an average of 421 hours per spindle in place, compared with 10,536,706,779 and 438 for July this year and 7,872,120,619 and 318 for August last year.

Construction In August Sets All-Time High

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 19.—Building and engineering contracts awarded in August in the 37 Eastern States totaled $760,233,000, the highest for any month on record, the F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today.

The August volume was 84 per cent higher than awards of $414,941,000 in the like month of 1940 and 14 per cent greater than the previous monthly record of $667,097,000 established in May, 1928.

Residential building awards aggregated $231,529,000, an increase of 51 per cent over August, 1940, the report showed.

Commenting on the August volume, Thomas S. Holden, president of the Dodge company said:

"This year's record-breaking volume of industrial plant construction has been an important factor in the demand for critical materials. As the defense plant expansion program tapers off, which will happen at some stage, the critical supply situation with regard to vitally important building materials and equipment should be eased to a considerable extent."

Earnings Reports

American Cable & Radio Corporation and subsidiaries reported net income for the six months ended June 30 was $624,127, estimated equal to 20 cents a common share, compared with $586,923 or 19 cents a common share in the first half of 1940.

Universal Pictures Co., Inc., and subsidiaries reported net profit of $2,000,864 after $751,000 provision for Federal taxes for the 39 weeks ended August 2, equal after preferred dividends to $7.32 on common stock. For the 39 weeks ended July 27, 1940, the company showed a profit of 1,771,804 before taxes. The 1941 earnings included blocked funds of $1,299,408 and taxes thereon, in Great Britain.

Columbia Pictures Corporation showed preliminary net profit of $552,744 for the year ended July 26 after a special charge of $84,158, equal to 95 cents a common share, compared with $512,186 or 83 cents on common in the preceding year.

Standard Products Co. reports net income of $676,068 for the fiscal year ended June 30, after all charges. This is equal to $2.25 a common share and compares with $572,882, or $1.57 a share, for the previous fiscal year. The company paid 75 cents a share during the year. The income excludes $51,680 (Canadian) earned by the subsidiary Backstay Standard Co., Ltd., which compares with $21,062 (Canadian) for the previous year.

Nickel Plate Railroad announced August net income of $1,170,548, again $414,689 the same 1940 month. The first eight months' net is $6,194,704, against $1,102,552.

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway reports August net income of $4,244,606, comparing with $3,372,851 in August 1940. Eight months' net amounted to $23,081,876, just $60,000 above the total for the comparable period of last year.

Pere Marquette Railway listed $138,267 August net income, against $150,112 the same 1940 month, bringing the eight-month net to $2,389,560, aganist $346,474.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Disturbed by market interpretations of Bernard M. Baruch's price control testimony, cotton futures slumped today to closing prices 25 to 32 points under Thursday levels.

A late rally based on reports cotton cloth ceiling prices would be revised upward failed to overcome bedring by spot interests.

During the downturn, losses ran close to $2 a bale and, as speculative selling pushed quotations down, stop-loss orders were uncovered.

Rail Stockholders Ask Higher Freight Rates

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 19 (AP).—Stockholders of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at the annual meeting today called on railroads to seek higher freight rates in the event pay increases are granted employes now negotiating with the carriers.

The company reported that for the first time since 1931 a profit was anticipated in the Central's business. A $500,000 profit for the first nine months of 1941 was expected, the firm reported, contrasted to $2,595,000 lost during a similar period in 1940.

Ford Is Building New Steel Plant For Plane Output

Detroit, Sept. 19 (AP).—Henry Ford has begun construction work on a new steel plant at his River Rouge factory to permit application to the aircraft industry of the steel casting technique developed for automobile manufacture.

The new steel unit will include four Bessmer converters, six electric furnaces and other facilities in a plant of 350,000 feet floor space. Governmental approval already has been given for most of the contemplated new operations which will include centrifugal casting to replace forging, and which are designed primarily to speed up aviation engine production.

Ford already is in production on Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines with a projected peak of 40 units a day expected early next year. In addition he has in development a 12-cylinder liquid cooled aircraft engine of his own design, an eight-cylinder tank motor and a pancake type engine that can be fitted into the wings of an airplane.

Pile-up of Expensive Horse Flesh in Grand Circuit

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Two crack trotters tangled and went down during recent Grand Circuit race program at Delaware, Ohio. Volation, driven by Veteran Vic Fleming, of Syracuse, N. Y., was pinioned in wrecked sulkies. Symbol Gentle, driven by W. E. Miller, of Washington, D. C., rose quickly and was soothed by Miller. Only Fleming was hurt, and he slightly putted for a bogey five. He had fired a birdie on the second, however, and clipped two strokes from par on the out nine with birdies on the seventh and ninth.

Johnson went out in 32 and came home in 33. He sank a 27-foot putt for a par on the eighteenth.Johnson had six birdies and played all the other holes, except the ninth, in par figures. His 65 tied the course record which had been established in a practice round by Gene Kunes of Holmesburg, Pa., and Jimmy DeMaret of Noroton, Conn. Neither Kunes nor DeMaret could keep that pace today—Kunes shooting a 74 and DeMaret, 72.

Coming in two strokes off the pace was Billy Burke, Cleveland, Ohio, with a 67. Another Ohioan, Tony Penna of Dayton, was next in line with a 68.

Four Tied at 69

Four players were grouped at 69—Jack Patroni, Manchester, Vt., Harry Cooper, Chicago, Ky Laffoon, Miami, Okla., and Horton Smith, Pinehurst, N. C. Five came in with par 70s, including Frank Allan of Pittston, Pa., to give him the lead among the amateurs. The others were Dick Renaghan, who blew on the second nine after going out in 31, Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., veteran Gene Sarazen, East Brookfield, Conn., and Bruce Coltart, Absecon, N. J.

Five more were grouped at 71—Craig Wood, national open champion from Mamaroneck, N. Y., Clayton Heafner, Linville, N. C., Dick Metz, Chicago, J. Wood Platt, Philadelphia amateur, and Johnny Bulla, Chicago.

Two of the favorites—Ben Hogan, the year's leading money winner, and Byron Nelson, were among seven who started off with 72s. Included in this group was Lawson Little.

Marvin (Bud) Ward, the amateur champion, shot a 73.

The field of 71 will play a second 18-hole qualifier tomorrow with the 48 low and ties eligible for the final 36 on Sunday.

drove him across the ring and through the ropes, where he stayed for nine more. By the time he climbed back in for more, he had the general idea that he made a mistake taking on Robinson this evening. Another half-dozen or so wallops convinced both him and Referee Donovan.

In the preliminaries:

Antonio Fernandez, 158, Chile (drew), Steve Belloise, 134½, Navy (8). Beau Jack, 134¼, Springfield, Mass., stopped Al Reid, 130¼ (7).

Louis Casiano, 126¼, New York, outpointed Dom Fiantini, 126, Reading, Pa. (4).

Diognes Leon, 118½, Puerto Rico, outpointed Johnny Aiello, 122¼, Wilmington, Del. (4).

Izzy Redman, Brooklyn, 153¾, knocked out Harry Ginsberg, 156¾, Brooklyn (5).

Apaches Beaten By Sport Club, 4-1

Maryland Sport Club took a 3-run jump on the Washington Apaches in the first inning last night and coasted to a 4-1 victory in the first game of a Metropolitan Sandlot Baseball Tournament twin bill at Ballston Stadium.

Kennedy went the distance and gave up only 2 hits, contributing to his own triumph with a pair of singles in three times at bat.

In the nightcap Petworth C. A. stopped Hume Springs, 6—2, behind the 3-hit hurling of Price. The winners, paced by Al Buschling's two safeties, pushed over 4 runs in the fifth inning to decide matters.

beat them 4 to 1 the last time Brooklyn played at Shibe Park.

Hoerst returned home before the Phils finished their Western trip. During the past week he has worked with the Athletics getting into special shape to duplicate his feat.

Durocher, who was fined $150 for his run-in with Umpire George Magerkurth at Pittsburgh yesterday, barred visitors to his hotel room, but talked to reporters over the telephone.

"I've got plenty to do here," he said as his players enjoyed a day's rest. "They put me out of the game yesterday and I've got to get things straightened out. I'm not protesting the fine. That's water over the dam."

Not Out of Woods Yet

"You sure got a break when Boston beat the Cards yesterday," someone said.

"You mean they got a break that we lost," Leo snapped back. That was the toughest Western trip for me in 15 years. I think we've got the edge now, but we're not out of the woods yet. We beat the Phils 47 times in 59 games since 1938 and 13 out of 15 this year, but they're always dangerous. We've got to beat them on the field, not on paper."

With hundreds of Brooklyn fans coming into town to cheer their favorites, staid Philadelphians have worked up a keen interest in the series. The management of the Phils announced all reserved and box seats have been sold for Sunday's double-header, but that 30,000 grandstand and bleacher seats will go on sale when the gates open tomorrow, Sunday and Monday. Tomorrow's doubleheader will start at noon (E. S. T.) and Sunday's twin bill at 12:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Women's Amateur Golf Champion Declines Pro Bid

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 19.—California's first national women's amateur Golf Champion, Mrs. Elizabeth Hicks Newell of Long Beach, apparently has changed her mind about turning professional.

George Shaw, Los Angeles Sporting Goods Company executive, said he talked long distance with young Mrs. Newell, and quoted her as saying:

"Conditions at the present time are such that I am convinced it would not be wise to turn professional this year."

Soon after capturing the championship at Brookline, Mass., Mrs. Newell said she expected to turn pro, and added she wanted to establish a "nest egg" for her home life.

Shaw said she was en route home by automobile from Brookline.

Linen Ten Loses; Game Protested

D. C. Firemen defeated Standard Linen, 4-2, in a Metropolitan softball tournament game at the Washington Softball Stadium last night and the losers immediately filed a protest on the eligibility of Billy Sullivan, winning pitcher.

A hearing is set for Sunday morning and should the Linen ten lose the protest it will be eliminated from the tournament as it has already lost one game.

Sullivan allowed the losers but four hits. Benny Rubin gave the victors a like number.

In the other game, Carr Brothers defeated Census Bureau, 10-5, knocking the losers from the tournament.

with a double, but Gumbert pitched out of the jam by retiring McCullough, Sturgeon and Erickson in order.

Except for Stringer's blow and a single by Dallessandro in the eighth Gumbert held the Cubs hitless after the fourth.

Despite the Cards being in the thick of the pennant fight, only 3293 fans turned out see them today.

The St. Louis-Chicago game was the only activity in either major league.

Del Rios' Pinmen Face Cavaliers Tomorrow Night

Herb Sach's Del Rios, caught short in their first match last week against the Franklin Bowling Center team, plan a new campaign this weekend with Hap Newman's Del Ray Cavaliers as their opponents. At a disadvantage last week because of Astor Clarke's inability to bowl his best because of an eye infection, the match at Del Ray Sunday night against the Cavaliers promises to be a torrid one as the redoubtable No. 1 duckpinner is again ready.

Del Dio Capt. Perce Wolfe will have Fred Murphy—who came close to winning the singles match last week—"Hokie" Smith, Lucky Strike cannoneer; Tony Santini and Ed Blakeney on the firing line, each determined to erase the stigma of last week's defeat at the hands of the boys from Baltimore.

Hap Newman, Del Ray manager and possessing a knack at organizing winning teams, first gained recognition as the creator of the Shamrocks, and in his Del Ray Cavaliers he has a worthy successor. Stronger than the Shamrocks, the Cavaliers will feature Lou Jenkins, Metropolitan Washington's No. 1 duckpinner and ranked No. 10 nationally; El Geib, "Buck" McDonald, young Jimmy Cenci, Andy Gleeson and Bert Lynn.

Sunday's matches will begin at 7:30 at Del Ray, Alexandria, Va., and will feature singles, doubles and team events. Spectators are invited and ample seating accommodations are now being installed.

Dallas Wins Title In Texas League

Tulsa, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Dallas Rebels, a gang of money players, defeated the impotent Tulsa Oilers, 3-1, tonight to win the Texas League championship and a place in the Dixie Series against Nashville, winner of the Southern Association.

The Rebels, who barely finished in fourth place in the regular league race, won the final series of the Shaughnessy play-offs, four games to two.

Dallas, 3; Tulsa, 1.
(Dallas wins playoff, 4-2).

Abe Simon Matched To Fight Thompson

New York, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Manager Jimmy Johnston announced today that Abe Simon, New York giant, has been matched for a ten-round bout with Turkey Thompson, California Negro, at Los Angeles on October 7. Simon lasted until the thirteenth round with Joe Louis in March.

New Hockey Coach

Boston, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Ralph (Cooney) Weiland, Boston Bruins coach for the last two years, will manage the Hershey (Pa.) Hockey Club of the American League this season, it was announced tonight. He will assume his new duties immediately.

Cole Leads Navy Yard Pinmen

The Navy Yard League at Fort Davis was sparked by Ernie Cole, Optical No. 1, with 146 for high single as J. O'Donovan, Foundry, totaled 142 and 387, the latter high invidiual set. His team, however, dropped three to East Shop, which now tops the league with 6-0. Optical No. 2 was the best team with a 618 game and 1699 set. Lewis Witz and Ziggie Milewiske, both of West No. 1, had sets of 366 and 363, respectively, while Bill Brazerol counted 378.

Del Ray

Hap Newman's unique $1000 Mixed League got started last night at Del Ray with Paul McEwan's 148 and Aubrey Evans' 376 pacing their 1-12 Club to all the honors, including the odd game from Yellow Cab and team highs of 614 and 1668. Mary Magnotto, Queen Pin, topped the women with a 340 set with little Ann Hiden, of Del Ray's Cavalettes, next with 332. Rosemont A. C. won a sweep over Alexandria Police, while the Nightingales took three in a row from Thrifty Photo.

Taxicab League

The Taxicab League at the Ice Palace was led by Nick Kereluk's 161 high game for Premier No. 1 which helped to team highs of 681 and 1847. Waldorf Reid was very close with his 414 for Premier No. 1 and together they sparked a sweep over Yellow Cab No. 2. Barry Helwig, Diamond Cab, has 415 to take high set honors by the margin of one pin.

GAO League

Jack Palmer, Chief Clerks, had 145 and 373 to lead the GAO League at Convention Hall and help his mates to team highs of 581 and 1655.

Anacostia Spillway

B. Layne's 135 for Harbor Sales was high individual game in the Anacostia Spillway Club D loop with B. Neider, Cards, taking high set with 366. The Cards won team honors after pinfalls of 552 and 1610.

Brookland Ladies

Margaret Mattingly, Continental Life, had 136 high game in the Brookland Ladies League at Russ Diehl's alleys, while Ruth King, Willis Esso, took top set with 343, which aided her team in leading with a 1576 count and helped score a sweep over Federal Litho. Brookland Garage totaled 549 to win high team game. Continental Life, Brookland Garage and Moore Hardware won all three from Pyle Motors, DePerini and Michigan Park Market in the order named.

Independent League

The Ladies Independent League at Arcadia was off to a fast start last night with Pearl Scherich, Mapleway Chips, leading for game with her 150, while Ruth McClintic, Daly's Food Shop and member of the Arlington Acettes, of the District League, took high set with 368, aiding her team to a 1519 set and three straight from Takoma Recreation. The Mapleway Chips girls won high team game with 566 and also scored a sweep over the Greenhorns. The Greyhounds won three from Butler-Flynn.

Ice Palace

Johnnie Anderson starred in the Ice Palace Commercial League with a 175 single and 426 set, but his National Beer team dropped the odd tilt to Essex Construction despite a 618 high team game for the former. The Essex boys took top set with a 1719 total. Uptown Liquor, Hot Shoppes and Premiar Decorating won three from Ice Palace, Dome Oil and J. C. Flood, respectively.

guage and otherwise abused the players, he would demand the league discipline the umpire, too.

"I am told that Magerkurth was abusive even in the early innings and that he was as much to blame for what happened later as anyone," he asserted.

"I have no kick against the fine on Durocher. He doesn't deny he used strong language and I never have condoned abusive or offensive language toward the umpires by my players or my managers. Frick and I are in perfect agreement on that.

Says Umpire Charged Pitcher

"But my manager tells me that Magerkurth went charging out to the mound after Casey made those wild pitches and shouted, 'If you throw another ball near Lopez I'll put you out of the game.'

"That's when Durocher came onto the scene. Durocher was never put out of a game this year till the first of August. Then it was by Magerkurth and both the league president and the chief of umpires later told me he had no grounds for doing it.

"I'm going to find out what happened out there and if the reports I received are correct, then I most certainly am going to make a protest."

Anyway, there's never a dull day with the Dodgers—even on an off day.

Lewis, Travis Guests Of Veterans Tonight

Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis, stars of the Nats, will be guests of honor at a dinner meeting of the Rainbow Division Veterans tonight at the Capital Park Hotel. Also present will be W. H. Colston, national president of the group, and local President John Shiles.

Mrs. Mirth, Patterson Tie for Golf Honors

Mrs. Frank Mirth and Mrs. W. Patterson tied for low net honors in the Indian Spring ladies' day selective nine tournament yesterday. They had 41—10—31 and 44—13—31, respectively. Third place went to Mrs. P. Foley, of Kenwood, with 46—13—33; Mrs. L. M. Cuvillier was next with 50—16—34, and Mrs. R. Dunbar took fifth prize with 46—11—35.

E. HILTON JACKSON, Attorney, Woodward Building.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia, holding Probate Court. In re estate of Ella E. Whitfield, deceased. Administration No. 57997. Order of publication. Letters of administration upon all the moneys, goods, chattels, rights and credits of Ella E. Whitfield, late of the District of Columbia having been granted herein unto E. Hilton Jackson on the 9th day of July, 1941, and no distribution partial or otherwise, having as yet been made to any of the persons entitled thereto as heirs at law and next of kin of said decedent, and it having been made known to the Court by the petition of said administrator, filed herein the 27th day of June, 1941, for the appointment of a Master to ascertain and determine who are the next of kin of said Ella E. Whitfield, deceased, that it is impossible for the said administrator definitely to determine who are all of the persons who would be entitled to participate in said estate, and likewise impossible to compute the amount distributable to each of the next of kin until each of such next of kin is definitely ascertained, and it having been ordered by this Honorable Court the 1st day of July, 1941, that the said petition and the proceedings to be taken thereon shall be deemed a plenary proceeding within the meaning of Section 139 (T. 29, Sec. 61) of the Code of the District of Columbia, and there having been issued pursuant to said order the usual process of this Court commanding all the parties in interest in said estate as hereinafter set forth to appear in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, holding Probate Court, and answer the exigencies of the said petition, which said process has been duly returned "not to be found" as to the hereinafter named persons, and it having been shown by the petition of the administrator filed herein on the 27th day of June, 1941, that said hereinafter named persons are nonresidents of the District of Columbia, and it being probable that the unknown parties herein are also nonresidents of the District of Columbia, it is this 3rd day of September, A. D. 1941, ordered, adjudged and decreed that Robert and Eugene Whitfield, c/o Joseph S. Pola, Esq., Kalamazoo National Bank Building, Kalamazoo, Michigan; Charlie Whitfield, R. 1 Box 102, Weimer, Texas; Chester A. Listen! with Glynn

From the field headquarters of the Second Army, "Somewhere in Louisiana," this week, C. B. S's and WJSV's John Charles Daly broadcast a military trick that may easily turn out to be the neatest of the entire war maneuvers.

The Second Army's radio public relations unit—designed merely to aid radio broadcasters, but certainly not meant to be a combat outfit—did what it wasn't supposed to do and "captured" radio station KALB in Alexandria, La. After the capture, the station's regular programs followed one another in orderly succession—with one exception. The unit's men, all employed in radio in civilian life, slyly substituted for the regular station personnel. Then, at a strategic moment, Capt. Barney Oldfield went on the air with a little traffic resume, supposedly for civilian motorists in the Army-clogged roads. The captain warned cars of certain roads leading into Alexandria from the north. Those highways were, he said, fairly choked with tanks, trucks and artillery.

Of course the Third Army was listening in and instantly assumed that such a force moving on Alexandria meant that it was to be the jumping off place for a major assault. They rushed troops and planes to break it up.

But in doing so they left unattended a stretch of river bank nearby. The Second Army threw pontoons across and moved, unattacked, into the Third Army territory.

The Post Radio Highlights

WRC, 10 a. m.—Hollywood's Ida Lupino, who would rather play character roles than ingenues, appears on the "Lincoln Highway" drama this morning. Her vehicle, "A Girl's Reputation," an original radio drama, is said to be right down Miss Lupino's alley.

WOL, 8:30—Ezio Pinza, leading basso at the Metropolitan, is the guest-star on the "America Preferred" hour—with the orchestra under Alfred Wallenstein's baton, and the narration by Deems Taylor. Pinza sings Verdi's "Il Lacerato Spirito," and Tosti's "L'Ultima Canzone."

WMAL, 8:30—Fritz Kitzinger, young pianist-conductor, leads the orchestra in the semifinal broadcast of the N. B. C. Summer Symphony. The program: "Der Freischutz" overture, Beethoven's Second Symphony in D major, and a suite of six numbers from Offenbach's comic opera, "Robinson Crusoe."

Contract Bridge

"It has occurred to me that perhaps your Bridge Deck crew may be amused by a horrible experience I had the other night at our weekly 'family game.' At least, now that the first shock has abated, I find it extremely funny," so starts a letter telling of a strange fog that descended upon one of the players, influencing him to let his partner swing in a "cue" bid. The result was even odder in that the peculiar contract was made.

"It was the first hand of the evening and I picked up these cards:

Spades 10 3
Hearts A J 3
Diamonds None
Clubs K Q J 10 9 8 4 2

"Without hesitation, though perhaps unwisely, I opened with 'four clubs.' My partner after a pause, began the familiar Blackwood convention by responding 'four no-trump. With one ace, I naturally replied 'five diamonds.'

"And then it happened. My partner passed! Our opponents did likewise, and there I was with a five-diamond contract and not a diamond in my hand. What mental blackout caused my partner to leave me in such a contract I will never know; nor can he explain it yet.

"The best, however, is yet to come. He put down this hand:

♠ A K 6
♡ K 10 9 8
◇ K Q J 10 5 4
♣ None

"The ace of clubs was opened and trumped in dummy. The trumps broke four-three, and I came in with six-odd.

"All very hilarious, but I'll never be the same again."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Sorry, Bo, No U. S. O. — BY MILTON CANIFF

OOF!..COULDN'T THINK WHERE I WAS FOR A MINUTE!... LUCKY WE FOUND THIS OLD HOUSE ON THE PASS...SO WE CAN AMBUSH OLD JUDAS IN THE MORNING!... WHERE'S DUDE?
...HOPE RAVEN AND DUDE AREN'T LETTING ME SLEEP WHILE THEY WORRY ABOUT THE FIGHT WE'LL HAVE WITH JUDAS AND HIS GANG.....
GEE...I WONDER HOW OLD A GUY HAS TO BE TO HAVE WOMEN WORRY ABOUT BUILDING UP HIS MORALE BEFORE A BATTLE?
MILTON CANIFF

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

REMEMBER, TOM--CONNIE IS ONLY TRYING TO MAKE YOU JEALOUS WITH THAT KLEEK FELLOW! SHE'S WAITING FOR YOU TO SHOW A LITTLE SPUNK!
OKAY, MRS. WORTH! SHE'LL NOT HAVE TO WAIT ANY LONGER!
CONNIE! I'M CALLING ON YOU TONIGHT! I HEAR THERE'S A DANCE AT...
I'M SORRY, MR. KANE --I HAVE ANOTHER ENGAGEMENT, WITH LEW KLEEK!
CANCEL IT! BECAUSE I'LL BE OUT AROUND EIGHT!
MR. KANE! PAYING MY SALARY ONLY ENTITLES YOU TO GIVE ME ORDERS DURING THE DAY! MY PRIVATE LIFE IS MY OWN! IS THAT CLEAR NOW?
DINGBAT, YOU CAN TAKE MY WORD FOR IT--- WOMEN DON'T UNDERSTAND WOMEN ANY BETTER THAN MEN DO!
DALE

MICKEY FINN — Doubts! — BY LANK LEONARD

MR. AND MRS. — In Again, Out Again, Away Again — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

WELL, APPARENTLY YOU DIDN'T ENJOY YOUR LITTLE TEET-DE-TEET WITH ANDY'S FRIENDS!
I DIDN'T, UNCLE PHIL! I-I FELT LIKE A FISH OUT OF WATER!
I KNEW YOU WOULD! LARRY KING TOLD ME WHO THAT GUY, CUTTING, IS--AND HOW MUCH MONEY HE'S GOT! YOU JUST STUCK YOUR NECK OUT BY GOING!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
I MEAN THIS GUY, ANDY, JUST INVITED YOU OVER THERE TO SHOW YOU UP IN FRONT OF KITTY! I'LL BET HE WAS PERFECTLY AT EASE!
HE WAS--GOSH--I-I WONDER--KITTY WAS AWFUL QUIET COMIN' HOME!

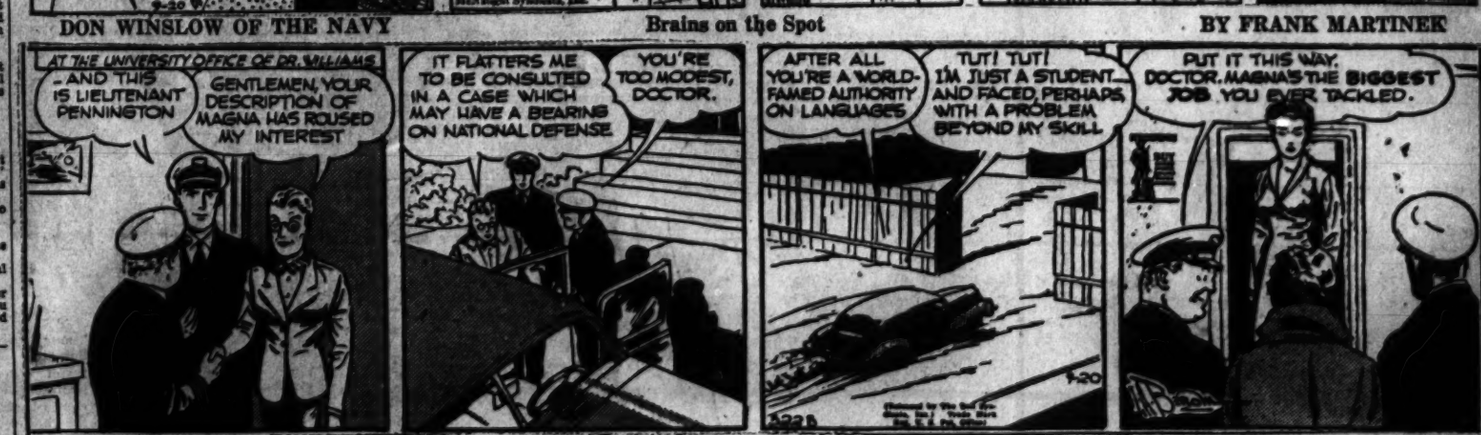
DIXIE DUGAN — Suspense — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

MY STOMACH FEELS SORT OF UPSET
WHY NOT GO INTO THE NEXT DRUG STORE AND GET SOMETHING TO SETTLE IT?
GOOD IDEA. HERE'S A DRUGSTORE NOW
TAKE YOUR TIME
DRUGS
WHY SO QUICK? DID YOU CHANGE YOUR MIND?
COULDN'T STAND THE AROMA OF HOT CHOW MEIN AND KIDNEY PIE--THE DRUGSTORE SPECIALS

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Brains on the Spot — BY FRANK MARTINEK

YES, HE'S HERE--AT MY HOME! YOU CAN ALL GO TO SLEEP NOW!
RAY! THANKS FOR CALLIN', DIXIE!
SEE YOU LATER!
WILL MICKEY BE GLAD!
MISTER--YOU HAVE A GREAT SENSE OF HUMOR--I'M GLAD YOU DIDN'T LEAVE THIS TOWN IN A HUFF--BESIDES I HAVE SOME HOPEFUL PLANS AFOOT--
NOW THAT YOU MENTION IT, DIXIE--I HAVE, TOO--
I HAVE AN AWFULLY IMPORTANT REASON FOR WANTING TO STAY OVER--A PERSONAL ONE--AND I WANT YOU TO HELP ME
HE'S IN LOVE WITH MICKEY! I KNOW IT! I JUST KNOW IT!
I'LL TELL YOU ABOUT IT TOMORROW--SMACK
WHY NOT TONIGHT? (CLUB)
I'D RATHER TOMORROW SMACK
AW--TELL ME TONIGHT! (CLUB)
NOPE--TOMORROW
WHY--O-WHY DID HE HAVE TO START SOMETHING AND NOT FINISH IT?! NOW I CAN'T SLEEP!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON



AT THE UNIVERSITY OFFICE OF DR. WILLIAMS
...AND THIS IS LIEUTENANT PENNINGTON
GENTLEMEN, YOUR DESCRIPTION OF MAGNA HAS ROUSED MY INTEREST
IT FLATTERS ME TO BE CONSULTED IN A CASE WHICH MAY HAVE A BEARING ON NATIONAL DEFENSE
YOU'RE TOO MODEST, DOCTOR.
AFTER ALL, YOU'RE A WORLD-FAMED AUTHORITY ON LANGUAGES
TUT! TUT! I'M JUST A STUDENT--AND FACED, PERHAPS, WITH A PROBLEM BEYOND MY SKILL PUT IT THIS WAY, DOCTOR, MAGNA'S THE BIGGEST JOB YOU EVER TACKLED.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

THEN, THE ONLY REASON YOU'VE KEPT ME AT CAPE SHAD WAS THE FEAR I WAS SPYING ON YOU, VIC?
NO, MINNIE! MY SMUGGLING OF INDUSTRIAL DIAMONDS WAS A PATRIOTIC JOB, I HAD TO SAFEGUARD IT!
BUT I'D HAVE WELCOMED YOUR COMPANY IF I HAD KNOWN YOU WERE A SPY--BECAUSE--WELL--YOU'RE THE SWELLEST KID I EVER MET, PRINCESS!
I'M GLAD YOU FEEL THAT WAY, VIC--I--LIKE YOU, TOO--BUT I'M LEAVING TONIGHT--GOING BACK TO WAHOO AND STEVE IN WASHINGTON!
AHEM!--SORRY TO CAPSIZE YER CRAFT, PRINCESS!
BUT I PHONED WASHINGTON A BIT AGO, AN' THIS TIME IT'S TRUE!--YER PALS HAVE VANISHED WITHOUT A TRACE!
LEAD US AGAINST THE OIL-MEN, ITU! THEY DRIVE AWAY THE GAME AND SOON WE DIE OF HUNGER!
NO, MY PEOPLE! THEY ARE STRONG WITH FIREARMS, BUT I AM STRONG WITH SKILL AND CUNNING!
ALONE, I SHALL KILL THE HOUNTIE, AND PETROL NELLO! WITHOUT LEADERS, THE OIL-MEN WILL GO FROM THE ARCTIC AND LEAVE US IN PEACE!
